CARRIZAL A SECOND ALAMO

ILLINOIS CAMP MELTING POT OF STATE'S YOUTH

Laborer and Banker, Artist and Cook Molding Into Earnest Soldier.

DEFI TO MR. CARRANZA

BY SIDNEY WILLIS.
[STAFF CORRESPONDENT OF THE TRIBUNE.]

Springfield, Ill., June 24.—Twelve thousand Illinois young men have come here, including the arrivals today, to meet the common denominator—self-preservation.

There is a sort of a gospel in the air now that the business in hand is understood. The stir of assembling to arms has given way to orderly effort. The adieux of relatives, for the greater part, have faded in the distance and there is the clatter of earnestness.

There is no glamour. No one is out for a lark. There is no meaningless swagger in the khaki. The whole affair is dominated by a spirit of real democracy.

A STUDY IN CONTRASTS.

A whale of a man stood before a group of civilians at the campground this afternoon with tears, unashamed, on his cheeks. He said, with his big man's voice:

"This is a sight that restores my faith in the ultimate destiny of the human race.

"Look at 'em—12,000 of Illinois' sons, millionaires and menials, farmer lads and city sports, skylarkin' around here as if they were out on a picnic. And down in his heart every blessed one of 'em knows that a few days may bring the message that will send 'em down to war and death.

"Look at them sunburned fellers over there! I'll bet they were milk white clerks or something in Chicago last week. Maybe some of 'em were boozers or midnight sports, whose friends thought they'd come to no end less than the insane asylum or getting shot by a chorus girl. Now they're men already."

SUBJECTS FOR BRONZE.

It is only the mobilization of the militia; that is true. The boy was a clerk at Marshall Field's or a waiter in Weeghman's; he was a tennis champion, a football hero of umpty something, or the club haunting son of the rich Mr. Well Known of the Lake Shore drive.

But the cross section of him that is derived by putting him in uniform has raised him to an estimable proportion that would not look bad in bronze in the public park.

There are two camps in which the Illinois militia is now practically mobilized, except for the equipment and horses which the war department has promised, but failed thus far to deliver. At Camp Lincoln and at Camp Dunne the men of farm, forge, counter, cage, sport, and leisure are being made into fists with which the government presently may find it necessary to knock some one down.

FIRST CAVALRY BUSY.

Here is the First cavalry—first to encamp and, according to Col. Milton J. Foreman, first in everything else. It is pitched under the grove at Camp Lincoln. The men in the few days they have been here have burned almost as brown as their uniforms. If you knew the personnel of this regiment you would know that many of the boys are men with private ambitions which they have left behind temporarily to serve the colors.

One man—L. H. Stadler of 1549 Barry avenue, who is cook for Troop C and a serious sort of a man—told me rather sadly that he supposed he was more of a father than any man in the regiment. He had a slightly German accent.

"I have been worrying a lot," he said. "I have four children—more than any one in the regiment. The oldest he is 6 years old. And a wife. I have been looking for THE TRIBUNE to tell this to for several days. I work

MANIAC ATTACKS PORCH SLEEPERS

Threatens Girl with Knife and Beats Man and Wife with Brick.

The work of a maniac was seen by the Fiftieth street police in two unusual attacks made early yesterday upon Attorney Louis Zimmerman and his wife, Elsie, as they slept on the rear porch of their home, 656 East Fifty-first street, and upon Miss Gladys Shea, 19 years old, at her home, 5233 Calumet avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Zimmerman, as a result of their injuries are in the Michael Reese hospital. They were severely cut and beaten with a brick by the supposed madman after he had broken open a screen door to their rear sleeping porch.

Descriptions Alike.

Descriptions given of the assailant at each home are alike and a search is being prosecuted for him by the police.

The attack upon Mr. Zimmerman and his wife was committed about 2 o'clock in the morning. Both were made partly unconscious by blows with the brick.

The attack upon Miss Shea, who is a stenographer for Armour & Co., was made probably half an hour prior to the assault upon the Zimmermans. It is believed that the supposed maniac after being frightened away went directly to the Zimmerman house, which is only a few blocks away.

Feels Hand at Throat.

Miss Shea was awakened by a man's hand at her throat. As she opened her eyes he clutched her by the throat, preventing her from making an outcry, held a long knife before her, and bending over whispered he would kill her if she screamed. The girl, despite his threat and the tight hold on her throat, tried to cry out, then, wrenching herself free, she screamed loudly.

MEXICO LEADER DECLARES WAR

Gen. Nafarrette Asserts All Armed Americans Below Border Must Die.

Brownsville, Tex., June 24.—Circulars were distributed in Matamoros, opposite here, today declaring that the latest crossing into Mexico of American troops near here has been construed as a declaration of war against Mexico on the part of the United Stataes.

The circulars are signed by Gen. E. P. Nafarrette, commander of Mexican forces in the state of Tamaulipas. The circulars, dated June 17, declare a state of war exists between the two countries.

The circulars declare all Americans found in Mexico with arms will be executed, but Americans pursuing peaceful occupations south of the Rio Grande and who are not armed would be protected.

Evacuate Nuevo Laredo?

Laredo, Tex., June 24.—All Mexican military equipment, including cavalry horses, were loaded into box cars in Nuevo Laredo tonight, and there was every indication the garrison would leave for the south during the night. The streets of the Mexican town were practically deserted at 8 o'clock, when the international bridge was closed.

DENTIST ON WAY TO WIFE IS CRUSHED TO DEATH.

Dr. Frank H. Stafford Caught Between Rear End of Street Car and Motor on Loop Corner.

As he hurried out of the Masonic temple yesterday afternoon on his way to join his wife and child at a summer resort, Dr. Frank H. Stafford, a well known dentist, was caught between the rear end of a street car as it rounded the corner, and an automobile truck, and was fatally crushed. He died fifteen minutes later in the offices of Dr. C. S. Eldridge in room 411, Bay State building, where he had been carried by policemen and bystanders.

At the time of the accident the street was thronged. Many hundreds witnessed the accident.

Accompanying Dr. Stafford was his office assistant and sister-in-law, Miss Adeline Kreuger of 1969 Evergreen avenue, who was going with him to visit his family at Fox Lake for the week end.

WAGE NEW BATTLE IN MEXICO, BORDER FEARS

El Paso, Tex., June 24.—Apprehension that battles may be in progress tonight between American and Mexican troops in at least two places in northern Chihuahua gripped the border tonight.

American columns were moving in the direction of San Antonio and Ojo Caliente while Gen. Jacinto Trevino, commanding the Carranza army of the north, has ordered troops at adjacent points to attack them if they do not retreat immediately.

BATTLE BEING WAGED?

While information concerning these movements reached here today from Chihuahua City, additional advices indicated that Gen. Trevino's scouts reported the approach of the Americans yesterday and that his orders were issued immediately. With a lapse of twenty-four hours it is assumed here that it is probable the opposing forces may have met.

Little was known here tonight regarding the strength of the American columns or their mission, but it was assumed on of them might be a detachment sent by Gen. Pershing to rescue the survivors o the Tenth cavalry engaged at Carrizal.

MAY BE SURVIVORS.

Army officers here also pointed out that the column headed for Ojo Caliente, about thirty miles southwest of Carrizal, probably is composed of the troops surviving the engagement there and the two squadrons of the Eleventh cavalry sent to reinforce them. Mexican authorities content themselves with asserting that the strength of the commands dispatched to meet them is adequate.

It is believed here that the American command advancing in the direction of San Antonio, fifty miles southeast of Namiquipa, may be in pursuit of bandits.

PROTECTION FOR TROOPS.

While the lack of definite information begets apprehension, military men point out that Gen. Pershing, with Gen. Trevino's threats and the Carrizal fight before him, undoubtedly has taken steps to protect detachments he has sent out, and that preparations have been made to reenforce the American columns if necessary.

A suggestion that the Carrizal fight was only an incident of what was planned to be a general attack upon the American expeditionary command was received here late today from Gen. Pershing's headquarters. The reports pointed out that only the palpable strength of the Americans deterred the Carrancistas.

MEXICAN TROOPS REDISPOSED.

Support is lent to this belief by the redisposition early in the week of all of the Carranza troops in western Chihuahua.

Military authorities here who are inclined to place some credence in the reports, pointed out that at that time the semi-circular line of the Mexicans, which had stretched around Gen. Pershing's command for some weeks, began to close in, evincing a distinctly hostile attitude.

However, Gen. Pershing redisposed his troops, offsetting the Carranza movement, presenting to them a compact, prepared, fighting unit.

The accepted belief is that Mexican leaders realized they could not hope, under such circumstances, to cope with the Americans and abandoned the general plan.

Gen. Felix Gomez, at Carrizal, however, in command of one section of the proposed advance, carried out what is believed to have been one of the prearranged details.

AMY LESLIE GRANTED A DIVORCE FROM F. H. BUCK.

Romance of Virginia Hotel Elevator Boy Ends in Smashup in San Francisco Court.

A romance of a Chicago hotel elevator had its final curtain in a San Francisco court yesterday when a decree of divorce was given Frank H. Buck against Mrs. Amy Leslie Buck.

Buck was an elevator boy in the Virginia hotel. Mrs. Buck, then Amy Leslie, the actress, was a guest in the hotel and twenty years the senior of the elevator boy. But there was fascination for the eyes of each and soon followed a wedding.

They parted about two years ago, Buck going west. He brought suit for divorce last fall, charging Mrs. Buck with cruelty, nagging, and making him the subject of humiliating scenes about public places.

Mrs. Buck filed an answer to the suit, but was not represented. She resides in Austin, but was not at home last evening.

'FREE PRISONERS,' U.S.TO CARRANZA

Wilson Soon May Send Ultimatum and Break Off Relations with Mexico.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

Washington, D. C., June 24.—[Special.]—The administration today dispatched to the Carranza government a demand for the immediate release of the members of the Tenth cavalry, captured at the fight at Carrizal and now in prison at Chihuahua City.

This action was taken on the request of Gen. Funston, made in a telegram from San Antonio.

After a conference at the state department, Ambassador Designate Arredondo, Carranza representative here, said that his government probably would arrange for the release of the men, "if there were no further battles."

Will Force Carranza's Hand.

If the full report from Gen. Funston on the Carrizal massacre bears out the stories that the attack was made at the orders of Gen. Carranza or any responsible Mexican government official, an ultimatum will be dispatched demanding that Carranza immediately disavow the attack and punish those responsible for it. The text of the ultimatum already is prepared.

If Carranza fails to repudiate the massacre of the American troopers, the president will face the question of deciding whether he will make good his threat to employ force against the de facto government to obtain protection for Americans and American property along the border.

Baker May Have Report.

The report for which the president is awaiting already may be in the hands of Secretary of War Baker. This is the message from Funston carrying the report of Gen. Funston and giving the stories told by the survivors of the battle.

Immediately on receipt of the Funston dispatch Secretary Baker went to the White House, where he conferred with the president from 11 to 11:30 o'clock.

At the conclusion of his conference which he said was for the sole purpose of acquainting the president with the new story of the fight, Secretary Baker gave the dispatch to the press. He insisted no course of action with respect to Carranza had been decided at the conference.

U. S. TROOPERS, HELD IN TRAP, FIGHT TO END

Battle Goes On Against Heavy Odds After the Leaders Fall.

RELIEF FORCES SENT.

BULLETIN.

Mexico City, June 24.—The governor of Chihuahua reports to the government that Capt. Morey was among the killed at Carrizal.

San Antonio, Tex., June 24.—[Special.]—Gen. Frederick Funston tonight received from Gen. Pershing the first detailed official report of the battle at Carrizal. The report, told in direct, soldierly words, without "high lights," reveals a tale of daring by the Negro troopers of the Tenth cavalry which scarcely could be duplicated by war fiction writers.

Like the Texans on the Alamo, Pershing's men fought to the last against terrific odds.

Trapped in an ambush during a parley of the leaders, troops C and K were subjected to a withering fire from machine guns and the rifles of a Carranza force which outnumbered them greatly.

CHARGE ON GREATER FORCE.

Both companies charged forward. In the face of the murderous fire Troop C reached the trenches where the main Mexican force was in refuge. There Capt. Boyd, twice wounded, fell. Troop C, led by the second in command, Lieut. Harry Adair, swept onward, driving the Mexicans before them through the town. This was the last seen of them by the men who reported to Pershing, but their stories indicate few escaped.

As Troop K went forward, under the leadership of Capt. Morey, they were outflanked by a great number of Mexicans and forced to take refuge in an adobe house, from which they had driven a detachment of the Mexicans.

When the men who brought the story to Pershing left the field, Morey's men still were making a stand against the hundreds of Mexicans who were surrounding the building and pouring a steady stream of bullets at every opening. Whether Capt. Morey, wounded in the first charge, reached this shelter is not known.

RELIEF FORCES ARE SENT.

The Pershing report shows that, in spite of the warning that any troop movement means an attack by the Mexicans, he has dispatched two United States relief forces to the aid of Morey's men.

One of these, under Maj. John M. Jenkins, may have reached Carrizal in time for the relief. One day behind Jenkins and pressing hard to overtake and aid him is the second squadron under Maj. Robert L. Howze, the man who made "the ride" and defeated and dispersed Villa's band some weeks ago.

Gen. Pershing has sent provisions and supplies for the wounded to meet Majors Jenkins and Howze on their return march toward Colonia Dublan.

COURIER CARRIES NEWS.

The detailed news from Carrizal came to Gen. Pershing by courier from Maj. Jenkins, who announced that he had found five members of C troop and one of K troop at San Luis ranch. They were horse holders, as were the other stragglers who have reported. They did not see the finish of the fight, but their stories, according to Maj. Jenkins' courier, confirmed the fact that the attack had been opened by the Mexican troops without provocation.

Gen. Pershing said in his report that he did not believe that the thirty-seven men still unaccounted for had been captured. This was taken here to mean that he feared Capt. Morey's men had not been able to hold out against the overwhelming odds against them even from the shelter of the house in which they had taken refuge.

CAPTURE MACHINE GUNS.

According to the five men found at San Luis ranch after the Mexicans had opened fire with several machine guns

MOBS JEER AMERICAN PRISONERS MARCHED THROUGH CHIHUAHUA STREETS

Capt. Boyd dismounted his men and formed them in line of skirmishers.

Capt. Boyd with C troop led the left and Capt. Morey with K troop the right. They advanced by rushes toward the irrigating ditch, 250 yards distant, which sheltered the main force of Mexican troops, and from which the machine gun was spraying the American ranks with lead.

Making every shot of their own count, the Negroes captured the ditch with one final wild rush, putting the Mexicans to flight and capturing several machine guns, before reinforcements overwhelmed them.

STORY OF A CORPORAL

Field Headquarters, June 24.—[Via Wireless to Columbus, N. M.]—Trapped and fighting against heavy odds, the troops of the Tenth cavalry engaged at Carrizal on Wednesday charged twice directly into the jaws of the ambush which the Mexicans had laid for them.

With bullets in his arm and shoulder, Capt. Charles T. Boyd, the commander, remained in the saddle leading his Negro troopers until they had captured the concealed Mexican machine gun trench, when he fell mortally wounded with a bullet in the eye.

This was the gist of the first detailed account of the engagement from American sources which was brought to Gen. Pershing today by Corporal Green of Troop C, who was at Capt. Boyd's side until he fell.

TROOP ALMOST SURROUNDED.

The Americans were flanked on both sides by the Carrancistas, who had partly surrounded the little command during a conference between Gen. Felix Gomez, the Mexican leader, and Capt. Boyd.

In front was a concealed Mexican machine gun trench, from which a stream of leaden death unexpectedly was poured into the American ranks.

Corporal Green said that Capt. Boyd, although wounded in the arm and shoulder by the first fire, immediately gave the order to charge, and the detachment rode at top speed, in a hail of bullets, directly at the trench, capturing it just as the American leader fell. The Mexicans retreated to cover in a nearby adobe shack.

SECOND IN COMMAND KILLED.

Lieut. Henry Adair assumed command and ordered a second charge, which drove through the shack, scattering the Mexican command. Green said he did not see Lieut. Adair after this charge and believed that he lost his life in it.

Meanwhile, Capt. Lewis S. Morey, commanding K troop, which also was partly surrounded during the parley, occupied another adobe house with his men, from which he engaged a second detachment of the Mexicans.

While it is assumed here that Capt. Morey was wounded in the fight, neither Corporal Green nor any of the other survivors reaching here knew anything of the outcome of his part of the battle.

MAY BRING OTHERS IN.

It is believed here, however, that he may have collect the shattered remnants of the American command and is bringing them slowly, and through heartbreaking obstacles, to Gen. Pershing's lines.

The survivors arriving here said that the Carrancistas circled far around Carrizal after the engagement and overtook and captured a number of soldiers who had been holding horses back beyond sight of the battleground when the fight began.

Piecing together the fragmentary reports which have reached field headquarters, all except twenty-one of the eighty-four men engaged in the fight have been accounted for. These reports indicate that thirteen were killed, seventeen take prisoner, and thirty-three have come into camp here in the last two days, most of them coming afoot over a blistering desert suffering the greatest hardships from lack of water.

[News dispatches from Chihuahua City yesterday indicated that with the capture of five additional prisoners the captives in the hands of the Carrancistas now number twenty-two, leaving sixteen of the men engaged at Carrizal unaccounted for.]

STONES HURLED AT TROOPERS IN UNDERCLOTHING

Stripped of Uniforms by Mexican Captors in Carrizal Massacre.

BY FLOYD P. GIBBONS.

El Paso, Tex., June 24.—[Special.]—The seventeen Negro troopers captured in the ambuscade at Carrizal were stripped of their uniforms and shoes upon their arrival at Chihuahua City and marched through the streets in their underclothing while a mob of Mexicans hurled stones and vile epithetc at them from the sidewalks.

This information was brought to El Paso today by a Mexican employed in the service in one of the federal departments. He left Chihuahua on the train which reached here this morning.

The expedition of the captives, some of them bearing wounds, was a gala occasion in Chihuahua, he said. The entire population of the city lined the streets through which the half nude prisoners were marched on their way to the penitentiary.

Flags, Banners and Songs.

Flags and banners waved from roofs and windows. Signs and posters proclaimed "death to the gringos." Troubadors, accompanied by street musicians, sang numberless vile verses of "La Cucaracha" in honor of the "great Mexican victory of Carrizal" and in ridicule of President Wilson and Gen. Pershing.

Venders sold statuettes of candy and wax depicting a Mexican soldier in triumphant pose with flags planted on the body of American soldiers.

Newsboys distributed copies of La Democrata, which declared in flaming headlines that the American punitive expedition, "discouraged by defeat," was hurriedly retreating northward with Trevino's forces in close pursuit.

Military Bands Blaring.

Military bands played in the plaza and paraded the streets behind the troops that guarded the handful of black Americans.

Agitators harangued the excited throngs on the corners and the more bitter their denunciations of the United States and all Americans the louder were the "vivas" with which the auditors responded.

Street urchins shouted at the captives, and, crooking their arms in a rifle firing position, indicated by unmistakable gestures that the Americans were to meet death before a firing squad. Others pointed to their necks, mimicked the tightening of a noose, and emitted strangling noises from their throats.

Denies Public Hanging.

The Mexican who brought the news declared that the people of Chihuahua are looking forward to a public execution of the captives. They are doomed to disappointment, however, according to a dispatch sent here by a British subject, the only remaining correspondent in Chihuahua. This man asked Gen. Trevino, Carranza commander, what was to be done with the Negroes.

"Mexico is a civilized country and will wage its warfare in a civilized manner," Gen. Trevino replied. "The prisoners have not been hanged, nor will they be."

Three White Men Captured.

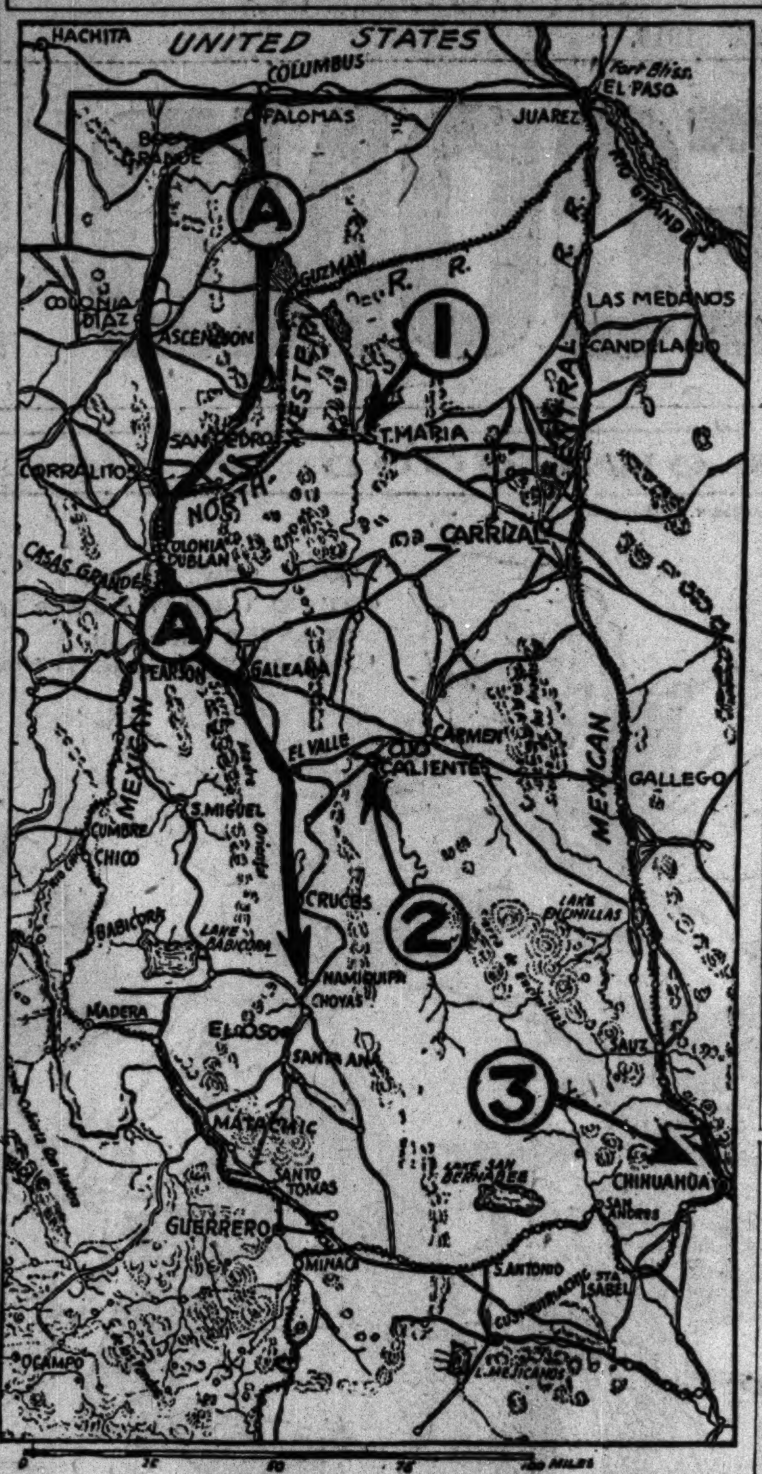
Washington, D. C., June 24.—The following dispatch was received at the war department tonight from Gen. Funston:

"A prominent Mexican who claims he saw the American prisoners at Chihuahua states he saw three white men and fourteen colored men. Bell was directed to call upon Consul Garcia at El Paso and request him to secure the names of all the American soldiers held prisoner. I will relieve the anxiety of many to know their names if it is possible to ascertain them."

BISHOP TO ASK ENLISTMENT.

Bishop Samuel Fallows of St. Paul's Reformed Episcopal church and chaplain of the Second infantry, I. N. G., will urge men to enlist from his pulpit today. Bishop Fallows has been prevented from joining his command because of the serious illness of his wife. He will go to Springfield tomorrow, however, for a little visit with "his boys."

DEVELOPMENTS IN MEXICO



1—Sixteen survivors of Carrizal fight, members of Troops C and K, Tenth cavalry, were picked up by relief column Saturday morning northwest of Santa Maria.

2—Reported American columns are advancing in direction of San Antonio and Ojo Caliente, and Gen. Jacinto Trevino has issued orders to attack them if they do not retreat immediately.

3—Seventeen members of Tenth cavalry taken prisoners at Carrizal fight stripped of their clothes, insulted, and locked in stockade in Chihuahua City.

IOWA CAPTAIN WANTS MEN OF COMPANY NOW IN JAIL.

Two Guardsmen Accused of Stealing Jewelry in Chicago Wanted for Company in Creston.

Casper Schmitz and Homer Clough may get their opportunity to go to war after all. Casper and Homer are now in the county jail, charged with stealing jewelry worth $3,800 from the Adams Express company.

Casper and Homer, each 22 years old formerly resided in Creston, Ia., where they were employed by the express company. Came a strike, and Casper and Homer were transferred to Chicago, there to work for the company as freight sorters. It is charged that they took the package of jewelry from the company's "valuable" room.

Sheriff Traeger yesterday received from Creston, Ia., a telegram from Capt. A. J. Horton asking that Casper and Homer be sent back to Union county, Iowa.

"If some one with proper credentials from the federal authorities comes for the boys, they won't be able to run away from him without deserting from the army and running a grave risk," said Chief Deputy Sheriff Charles W. Peters. "The Cook county authorities will be able to get the boys back when their periods of active service have ended."

"Bonfire Night" Tonight.

"Bonfire night," an ancient Irish festival, will be celebrated tonight in Gaelic park, Forty-seventh street and California avenue, with all the ancient rites. The affair will be staged by the leading Irish societies of Chicago.

MEXICAN CAPITAL SEES IN U. S. NOTE END OF FRICTION?

Carranza Officials Say Two Nations Are in Accord on Main Issue in Dispute.

Mexico City, June 24.—Secretary Lansing's statement to the Latin-American diplomats has caused an excellent impression here. It is now believed in official circles that the prospects for a peaceable solution of the present difficulties between the United States and Mexico are promising.

Officials received with satisfaction Secretary Lansing's statement that in the event of hostilities with Mexico the United States would content itself with resisting invasion and would not intervene in this country's affairs.

They said this was similar to the attitude of the Carrancista government which would not wage war but would content itself with resisting invasion.

Gen. Carranza's reply will not be completed for several days. Officials declare positively that no intimation of its contents will be permitted to be cabled or to be published here until after it is received and published in full in the United States.

OBREGON INVITES REBEL AID

Galveston, Tex., June 24.—Gen. Obregon has issued a proclamation offering complete amnesty to all who have opposed the present government, provided they join in resisting invasion by the United States, which he says is imminent.

JUAREZ PLANS TO WITHSTAND ATTACK BY U. S.

Troop Movements Indicate City Will Not Give Up Without a Fight.

El Paso, Tex., June 24.—News from Juarez has caused well informed Americans here to give up the belief that Juarez, in event of a break, would be evacuated without a fight.

That Gen. Gonzales and his staff are still in Juarez and the town garrison is being maintained, reports of Mexican troop movements in the outlying districts, and apparently increased precautions on the American side are cited as confirmatory of the theory.

Further authentic information from Juarez today indicated continued preparation, especially the departure of a contingent of volunteers for the south.

Noncombatants Come to U. S.

A train of eighteen cars, carrying 150 noncombatants, mostly women and children, and some old men, arrived today under an infantry guard of twenty-two soldiers from Chihuahua City. The passengers crossed to the American side, apparently preferring to take their chances here.

Two trains left Juarez. One of five cars, filled with provisions and three passenger coaches, was bound for Casas Grandes. The other consisted of thirty-seven cars and carried volunteeres and their baggage to Chihuahua City, to go into military training.

Seize McQuatters' Silver.

A. J. McQuatters, president of the Alvarado Mining company, received the following wire yesterday from the superintendent of mines at Parral:

"The Jefe de Las Armas of Parral has just presented a telegraphic order from the governor of Chihuahua and has seized $250,000 worth of silver bullion. The silver has been removed from the mine."

McQuatters may be remembered as one of the most sanguine participants of the El Paso conference between Gens. Scott, Funston, and Obregon. McQuatters was called into the conference at the request of both Gen. Scott and Gen. Obregon.

His relations with the Carranza authorities and his friendliness with administration advisers at Washington made him acceptable to both sides. The seizure of property belonging to McQuatters surprised many in El Paso, who were of the belief that McQuatters' relations with the de facto government were so strong that he above all others would receive protection.

Appeals for Troop Aid.

Douglas, Ariz., June 24.—Numerous appeals for troops to protect settlements and ranches along the Arizona border were received today by Gen. T. F. Davis, commanding the Arizona military district.

Delegations of city officials of Douglas and Bisbee and representatives of public utilities called in person, telegrams were received from Gov. Hunt, and from residents of towns near the international line and many letters brought a like request.

However, the appeals were of no avail, as Gen. Davis stated he could not comply with them in view of the comparatively small number of soldiers at present under his command.

Mexicans Menace U. S. Lines.

Columbus, N. M., June 24.—Several thousand Carrancista troops were tonight reported massing back of Carretas pass, commanding the American communication lines north of Dublan, Mexico.

Six Latin-American Nations Offer Services to Avert War

Mexico City, June 24.—The governments of six nations have sent telegrams of sympathy to Mexico and have offered their good offices toward effecting an amicable arrangement of the difficulties between Mexico and the United States.

Foreign Minister Aguilar made this announcement today, stating that messages of this purport had been received by him from the governments of Chile, Argentina, Ecuador, Salvador, Honduras, and Spain.

The foreign minister stated that he had answered these messages, thanking the governments named for their courtesy and good wishes.

Patch Up Differences.

Foreign Minister Aguilar stated today that friendly relations with Guatemala had been resumed, President Cabrera of Guatemala having appointed Dr. Stickel the diplomatic agent of the Guatemalan government here, while Salvador Martinez Alomia had been named Mexican representative to Guatemala.

President Cabrera, said the Mexican foreign minister, had telegraphed Dr. Sickel requesting him to assure the Mexican government that Guatemala would not attempt to interfere in Mexican internal affairs and that the friendly relations between the two nations, interrupted for a time, will be strengthened in the future.

Off for Peace Parley.

New York, June 24.—Gonzalo S. Cordova, minister from Ecuador to the United States, announced through his secretary tonight that he would leave for Washington late tonight or early tomorrow to confer with other South American diplomats in an effort to bring about mediation between the United States and Mexico.

Dr. Cordova said he had received instructions from Señor R. H. Elizalde, the foreign minister of Ecuador, directing him to confer with the other diplomats and stating he had sent messages to the foreign ministers of all Latin American countries urging them to direct their representatives at Washington to use their good offices in an effort to avert a conflict.

Salvador for Peace.

SAN SALVADOR, Salvador, June 24.—The foreign office received today a cablegram from the government of Ecuador urging all Latin-American governments to take common action to avert war between the United States and Mexico. The government replied immediately, approving the initiative of Ecuador.

The Salvadorean government cabled instructions to Rafael Salvidar, minister at Washington, to propose mutual action on the part of the diplomatic representatives of Central and South American republics in an effort to prevent hostilities.

Chile Awaits Replies.

SANTIAGO, Chile, June 24.—The Chilean government, it was learned today, expects to await answers from the nations it has consulted regarding the possibility of intervention by all the American nations to bring about a peaceful solution of the Mexican situation before taking further steps in the matter.

Nothing for U. S. to Mediate.

Washington, D. C., June 24.—News that some of the South and Central American republics were preparing to initiate offers of mediation in the crisis between the United States and Mexico drew from high officials here today a strong intimation that the United States, engaged only in protecting its people and territory, considered there was nothing to mediate, so far as the policy of this government was concerned.

Although Ecuador and Salvador have authorized their ministers to confer with their colleagues on the subject, the state department does not expect any immediate overtures from the body of Latin-American diplomats.

It is understood that Ambassador Naon of Argentina, who came here from New York yesterday seeking information, telegraphed his government that nothing could be done at this time toward initiating mediation. He has proposed to the American government the establishment of a police zone along the Mexican border to prevent further raids and as a possible preventive of war.

HENRY FORD DENIES EMPLOYES WILL LOSE JOBS IF THEY ENLIST

Detroit, Mich., June 24.—[Special.]—Henry Ford today denied the statements which have gained wide circulation that men who enlisted from his plant would be classified as new applicants for places with him upon their return.

"I have made no such statement," Mr. Ford said today. "Only one in every thousand of our employés belong to the militia now—to be exact, 37 out of 33,000 men, and when they come back it certainly will be without prejudice.

"Anything that President Wilson calls upon me to do I will gladly do. I speak of him merely as president of all the people. I would do the same if Mr. Hughes or any other man were president."

This is Mr. Ford's first statement on the war subject. An unofficial mouthpiece has hitherto done the talking, and his statement that Mr. Ford would not reëmploy any guardsmen is apparently repudiated now by Mr. Ford himself. There has been no statement from Mr. Ford to show that he has any intention of continuing the pay of men who go to the front.

WILSON SEES WAR MOVIES.

Hears Audience Cheer U. S. Troops and Hiss Carranza at Keith's Theater.

Washington, D. C., June 24.—[Special.]—President Wilson attended Keith's theater tonight. Each mention of the American troops brought ringing applause and when Gen. Funston's picture was flashed on the screen the audience stood up and chered vociferously. Hisses and catcalls greeted the picture of Carranza.

POPE ASKS SPAIN TO INTERVENE IN U. S.-MEXICO ROW

Discusses Possibility of King Alfonso as Mediator—No Chance at This Time.

BY JOHN M. HEARLEY.

[UNITED PRESS STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

ROME, June 24.—Pope Benedict held a lengthy conference today with the Spanish ambassador. It is reported that he discussed the advisability of asking King Alfonso of Spain to mediate between the United States and Mexico.

His holiness views with the greatest regret the possibility of war between the two American republics.

Looks to U. S. as Peace Champion.

The pope, since the beginning of the European war, has looked to the United States as the power most likely to take an effective step for peace in Europe at the proper time and to invoke respect for international law and the laws of humanity and all belligerents. He believes the United States would find it difficult to make a move for European peace while itself at war with Mexico.

The pope's advisers have told him that the king of Spain probably would prove acceptable to the United States if the American government was willing to consider mediation.

Pope to Appeal to Wilson.

LONDON, June 24.—Pope Benedict will appeal to President Wilson and Gen. Carranza in an earnest endeavor to avoid war, said a Rome dispatch circulated by the wireless news agency today.

FORM BATTERY IN DANVILLE.

Capt. Curtis Redden, Former Michigan Football Star, Recruits 155 Men.

Springfield, Ill., June 24.—Adj. Gen. Dickson was informed today that Capt. Curtis Redden, retired, former star end on the University of Michigan eleven, has organized a battery of 155 men in two days at Danville, Ill. Lieut. Louis Dougherty, United States army inspector, has been ordered to Danville to inspect the battery.

ASKS DUNNE FOR RIGHT TO FORM NEW REGIMENT.

Haeman Waiss, Former Cavalryman, Wants to Organize Provisional Body on West Side.

A letter to Gov. Dunne asking his permission to organize a provisional regiment for the Illinois national guard to be recruited from the west side of Chicago was sent to the governor last night by Haeman Waiss, 3224 Douglas boulevard, former member of the Sixth regiment, U. S. C.

The letter follows:

"June 24, 1916.—The Hon. Edward F. Dunne, Governor of Illinois, Springfield, Ill.: I hereby tender my services and ask your authorization to organize a provisional regiment to be recruited from the west side of the city of Chicago.

"Have served in United States cavalry, Sixth regiment, from 1888 to 1891, and am holding captain's commission from McGrath's provisional regiment of Illinois, organized during the Spanish-American war.

"I am, sir, your obedient servant,
"HAEMAN WAISS,

WE MUST MAINTAIN ORDER, PROTECT BORDER, TAFT SAYS

Plainfield, N. J., June 24.—[Special.]—The duty of the United States in Mexico is clear, former President Taft said in an address to a chautauqua audience here tonight on "Our World Relationships." This duty is to go on. While deploring the possibility of war, which he said would be long and attended with great loss of life, Mr. Taft said, "We must maintain the honor of our country; we must protect our border."

12,000 SONS OF ILLINOIS SLEPT ON ARMS LAST NIGHT AWAITING BORDER CALL

STATE TROOPS ALL IN CAMP; GUNS ARRIVE

"On to Border" Will Be Most Welcome News to the Guardsmen.

BY CAPT. E. O. PHILLIPS.

Springfield, Ill., June 24.—[Special.]—Illinois has answered President Wilson's call. Its organized militia is mobilized and ready for the representatives of the federal government to proceed with the business of transforming the troops into an active fighting part of the United States forces.

The last contingent to arrive came into Camp Dunne at 2:40 o'clock this afternoon. When it had reached the Third infantry headquarters and reported, the first demand of the national government had been complied with by the state. Now it is up to the war department to go ahead with the 12,000 men who are here and make them over into a part of an army.

The war department's duty is to equip these men with uniforms, rifles, blankets, shelter tents, shoes, eating utensils, and a few other details of quartermaster supplies. While the supplies are coming in the regiments must be mustered as part of the federal service.

Ample Guns Arrive.

The first batch of freight from the government arsenals arrived this morning. Nobody at general headquarters had been apprised that the shipment from the Rock Island was on its way. The war department had said supplies would start automatically when mobilization was ordered, and it turned out to be correct. There was no bill of lading or inventory with the five cars, and nobody knows with the five cars, and nobody knew for a time what was in them—whether ammunition, uniforms, or blankets.

When the cars were opened there was found enough guns, ammunition, side arms, and other ordnance to arm all the troop here up to war strength. But uniforms are still needed to equip hundreds of men who enlisted during the last few days.

One-fourth Not Equipped.

Many of the companies that came in from downstate today brought dozens of recruits without a shred of uniform or equipment. Probably 3,000 men of the 12,000 estimated to be in camp are without anything that goes to make up a soldier's appearance.

The Third infantry, Col. Charles S. Greene of Aurora commanding; the Fourth infantry, Col. E. J. Lang, commanding, and the Eighth infantry, Col. Franklin Denison commanding, arrived in camp this morning. The Third assembled at Peoria and came into camp with band playing and colors flying. The Fourth came on five separate trains. There are nearly 1,300 men in the Third infantry.

JAIL OPENED TO HOLD MEN WHO DESERTED MILITIA.

Lieut. B. J. Dodd of Seventh Comes to Round Up Twelve Who Failed to Report.

Deserters from the national guard regiments or those who for any reason have failed to answer the call to the colors are facing jail bars in Chicago today.

Lieut. B. J. Dodd, with a detachment of twenty men from the Seventh regiment, came up from Springfield yesterday on a still hunt for deserters.

Ostensibly they are on a recruiting detail, but yesterday Lieut. Dodd called on Chief Healey and requested permission to use the city jails for the temporary imprisonment of any deserters found.

The permission was granted upon an opinion by Corporation Counsel Ettelson.

"We don't want to give out any names," said Lieut. Dodd. "About twelve men are missing. Some may have legitimate excuses for absence.

"But unless they have proper excuses they will be treated as deserters and locked up for disposition by the proper military authorities."

CONGRESSMAN TILSON OFF TO WAR; MAY QUIT HOUSE.

Leaves Status to Colleagues—First Member of Either Branch to Join the Colors.

Washington, D. C., June 24.—[Special.]—Congressman Tilson of Connecticut, who is lieutenant colonel of the Second Connecticut infantry in the national guard, today left Washington to join his command. Before going Mr. Tilson placed his case in the hands of the house.

"If the house decides," he said, "that it is unconstitutional for one of its members to serve in the national guard during a war, I shall surrender my membership and go with my command. If it decides otherwise, I shall ask for an indefinite leave of absence while I am in the field."

Mr. Tilson is the first one of a number of congressmen and senators to make the decision between service with the national guard and service in congress. Others are expected to follow shortly.

ILLINI SENDS CALL TO MEN.

Alumni and Students Asked to Enlist in Battery F.

Alumni and students of the University of Illinois, here is an appeal to you from patriotic members of your alma mater. The following telegram was sent to THE TRIBUNE last night, which reads:

"Men of the University of Illinois! You are wanted to enlist in Battery F. This battery is made up entirely of university men. We need you, and need you immediately.

"W. C. MCGUIRE, Battery F Clerk."

INFANTRY

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Springfield, Ill., June 24.—Everything was eagerness for the front among the soldiers of the Chicago regiments today as the United States army officers speeded up their work of mustering in the national guard regiments.

The arrival of the Eighth infantry from Chicago was a signal for an outburst of enthusiasm. The Negro regiment, considered the best trained soldiers in Chicago, came marching into camp with their band blaring away at ragtime tunes and the men shouting and laughing in eagerness to get into things.

FIRST INFANTRY

"All work and no play make "Jack a poor soldier," is the belief of Col. Joseph B. Sanborn, commanding the First infantry. With this in mind the colonel issued instructions to the officers of each company to allow the men certain "play" periods daily.

When the men heard the orders baseball teams were organized and several boxing matches were arranged. But the men ran into their first snag when it came to supplying themselves with boxing gloves and baseball equipment. They formed a committee and made a special request at the camp headquarters of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE that this fact be published, with the hope that some one at home might donate the equipment.

A captain of the machine gun company of the First is Carl Timmersman, who had a brief tryout with the White Sox. It is the plan of Timmersman to organize a baseball league among the six regiments at Camp Dunne. A boxing tournament is also being planned by several boxers who are enlisted in the First. Among them are Danny Goodman and Joe Boswell.

The machine gun company claims to have the most assorted bunch of men in the camp. The occupations of the men in the company range from "white wings" to doctors and lawyers, with prize fighters, sailors, students, and teachers mixed in.

The First infantry is quartered in the buildings known as the new horse barns, which have been rechristened Barracks No. 1.

SECOND INFANTRY

The Second infantry earned the honor title for speed when Capt. John Scheying, adjutant, came into headquarters with the muster rolls of the regiment filled out.

Capt. Scheying, with a staff of noncommissioned officers, worked until 3:30 a. m. filling out the blanks required by the army inspectors in order that the regiment might be prepared for immediate duty on the border.

Capt. Scheying, who lives at 4806 Kenmore avenue, Chicago, is a veteran of the Spanish-American war. When the call came for the guardsmen, both the captain and his son, Arthur L. Scheying, responded. The son, who is 21 years old, is a member of Battery D.

The Second regiment shares barracks No. 1 with the First infantry and are located on the main street of the ground. The chief pride of the Second infantry is its band, which is considered one of the best musical organizations in the camp. This morning while the troops which had just arrived were marching wearily to their quarters the Second infantry band stood in front of Col. John J. Garrity's headquarters and cheered them up with music. They played most of the morning.

Following mess 300 "rookies" in the Second infantry were taken out to the drill ground and given their first instruction on how to handle a gun. The regiment has in camp only 1,141 men, but recruiting officers in Chicago sent Col. Garrity word that they expected to have 350 more before Monday.

THIRD INFANTRY

Just before noon the Third infantry, considered one of the crack regiments of the state, arrived at Camp Dunne. Col. Charles H. Greene, commanding, had planned to show the other troops at Camp Dunne just what a "crack" regiment could do, despite the fact that they had been up all night.

They arrived in two sections, and when they had assembled just outside of the gates Col. Greene gave the word to march With the even swing of regulars the column of 1,350 men moved into the main street of the camp toward their quarters.

As they passed the various barracks the other troops broke into cheers. And the appearance of the downstate boys was deserving of applause.

Every man carried his gun like a veteran; every blanket roll was compact and properly adjusted, and no one was out of step. Just then the Second infantry struck up Sousa's "The Stars and Stripes Forever." And the whole camp cheered.

Big Sendoff at Home.

The Third regiment, made up entirely of downstate companies, was given one of the best "sendoffs" of any regiment in the state. Last night at Rockford, where the headquarters of the regimen are located, the whole town turned out The streets were decorated and every body cheered. It was the same in D Kalb, Aurora, Belvidere, Elgin, Kankakee, and other towns.

During the day the ministerial association of Rockford presented each man in the regiment with a small Bible. Then Maj. E. E. Leonard of the Second battalion, who was unable to decide just what to do about procuring a horse, received a letter containing a check from a man whose name he does not want to make public. The letter stated the check was to be used in buying a horse.

Rockford Fund Started.

Another example of the spirit shown by the citizens of Rockford in the way of encouraging the boys of the Third was the assurance of the Association of Commerce that a fund would be collected to take care of their families just as long as the soldiers were way.

Just before the regiment left a committee of workmen representing fifteen factories at Rockford called on Col. Greene and give him $250 worth of dimes. The dimes had been contributed by the 2,500 employés of the factories. The fund will buy a horse for the colonel.

Chaplain Nicholas B. Clinch was also presented a horse by the Elks club of Rockford.

FOURTH INFANTRY

Four downstate companies of Col. Edward J. Lang's Fourth infantry arrived at the mobilization camp this morning and went to their quarters in barracks No. 2. The companies are G of Effingham, H of Shelbyville, M of Champaign, L of Olney.

The Fourth regiment will be quartered in barracks No. 2 with the Third infantry. The remaining eight companies and one hospital corps are expected to arrive during the night.

SEVENTH INFANTRY

The "fighting Seventh," commanded by Col. Daniel Moriarity, has one of the best spots in Camp Dunne for quarters. It is located in Machinery hall and adjoins the Dome building, where Adj. Gen. Dickson has established his headquarters.

Col. Moriarty has headquarters in a tent on the main drive of the grounds beneath a grove of oak trees. The colonel spent the morning reminiscing with Father Edward Kelly, chaplain of the regiment, who will hold services tomorrow.

The Seventh, which arrived in camp yesterday, today started in immediately after mess to get accustomed to the routine duty of army life.

Just before noon mess the men were allowed to go to the shower baths, and then came an hour of rest.

As a means of making his men "hard," Col. Moriarty plans to have them take a six mile "hike" Monday morning and then spend the rest of the day drilling.

BROTHERS

The Parker Family Goes Off to War.

Triple patriotism is represented in the family of former Senator Francis W. Parker, trustee of the University of Chicago and Chicago attorney. His three sons—Troy, Norman, and Leslie—are members of the First cavalry.

Mr. Parker lives in a big house (lonesome now) at 1514 Ridge avenue, Evanston, but he says his pride will sustain him while his sons are helping the government.

Troy and Norman are college graduates. Norman had just received an appointment as professor of history from Rutgers college. Leslie is a student at the University of Chicago. He was one of the boys who led in the movement to have military training introduced by President Judson.

CAVALRY

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Springfield, Ill., June 24.—[Special.]—Already recruited to war strength and with men left over, there is the keenest competition among men seeking admission to th First cavalry encampment.

Under Lieut. William Wendell a platoon of cavalrymen from E Troop staged a series of mimic attacks through the ravines of the camp. Instruction in taking advantage of the cover was given also to other troops. Automatic revolvers were distributed for further instruction.

One of the most interesting spectacles at camp was the class in horse wrangling, in which the new men are taught to throw and saddle their horses. A large crowd watched this work, which lasted for more than an hour.

Col. Milton J. Foreman said he was no better informed than any one else as to when the horses necessary to fill up the regiment's complement would arrive.

"Don't ask me about horses or when we are going to move south, unless you want to lose my good will," said the colonel. "I don't know when they are going to get here, and I am beginning to have suspicions that others supposed to know are no better informed.

"I don't want to go very heavy on the parade thing. What I want is to make sure the men's stomachs stay in proper condition, and then if they can shoot, take orders, and keep a good grip on their souls, the First cavalry will make a record in this coming scrap."

Capt. L. E. Nelson, officer of the day of the First cavalry, declared he had been hoping in vain for some delinquency to provide him with men for several unpleasant detail duties which need attention.

"I haven't got the heart to take the men for these jobs while they are behaving themselves, but I would like to see a few little breaches of etiquette that would provide me with men for extra duty."

Two hundred recruits arrived tonight, accompanied by Capt. Wyman Williams, Troop E, recruiting officer, and Capt. Robert J. Gay, medical corps.

This gives the First an excess of about 200 men over war strength, but new recruits will be used to fill gaps due to reexamination in mustering in. The others will be turned over to other commands.

ONLY AN INVASION OF U. S. MEANS ATTACK ON JUAREZ.

Gen. Bell Says That Firing by Mexicans Across Border Might Bring on Conflict.

El Paso, Tex., June 24.—To set at rest rumors that American troops would occupy Juarez immediately Gen. George Bell Jr. said today:

"The army is here to protect the border and that is all. We have no intention to occupy Juarez or to invade Mexico at any point and we will not occupy or invade Mexican territory unless Mexicans fire across the border or invade the United States."

About Lake Forests "Finest."

Lake Forest coppers are to be resplendant in a few days with a new uniform of a sort of khaki color with caps, sox, and shoes to match. There will be a military air about the cut of the coat which is to have two pockets at the breast.

ARTILLERY

BATTERY C.

Springfield, Ill., June 24.—[Special.]—Ex-Secretary of War Dickinson was a visitor at Camp Lincoln today. He came down to see his son, J. M. Dickinson Jr., who was called to camp from his honeymoon trip. Young Dickinson's bride accompanied the former war secretary.

"I am immensely pleased and agreeably surprised at the splendid organization and ability to take the field shown by the Illinois militia," said Mr. Dickinson.

"The men are in fine shape physically and I never saw a finer spirit," he continued. "If the other states send militia equally as well trained and capable the country will have an army that can account for itself in traditional style."

Another new bridegroom, Ted Ellis, is expected to reach camp tomorrow, joining Battery C, which is now practically complete.

BATTERY D.

The men of Battery D were kept at work with the guns all morning by Capt. Edgar A. Ewing. This battery hasn't sufficient horses to move its equipment even, and Capt. Ewing plans to teach his recruits the use of guns now so that he will be able to devote more attention to the horses when they arrive.

One of the animals became entangled in its hobbles today and in its struggles fell, almost pinning Frederick L. Mason of Chicago. Mason, who was attempting to quiet the excited horse, jumped clear just in time.

BATTERY E.

Tonight is "off night" for Battery E, commanded by Capt. Henry J. Reilly, military expert of THE TRIBUNE.

"We could get a lot of work done in this weather if we had the horses," said Capt. Reilly. "These are absolutely needed to give the recruits their groundwork."

FOUR BATTERY MEN GET ENTIRELY TOO GAY—

And Land in the Guard Tent After Effort to Smuggle Liquor Into Camp.

Springfield, Ill., June 24.—[Special.]—Four men of Battery F spent last night in the guard tent following an attempt to bootleg whisky into camp. They were doing it to the accompaniment of such boisterous singing that Corporal G. R. Mach, in charge of the guard, was paged by the sentry.

The corporal searched the four men, who had all enjoyed town leave for the evening, and fund half a dozen bottles of whisky. He confiscated the whisky and took it to his tent, while the blockade runners were marched off to the battery calaboose.

Half an our later they were discovered a second time, having crawled out of the guard tent and into Corporal Mach's tent to reclaim the liquor. Corporal Mach marched them back into the jail tent, and the innocent posted there on guard remarked with satisfaction:

"That makes eight."

"You are relieved," said Mach. "We'll catch too many fish if you watch the hamper."

These four were the only arrests at Camp Lincoln.

ARYAN GROTTO OFFERS TO HELP SOLDIERS' FUND

Entertainment Will Be Given at Cubs' Park on Sunday, July 9.

FUND HEADQUARTERS WILL BE OPEN TODAY

Sunday brings no interruption in the work of the Soldiers' fund. The offices of the committee in room 1106 of the Tribune building will be open today from 9 a. m. to 5 p. m. to handle contributions and receive reports of guardsmen's families who may be in need of immediate assistance.

A group of 4,187 Chicagoans announced a notable contribution to THE TRIBUNE'S Soldiers' fund yesterday.

Of these 4,186 are members of the Aryan grotto, the organization of Masons which has made itself famous in the middle west for its picturesque pageants and other entertainments. The four thousand one hundred and eighty-seventh is Charles Weeghman, owner of the Cubs.

In coöperation these men will stage a unique open air entertainment on the night of Sunday, July 9, the entire proceeds to be turned over to the fund for the relief of needy relatives of national guardsmen who have been called for service on the border or in Mexico.

Ten Members Answer Call.

"Ten of our members have been called away with their regiments," said Charles H. Faitz, monarch of the grotto, "and those of us who are left behind want to 'do our bit' in some adequate way. If the plan we have made today doesn't add $10,000 to the Soldiers' fund I shall be much mistaken."

The entertainment will include a concert by the Zouaves band of 107 pieces, a song recital by the grotto's chorus of sixty voices, and a picturesque zouave drill by a company of fifty men. The band has just returned from Detroit, where it won first prize in competition with similar organizations from every part of the United States. Bert Morphy, known as "the man who sings to beat the band," will appear with them as soloist.

This much was decided by the grotto officials early in the day. Inasmuch as the undertaking will have at the start the interest and support of the 80,000 members of blue lodges in the Chicago territory, an adequate place for the affair was the first problem.

Where Shall It Be?

The Coliseum and the Cubs' park were considered, and the officials went first to Manager Williams of the ball park. Mr. Williams took it up with Mr. Weeghman.

"For the Soldiers' fund?" said the latter. "Surely you can have the park. Go to it."

Mr. Faitz, Harry W. Ordway, secretary of the grotto; Homer A. Drake, director of the band; Elmer S. Lott, director of the chorus, and Capt. Hamlet C. Ridgway, commander of the Zouaves, went to work on the arrangements at once. Capt. Ridgway is with his regiment, the First infantry, in Springfield, but will do his share of the work, as far as possible, by wire and telephone.

Another program for the benefit of the Soldiers' fund will be given tomorrow night at the Mabel theater, Elston avenue and Irving Park boulevard. In addition to a special showing of motion pictures there will be a high school orchestra of seventeen pieces, a chorus of forty children, and a troop of Boy Scouts. The entire receipts for the evening will be turned over to the fund.

SELL BUTTON EMBLEMS FOR DEPENDENTS, HE SAYS.

Buckingham Chandler Suggests Plan to Increase Fund for Support of Guardsmen's Families.

A proposal for raising a fund to aid dependants of Illinois national guardsmen through the general sale of buttons is made by Buckingham Chandler of the real estate firm of Chandler, Hildreth & Co.

"In brief," says Mr. Chandler, "the suggestion is to sell, for $1 a button emblem to every man in Chicago who is not a member of the Illinois national guard, the proceeds of sale to be held by trustees and administered by them for the benefit of the Illinois national guard: First, by the payment of money to dependents of members where same is made necessary; second, for the immediate purchase of machine guns, or other necessary armament, until the United States government can supply same, at which time the fund could be reimbursed by the government, and third, for any other purpose in connection with the Illinois national guard that might from time to time be deemed advisable by the trustees.

"The emblem should be in the shape of a small button that can be worn in the coat lapel. It should be made of metal and lasting; should have the crossed arms of the national guard, with the letters 'I. N. G.' It should have, if possible, an American flag and the date, June, 1916 and in large quantities should be manufactured at a cost of in the neighborhood of 5c each.

"At as early a date as possible, to get the benefit of the present enthusiasm, the emblem should be sold on the street corners by volunteers, the same as on tag days. Department stores, stationery stores, and other places should also be allowed to volunteer their services for the sale of the emblems after the general tag day sale."

"Chicken Joe" Hangs Friday.

Joliet, Ill., June 24.—[Special.]—"Chicken Joe" Campbell, Negro, who killed Mrs. Edmund M. Allen, wife of the former warden of the Illinois state penitentiary, will hang next Friday unless Gov. Dunne grants a further reprieve.

MORE HOUSES TO PAY SOLDIERS

National Lead Extends Protection of Life Insurance Policies in War.

More announcements were made yesterday of business houses which intend to pay full salaries to guardsmen in their employ while the men are serving at the front.

In addition to receiving their pay, employés of the National Lead company will have the benefit of the insurance policies carried by the company. C. E. Field, Chicago manager of the company, was notified by the president of the concern that arrangements have been made to continue the protection in the event of war of the one year policies paid for by the company.

Full Pay for Sugar Men.

The American Sugar Refining company announced their militiamen will be assured of reëmployment as well as full pay during their absence. The same announcement was made by H. M. Byllesby & Co. and the Lake and State Savings bank.

Ernest A. Anderson, first sergeant field hospital company No. 2 wrote to THE TRIBUNE that his employer, T. H. Cranston & Co., 56 East Randolph street, was paying his salary to his family.

Knights of Pythias to Aid.

Onward lodge, No. 294, Knights of Pythias, has passed resolutions providing assistance shall be given to members who go to the front in case occasion should arise.

President B. E. Sunny of the central group of Bell telephone companies issued a formal statement with respect to military service of employés of the Chicago, Cleveland, Michigan State, and Wisconsin Telephone companies. For three months these employés will receive full pay and for nine months thereafter full pay less the amount they are paid by the government. After that time further arrangements will be made.

WEALTHY WOMAN OPENS HER HOME TO GUARD'S WIFE

19 Year Old Girl and Her Baby Move Out to Bungalow in Wilmette.

SENATE BALKS ON FUND

Delays Approval of $1,000,000 Appropriation for Relief of Guardsmen's Families.

The $1,000,000 relief provision for families of militiamen, which was passed by the house of representatives in Washington on Friday, was eliminated by the senate military committee yesterday and adherents of the plan face a spirited fight in the senate tomorrow. This leaves the government still without even provisional preparation for looking after those who are left behind.

Meanwhile, Chicagoans must attend to this matter themselves, and the need, in the case of destitute families, increases every day the soldiers are away. Have YOU done your part?

A woman who lives in Wilmette called up THE TRIBUNE'S soldiers' fund early yesterday morning.

"I have just read about that girl of 19,'" she said, "and her 8 months old baby in those back rooms under an elevated structure. I believe I can do something better than provide money for that soldier's wife.

"If you approve, and if she'll come, I'd like to have her and the baby up here at my house for an indefinite visit. I have a bungalow here with big porches, right close to the lake, and with lots of room. My baby is just a little older than that soldier's child. What do you say?"

Just a Suggestion.

Fortunately, at the fund headquarters the telephone number of the girl wife's landlord had been recorded. He was called and asked if he would mind bringing Mrs. M—— to the phone. Mrs. M—— was told of the invitation—a personal suggestion from one friend to another.

"Would you care to go?" she was asked.

"Would I?" she gasped. "It's—why, it's wonderful!"

Mrs. S——, in Wilmette, was communicated with again. She abandoned her housekeeping for the rest of the day, hurried downtown and to the west side, and within an hour and a half was making friends with her guests to be, laughing, chatting, and helping pack a bag or two.

Moved Before Evening.

Long before sunset the M—— baby was crowing with glee on the porch that overlooks the lake, side by side with the heir to the S—— fortunes. And just inside an open window a slender young woman of 19 was writing a letter to her soldier husband, blotting it here and there with tears which, in a "P. S.," she explained she just couldn't help because she was so happy.

The folks who are conducting the affairs of the soldiers' fund considered that rather the finest thing that has been accomplished since the project was inaugurated a day or two ago. But it was just one incident in a procession of fine things that made themselves known during the day at headquarters in room 1106 of the Tribune building.

More than 100 cases of soldiers' families left in actual want by the departure of Chicago members of the national guard are now on the records of the fund committee. Six visitors spent the day in various parts of the city, making calls on about thirty-five wives, mothers, and children of the soldiers at Springfield and leaving funds for groceries and other necessary purchases where the need is immediate.

THE SOLDIERS' FUND

I wish to take advantage of the opportunity offered by "The Tribune" to aid in caring for such families of soldiers of the Illinois national guard as may be left in want by the departure of the men for mobilization camps or the Mexican border.

For this purpose I pledge myself to give $.......... each month for .... (how long). My understanding is that this money is to be used only for the aid of dependents whose needs are known to "The Tribune" and whose names will not be published under any circumstances. This pledge to become void in the event of the national guard's return or of adequate state or federal action for the relief of their families. I am willing to have the Soldiers' Fund bureau notify me each month by mail of this obligation.

GUARD NEEDS TRAINED MEN

Cooks, Blacksmiths, Shoemakers Wanted by Militia Recruiters.

Help Wanted—Professions and trades.

was the sign hung out yesterday by militia recruiting agents left behind to fill the ranks of Chicago regiments now in Springfield.

While most of the regiments are filling their ranks rapidly there is a noticeable lack of specially trained men, such as cooks, blacksmiths, harness makers, machinists, and shoemakers.

"Get Us a Cook!"

Company A of the First battalion of engineers has telegraphed from Springfield to H. B. Samman, its recruiting officer at 53 West Jackson street, to hire a cook at all costs, assuring him enough will be added to the regular army pay to tempt any expert.

Wayne C. Chatfield-Taylor, son of Hobart C. Chatfield-Taylor, expressed his desire to enlist in Battery C through a telegram sent to recruiting headquarters at 116 South Michigan avenue, by a college class man, A. F. Tuttle, who is now in Springfield.

These Recruits Listed.

The number of recruits enlisted by each Chicago regiment and battery up to 6 o'clock is as follows:

Second infantry	23
Seventh infantry	10
Eighth infantry	12
First cavalry	113
Battery B	4
Batteries D and E	6
Battery C	12
Battery A	6
First Provisional infantry	105

'FREE TROOPERS,' U. S. TO MEXICANS

President Wilson Soon May Send Ultimatum to Carranza.

alry were with C and K troops at Carrizal. Eleven have returned to Gen. Pershing's headquarters. Sixteen are with the rescue column from the Eleventh cavalry.

This, said Secretary Baker this afternoon, was the score of the Carrizal fighting now in hand. Mexican reports say that seventeen prisoners are at Chihuahua. Thus the number unaccounted for and probably dead is about forty.

Gen. Pershing reported today that one packer and eight enlisted men of Troop C and seven enlisted men of Troop K, Tenth cavalry, were picked up this morning northwest of Santa Maria.

Move for Mediation.

It is not unlikely that an offer of mediation will be made to both the United States and Mexico by the A. B. C. powers.

In this connection it has been noted with interest that Ambassador Naon of Argentina arrived unexpectedly in Washington last night from his summer residence and conferred with Secretary of State Lansing. It is reported that Mr. Lansing sent a confidential agent to Mr. Naon to ask him to come to Washington at once for a conference on the Mexican situation.

The diplomatic discussion with Carranza which the president is initiating may serve to avert war between the two countries. Even if it comes to naught and Carranza continues to defy the United States to the point of a break, the diplomatic interchanges may enable the administration to postpone the opening of hostilities for a fortnight or more, during which time every effort will be made to get the national guard into shape for use in Mexico.

Congress Wants Action.

While the president is maneuvering by diplomatic process to postpone, if not avert, war, congress is growing exceedingly restive and may attempt to impose a more aggressive policy upon the administration.

The Republicans, and even some of the Democrats, in congress are expressing disapproval of the president's course. They charge Mr. Wilson with faltering in carrying out his professed intention to employ force to obtain protection for Americans, with failing to prepare the army properly even for war, and with suppressing and misrepresenting facts concerning the Carrizal tragedy.

MILITIA OF LESS THAN 12 STATES READY TO MUSTER

Company of Oregon Guard Is First to Be Sworn In—Others Take Oath This Week.

[BY A SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., June 24.—[Special.]—The militia of less than a dozen states, according to reports received by the adjutant general of the army, will be in shape to be mustered in before the end of next week.

The first organization mustered in to date, as far as the war department has been advised, is Company M of the Third Oregon infantry, which took the oath today. The rest of the Oregon militia was expected to qualify before night. Company M went into the service with three officers and 142 men, or only eight men less than the maximum war strength of an infantry company.

South Dakota reported that its militia would not be ready to go in "for a few days." Ohio will swear in next Wednesday. Washington state's militia was reported as scheduled for muster on Sunday, and that of Iowa on Monday. The Missouri and Wisconsin troops were expected to muster in today.

As soon as the various organizations are mustered in the departmental commanders will notify Gen. Funston of the number and type of troops sworn in, and Funston will designate the organizations he wants and the point to which they will be sent on the border.

The departmental quartermasters have been given blanket authority by the war department to arrange for all the necessary transportation and entrain the men.

PEACE AT ANY PRICE SENATORS KILL FUND FOR GUARDSMEN'S DEPENDENTS

BEAT EFFORT TO PAY GUARDSMEN $30 PER MONTH

Cry of "Mercenaries" Hurled in Senate Debate—Bar U. S. Aid to Families.

(By a Staff Correspondent.)

Washington, D. C., June 24.—[Special.]—Peace at any price senators today blocked the consideration of the Hay resolution passed by the house yesterday and obtained an amendment in committee striking out the provision to pay the dependent families of national guardsmen who are sent to the border or into Mexico.

Action on the resolution was delayed until Monday, when it will be called up for consideration by Senator Chamberlain. At that time there will be a spirited fight over the proposal to provide for the maintenance of families of guardsmen who are drafted into the federal service. Also there will be a dispute over the three year limitation placed on their service by the house yesterday.

RELEASES FAMILY HEADS.

The senate military committee reported the Hay resolution to the senate with two amendments. One strikes out the appropriation of $1,000,000 for the pay of guardsmen's families and provides that members of the national guard who have dependent families shall be released from military service upon application to the secretary of war. The other strikes out the house provision for a federal enlistment of not more than three years.

TEXT OF AMENDMENT.

The first amendment reads:

"That when any member of the national guard or the organized militia is drafted into the service of the United States under section 1 of this resolution and has a family dependent upon him, the secretary of war is authorized under such rules and regulations as he may prescribe, to excuse such person, upon his own application to honorably discharge him from the service. The word 'family' shall include, wife, children, dependent mother, father, sisters or brothers under the age of 15 years: Provided, that when such person is excused from the call or draft, or discharged from the service, he shall be furloughed to the national guard reserve, unless in the discretion of the secretary of war he is a given a final discharge."

SEES PRIVILEGED CLASS.

Senator Chamberlain defended the senate amendment on the ground that the house created a privileged class in the military service.

"To have pensioned one class of soldiers or to have given them any privilege not allowed every other would have disorganized the army," said Chairman Chamberlain.

"The new draft makes impossible any suspicion of favoritism," or any fear that a pensioners' organization, which might become protectional, will be established."

Representative Gardner of Massachusetts in the house yesterday tried to have the same privilege extended to the regular army, but Chairman Hay blocked his proposal.

When members of the house heard of the senate action, they became indignant.

WRONG, MADDEN SAYS.

"The house will never stand for that," said Representative Madden of Illinois. "Imagine the position these young men would be put in if the senate amendment stands. They would pose as patriots until the time they were needed and then they would be compelled by their country to become slackers in order to support their families. The action of the house yesterday was a credit to the country, that of the military committee of the senate today a disgrace. The senate committee aimed a death blow at patriotism.

Members of the senate also protested today over the senate committee's amendments. Senator Reed of Missouri promptly introduced a bill doubling the pay of guardsmen while they are in active federal service. Senator Martine of New Jersey introduced a resolution directing the government to compel employers to pay their men who are in the national guard and to hold their positions open for them while in federal service.

GORE ATTACKS BILLS.

The Reed and Martine measures drew the fire of Senator Gore of Oklahoma, a Bryan pacifist. For a time it appeared as though the historic rules and traditions of the senate were to be broken and personal encounters indulged in while Senator Gore attacked the patriotism of the young men of the country.

Senator Gore declared it was quite clear the national guard was attempting to capitalize its patriotism.

"To impute to them the motive of having entered the government service for pay," retorted Senator Reed, with grave anger, "is to smatter with filth the noblest attributes of American citizenship. To sit safely and serenely behind a mahogany desk and draw a salary of $7,500 a year and sneer at the young men in khaki uniforms who are preparing to defend their country is an office unworthy even of the senator from Oklahoma."

Senator Gore in opening his remarks declared that congress was afraid of the political influence of the national guard. He asserted the country was upon the verge of militarism.

"We are certainly embarking on our career of militarism with a munificence and a magnificence that are worthy of this opulent republic," said Senator Gore. "I am not sure that this resolution comports with that unspeakable heroic virtue which we are now parading from one end of this republic unto the other. It seems to me that it is rather an impeachment of these gallant heroes. It is a reflection upon their Americanism.

SEES POLITICAL MACHINE.

"I know that congress quails before 40,000 rural mail carriers in the United States who are organized. If 40,000 mail carriers can oblige congress to do their bidding, what will congress do in the face of 400,000 national guardsmen when they are efficiently organized? I know that they can convert themselves into a political organization. Here we come to double their pay in service and to grant their families $50 a month when they are defending their country.

"Shall we send with these soldiers," Senator Gore asked in derision, "chiropodists and manicurists to attend them? Will we by implication convey the idea that they are summer soldiers, that they are unshine patriots, that they are knights of the drawing room? The best thing this country can do is to look the grim visage of war in the face. We must deal with war as war."

Midland Authors Meet.

Members of the Midland Authors' club were entertained in Lake Forest yesterday by Mrs. Arthur Aldis at tea and in the home of Hobart Chatfield Chatfield-Taylor for dinner. The meeting was purely social. Among those who attended were Mrs. Edith Ogden Harrison, Bert Leston Taylor, Mrs. Elia Peattie, Henry Kitchel Webster, and Edwin Balmer.

BATTERY C GOES TO WEDDING OF PRIVATE MATZ

Turns Out in Body While Miss Frances Schramm Is Made Mrs. John C. Matz.

Springfield, Ill., June [illegible].—[Special.]—Battery C, the 'millionaire battery' of field artillery turned out in olive drab last night to attend the wedding of Private John D. Matz of 1312 Ritchie place, to Miss Frances Schramm of Chicago. The ceremony was performed shortly after 8 o'clock in St. Pauls church by the Rev. Edward Haughton.

Miss Schramm is the daughter of Mrs. Charles L. Schramm and the engagement was about to be announced when Matz was called away to join his battery. Believing that a possible war would prevent their marriage for the next year or two both Miss Schramm and Private Matz decided to get married before the call to Mexico came.

Asks for Leave of Absence.

Private Matz told of his affair to Capt. Roy Staver and asked for leave of absence. The captain told him that he would have a leave of absence just long enough to be married. When Miss Schramm was told of the captain's decision she decided to come to Springfield with her mother and have the ceremony performed here.

Carl Matz, brother of the bridegroom, was best man. John C. Whitney of Chicago gave the bride away. Immediately after the wedding a reception was held at the Leland hotel. In the name of the battery, Capt. Staver presented the bride with a silver pitcher.

The boys of Battery C went on foot from the church to the hotel, and as they marched they sang "Roll Those Caissons Along."

Among those at the wedding besides Battery C were: Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Dickinson, Mr. and Mrs. McGavock Dickinson, Mrs. Fred De Long, Mrs. George F. Fisher, Mrs. George P. Fisher, Mrs. Secor Cunningham, Miss Mary Kelly, Miss Margaret Hosford, Miss Judith Mabbatt, Mrs. J. Ritchie Kimball.

On Monday Private John Matz reports back to his battery. His bride will return to Chicago and will visit Springfield every week.

FIVE DAYS OF HONEYMOON.

After five days of honeymooning Mr. and Mrs. Richard J. Dunne, who were married yesterday, will be separated. There is nothing gossipy in this, however, for Mr. Dunne, who is the son of Gov. Dunne, also is Private Dunne of Battery D. And in five days he will be off to the war—if there is one.

The wedding in Our Lady of Mount Carmel church was not a military affair despite the fact that Private Dunne is on leave of absence. Only two suggestions of war were present. They were Privates Joe Lardner and Harry J. Powers, both of Battery D. They came in the khaki.

Mr. Dunne laid aside his khaki for the day and approached the altar in the conventional attire. She who was Miss Frances Ftizgerald, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Fitzgerald of 3530 Pine Grove avenue, wore duchesse charmeuse and orchid glacé silk with silver lace. Her gown was made with a Medici collar and a long court train with a bridal veil of tulle caught at the temples by real orange blossoms. The bride's bouquet was of lilies of the valley.

The Rev. P. D. Gill read the marriage service. Mrs. John A. Corboy, a sister of the bride, was matron of honor, and Miss Alice Merriman was maid of honor. The bridesmaids were Miss Mona Dunne and Miss Janet Pyott.

Mr. and Mrs. Dunne had an apartment picked out, but will be compelled to forego housekeeping until Private Dunne returns from service.

CAMP NOTES

Just What You Want to Know About Your Friends and Relatives.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Springfield, Ill., June 24.—[Special.]—At 2208 North Kedvale avenue, Chicago, today Mrs. Arthur L. Anglund, wife of Top Sergeant Langlund of the Machine Gun corps, First infantry, celebrated her thirteenth wedding anniversary without her husband. At Camp Dunne Sergt. Langlund is celebrating his promotion to the second lieutenancy of his company. His commission was handed to him this morning by First Lieut. J. M. Eddy.

Sergt. Bernard L. Maller of Company M, First infantry, received a package and a letter from his mother, who lives at 1553 St. Louis avenue, Chicago. In the package was a silk flag. The letter, in part, said:

"If you go to the front, son, carry this flag next to your heart. Protect it and it will protect you."

Private John H. Patten, formerly a corporal in the Tenth cavalry United States regulars, was commissioned captain and adjutant of the Eighth infantry.

Just two years ago today Private G. F. Meyers moved from Chicago to South Bend, Ind. At that time he was a member of Company K, First infantry. He has been unable to attend drill, and, according to the regulations, he would have been automatically dropped from the rolls tonight. But he arrived and reported to Capt. Frank M. Allen at noon.

Detective Sergt. Sam Peterson of the Cragin police station in Chicago, who holds the pistol and rifle record of the police department, is a private in the machine gun company of the First regiment. He expects to be a rival for shooting honors on the camp's rifle range.

Private William Phillips of Company G, Eighth infantry, found a letter awaiting him when his regiment arrived in camp this morning. Private Phillips quit his job with the American Bridge company with just ten minutes' notice when the call came. The letter was from his employers. In part it read: "Your pay will continue just as long as you give your services to your country and your job will be open when you return."

Private William Wolff, cousin of Adam Wolf of the board of assessors in Chicago, organized an "on to Mexico union" in the First regiment. The object of the organization, according to Wolf, is to intimidate Gen. Carranza.

Lieut. Col. August W. Miller of the Second infantry, was detailed field officer of the day.

The leader of the Eighth Infantry South State Street band, which plays only original music, is Sergt. William Barry. When Sergt. Barry gets his boys playing just right soldiers can't help from marching.

Sergt. Wallace A. Mead of Company K, First infantry, started a company "newspaper" yesterday. His issue tomorrow will deal mostly with retractions on the stories he published today. Only by a narrow margin did he escape a ducking in the horse trough. Sergt. Mead lives at 6406 Ingleside avenue, Chicago.

Last night Company M, First infantry, was three blankets short. When the officers of the company were apprised of the fact they gave up their own blankets and slept under overcoats. The officers of Company M are Capt. F. M. Allen, First Lieut. Charles F. Keating, and Second Lieut. James H. O'Brien.

Eight Negro doctors of Chicago and three dentists are enlisted in the hospital corps of the Eighth regiment. The chief of staff is Lieut. Leonard W. Lewis, who lives at Thirty-sixth and State streets, and his assistant is Dr. J. H. Plummer of Thirty-eighth and State.

Corporal J. A. Carr of the Eighth infantry went into McClurg's book store in Chicago to buy a Bible just before his regiment left for the mobilization camp. George M. Chandler, who waited on him, made him a present of a morocco bound Bible and printed Carr's name in gold letters across the cover. Corporal Carr has shown the Bible to four-fifths of the soldiers in camp.

Sergt. Ray Fielder of Forest Park, a member of Company K, First infantry, was today promoted to the mounted orderly section of the general staff.

Sergt. Harry F. Bross of Troop G, First cavalry, Peoria, came to attention before Col. R. J. Shand, assistant adjutant general, yesterday and asked if there was going to be war. Col. Shand said he thought the outlook for war was rather good.

"Well, sir," said Sergt. Bross, "I want an expert opinion. If fighting is coming I want to be married."

Lieut. Col. Lewis, U. S. A., was consulted and declared war seemed unavoidable. Whereupon Sergt. Bross asked and obtained permission to have the wedding tomorrow at Col. Shand's home.

The war bride is Miss Carrie Alexander of Pekin, which also is the home of Sergt. Bross. The ceremony is to take place at 1:30 o'clock and will be performed by the Rev. George P. Gunter, pastor of the Second Presbyterian church, Springfield.

DOES THIS INTEREST YOU?

For enlistment in the organized units of the national guard and for information concerning enlistment telephone Harrison 920 or talk to the recruiting officer at the Insurance Exchange building, corner of Jackson boulevard and Sherman street.

BY A GUARDSMAN.

Regiments and batteries of the national guard now under arms at Springfield are not yet recruited to war strength. Most of them need many more men. A constant stream will be needed to keep these regiments and batteries at war strength.

Incomplete units are not efficient units. Vacancies handicap those who are in the service. Provisional regiments are being formed in Chicago. They can wait. They will not be sent immediately under any circumstances. Perhaps they will not be sent at all.

If you are an able bodied man able to leave home you are wanted in the organized units of the national guard. You are needed there more than in any provisional regiment.

Maj. Charles Vincent's battalion of artillery—the second field artillery—needs sixty men at once. The three batteries are essentially batteries of college men and they are headed by Maj. Vincent, an old football man of Yale. Captains of Batteries D and E—Reilly and Ewing—are from West Point and Annapolis, respectively. Battery F is the Illinois University battery.

These batteries are sufficiently large to permit mustering into the federal service, but they are short of blacksmiths, mechanics, farriers, and cooks and sixty enlisted men.

Recruiting began early yesterday at the general recruiting office of the national guard in the Insurance Exchange building. The office was donated for this use by Napolean Picard. Young men were packed about it all day. Physical examinations were being made behind hastily constructed screens, even before the desks and the telephone were installed. Former soldiers were welcomed, especially those who have served in the artillery and in the cavalry. With thousands of horses to be broken in for service, either at Springfield or at the border, men who understand cavalry and artillery horses are at a premium. Any good horseman can be of extraordinary use to his country by enlisting now.

Don't let the Illinois national guard start for the boruer a week from today more or less handicapped at the start for want of men, for want of cooks, mechanics, farriers, blacksmiths. If you are not physically fit to enlist persuade a friend who is fit to go to the recruiting office in the Insurance Exchange building.

VOLUNTEER REGIMENTS GAIN VETERAN RECRUITS.

White's Guerrilla Scouts and Second Horse Carry On Active Campaign for Men.

Two of Chicago's volunteer regiments, "White's Guerrilla Scouts" and the Second Horse, are hard at work with their recruiting. The former, which was organized in April, 1914, when the Mexican situation first became tense, now has 1,300 men and recruited at least 150 more yesterday. Col. Edward H. White, founder of the regiment, asserted that a veritable mob stormed his law office at 105 West Monroe street in an effort to enlist.

A large percentage of the men are veterans of the Spanish war, the Philippine insurrection, and the Boxer rebellion, who want to be in the fighting when it happens.

The Second Horse, with Maj. E. D. Williamson, a Spanish war veteran, as leader, is a new organization. Seventeen hundred troopers are needed, of whom 175 were accepted yesterday at headquarters in the old Inter Ocean building, 57 West Monroe street.

STIRRING STORY OF SOLDIER LIFE AT SPRINGFIELD CAMP

MELTING POT OF STATE'S YOUTH MAKES SOLDIERS

Laborer and Banker, Artist and Cook, Molding Into Earnest Fighting Men.

in the postoffice—am a clerk. The postoffice won't pay me while I am away.

AND HERE'S HIS PLEA.

"I thought if THE TRIBUNE is going to get up a fund, as it usually does when there is some trouble among the people, why, then, I thought that if the light and rent and fuel—if it gets cold before I am back—could be paid, then what I get as cook, which is $24 a month, would be enough to feed them until I am back."

"I think that's a hell of a note," said Richard J. Fitspatrick, assistant cook of the troop, who admitted he was the Kitty Kelly of the Springfield News-Record in private life "Here is 'Cookie'—Mr. Stadler, I mean—works for the U. S., nice job, fair salary; goes to fight for 'em and that's no nice job for a married man. So they cut down his salary. I think he ought to get a livelihood for the kids. They are probably darn fine kids."

A TOUCH OF THE TRAGIC.

But the pity of going to war—how is it comparable to not going to war? Two men who are nameless at Col. Foreman's request were informed today that they must go home—physically unfit.

There was the solemnity of a prayer in the way one of them, rather undersized, swore at the doctor who turned him down. He took his trouble to Col. Foreman, in whom the men believe.

"Look"—he bent his back to make out a deficient chest. "That's a good chest, colonel. Hit it. Hit it with all your might."

The boy, who has been a member of the First for several years, and is away up in the estimation of his camp mates, cried there in the colonel's tent from the bitterness of his disappointment.

Col. Foreman, who is usually competent in carrying a situation away in his pocket, just patted the lad's shoulder and said, "Regulations must be," etc.

The First was sorry to see that man go. He went out in citizens clothes and didn't look back. His father made a gesture to help him into the jitney, but he shook off the hand violently and got in by himself. He won't get to Spiggoty land with the others.

A Question for B. L. T.

Lieut. Lloyd I. Vrooman, who is a cousin of Carl Vrooman, assistant secretary of agriculture and ranking lieutenant of H troop, told me one of the real needs of the troopers that could be supplied at small cost is a "mess fund."

"It won't cost the folks at home much," he said, "and if they want to do something for the men who are going to the front they might supply that. Here's what $25 a week per troop (more than 100 men) will do for the mess:

"All the left over bread can be utilized if a few raisins and vanilla extract are available and the men can have bread pudding, which is excellent despite all the kidding it gets.

"That $25 a week would mean a few fresh vegetables, such as lettuce. It would give the tang of life to a meal that otherwise is nutritious but not attractive."

I promised I would say that for him to the Chicago public, and here it is.

Cheerful but Earnest.

The spirit of the encampment is cheerful but earnest. You might be surprised at the thoroughness of the enlisted man's knowledge of what he is going to fight for. It isn't eagerness for war. I asked more than fifty men today:

"Do you want to go to war?"

Here are some of the answers:

"I want to go if it's necessary."

"I think we ought to go in. That's the only reason I want to go. I tell you, fellow, I've got a girl home, and it's no pleasure to me to go. But if we are going to be a regular country——"

"That's a d——n fool question. I ain't itching for sudden death, but I don't see how we can duck it and stay honest. I don't think any one wants it except there is other things worse'n war."

"I'd just as soon. I got a divorce from my wife three months ago, and since we were called out she has been worrying the life out of me to come back. So I say, 'Hello, Mexico!'"

Rich Man, Poor Man, Beggar Man.

"The regiment has made camp with intelligent, self-respecting neatness and regard for comfort. Keep healthy is the slogan.

"'Cause if I'm a sickly beggar, it mightn't matter so darn much, but I might give the epidemic to my pals," said one.

This, briefly, is the cavalry's camp routine, the work and discipline that are making soldiers of rich man, poor man, beggar man. At 5:30 the buglers of all the various troops and batteries break the sleep of the camp with the impertinent reveille—a call that is as unwelcome as the early voice of the rooster under the summer boarder's window.

Next is assembly. That is fifteen minutes later. The men must appear fully dressed, form, and answer to roll call. Half an hour later is mess. At 6:45, about the time you are wishing you could take another nap, the sick detail reports. Then comes fatigue or drill until noon. Mess again at noon. Then more drill; sick detail in afternoon at 5:15; mess, 5:45; retreat—first call, 6:50; assembly, 6:55 and retreat, 7; tattoo, 9; call to quarters, 9:45; taps and lights out at 10:30.

The men's comfort is Col. Foreman's most anxious care. Not that he stays up nights worrying about them. He attends to matters and then he knows they are well fixed. Luxuries don't get far in camp.

"I've sort of lost my taste for that city junk," said Leroy Baldridge, an artist and a private of Troop F, who formerly worked in THE TRIBUNE art room. "None of the fellows seem to leave anything on their plates at mess, and I bet I have not slept so tight for a year as since I came to Camp Lincoln."

The tents during the day are tidied up as neat as a girl's hair in curl papers. There isn't a loose strand anywhere. Men off duty read, play cards, and there is one boy who has a banjo—the sort of instrument that Kipling called "The War Drum of the White Man Round the World." He can make that banjo step as lively as a levee roustabout.

About Heartaches.

Heartaches? Well, there's always a good big bunch in front of the regimental postoffice waiting for the next mail. Letters from mothers and sisters and sweethearts. What they contain is no one's business but the man's that gets them. There is news that makes a fellow blue in some of them, though.

The little square envelopes with the red patch in the corner are the chief thing that keep those back there and these down here in touch. Of course, many home folks are in camp every day.

Here is one man looking for the wife and kid down tomorrow. He is G. S. Pritchard. Does the name remind you of anything? Well, Pritchard is top sergeant of the headquarters troop, and the wife and kid clung to his shoulder last July in the overturned Eastland for three hours until the men with the automatic cold chisels cut a hole in the side of the boat. Six living persons came out of the compartment in which Pritchard and his little family were trapped. More than 300 dead were taken out. Three of the living were Pritchard, the cheerful little top sergeant of the headquarters troop, and his wife and child.

Visits Her Three Sons.

There were dozens of women visitors at camp today. Among them was Mrs. Fred A. Fielders of Chicago and her daughter, Dorothy. Mrs. Fielders has three sons in service. They are Lieut. H. S. Fielders of L troop; William, a private in the same troop, and Fred of the naval reserve.

"I certainly am glad I came to camp," said Mrs. Fielders. "There is a conviction in every feminine breast that men if left with no woman to take care of them make more trouble and mess and sickness than a plague. But after I have looked over the camp—O, it is such a relief. I feel a great deal more confidence now when I see everything so comfortable."

Nearly all of the women visitors brought something to lighten the camp life. Books, sewing outfits, pillows, bedroom slippers (the big laugh they get with those slippers!), talcum powder, handkerchiefs, rubber overshoes, mustard plasters, bathrobes, and smoking jackets.

"Mother," said one boy to a woman of advanced years, who wore her wealth gently and to the manner born, "I don't believe I'll keep this stuff."

He gingerly fingered a pair of expensive boots armed with spurs. "I think I ought to go along even with the other fellows, and it's certain that some of them aren't going to get this sort of junk."

The mother took the boots out of his hands.

"I am glad to hear you say it, my son," said she, and that ended it.

C—BATTERY—C

Battery C, spick and span with its guns like a rank of shiny black pins on a lady's bureau, is always referred to as the "millionaire battery," though that phrase isn't particularly relished by its members, who are here to "do their bit" on a thoroughly democratic basis, asking no favors.

Its destiny is in the hands of Capt. Roy B. Staver and it is considered the hardest working battery in camp. There is a stiff, rigorous patrol of the artillery encampment that chills one after the wide-open camaraderie of the First cavalry. But the millionaire artillery is strictly for business.

"We can't have visitors swiping our equipment," said Capt. Staver. "We are really busy."

No Pampered Pets.

The men of Battery C didn't receive kindly the suggestion that they had left a life of pampered ease to do their turn in the army.

"That's all wrong," said Jess Hawley, who was a dazzling half back at Dartmouth some years ago. "These fellows down here aren't the lobster palace, tea, dinner, and danch bunch. I mean they don't make that a life pursuit. The fellows you have in mind are still back in Chicago. They didn't come along."

"Of course," said Hawley, "I suppose a lot of these men have seen life easier than this is. But then there a lot of them who have hit it up harder than this. There is Buddie Smith. He didn't make all-American end at Harvard doing the quadrille or languishing over the brandy and soda. Then there is Heinie Hooper, who was tackle at Harvard. I don't think he was all-American, but he was a star.

"Lieut. Bruce Smitlh was somebody in baseball at Yale, and James Marshall was captain of the intercollegiate track team at Yale. There are other of the men who have done a little something, too."

Said Cæsar to Cæsar.

Lieut. Bruce Smith is an officer of the Northern Trust bank and lives at Lake Forest on perfectly amicable terms with John W. Root, son and namesake of an architect whose fame was world-wide. Today, however, Lieut. Bruce was instructing Root to clean the hoofs of his horse better.

"They get sore feet if you don't," he said after giving his order.

A salute from Root and a respectful: "I'll attend to it at once."

Mrs. Root—a Chicago girl educated in Paris—who was a visitor at camp, watched her husband with a good deal of concern until she saw he was not going to be kicked and was master of the job.

The enlisted men of Battery C do not do their own cooking. A pair of chefs from the University club at Chicago manipulate the griddle and frying pan to improve the army ration. But the rest of the job is not paid for.

Some of the Big Lights.

A shell dropped into this battery would wipe out men representing millions of wealth and earning capacity. They are doing daily such jobs as currying horses, making beds, cleaning up the battery street, carrying water.

Among them are James L. Houghteling Jr. of Winnetka; Lieut. Noble B. Judah, son of a millionaire lawyer; Corp. Wheaton W. Augur, who is a grandson of the late Gen. Augur, U. S. A.; Francis Peabody Butler; Donald Defrees, son of Attorney Joseph H. Defrees; Carl D. Matz; Richard S. Tuthill Jr., son of the judge, who is a civil war veteran; A. Volney Foster; N. S. Davis III., son and grandson of famous physicians; Albert D. Farwell of Lake Forest, world famous architect; John S. Miller Jr., son of widely known lawyer; J. M. Dickinson Jr., son of ex-secretary of war; Garrard Winston, grandson of the late Frederick H. Winston; Robert Foote Hall, son of the late Gen. Hall, U. S. A.; Hopewell Rogers, publisher of the Daily News. And there are others.

These fellows are listed here, not because they are any more important than the ex-cook from Vogelsang's, but simply because their names are better known and to show that all sorts of men have the patriotic spirit.

The Regiment of Color.

There came to camp this morning via the Illinois Central, after what its colonel called a happy and comfortable trip, a regiment that would make its whole race proud—the Eighth I. N. G. (colored men), officered by men of their own color. Col. Franklin A. Denison is in command. In civil life he has made a name for himself at the bar in Chicago. He is enthusiastic over the spirit of his men.

There is one in that Negro bunch this evening kneeling by the cook fly tent, and he is crooning a sad plea for new shoes for the baby. His voice is earnest, but rather hopeless. Then it changes to a sudden melody of joy that pours out as gay and undiluted as the song of a thrush.

Into the Melting Pot.

Stirring a little restlessly at the foot of a tree, his attention nervously divided between a book and the craps game was little Sam Peyton, of Twenty-second street, Chicago.

The book he held was the Bible.

"What are you reading, Sam?" he was asked.

"Hello Boss"—genuine delight in his voice—"I was just reading heah wheah it says: 'He shall gib His Angels chahge ovah me an' dey gwine beah me up an' perish my enemies and deflect de arrow dat flieth by day and de disease dat prowls de night. Yassah, dats some comfo't, too.'"

In the chalice that the pessimist doubts—the great American melting pot—war has put men whose daily life touches, if it touches at all, only as the orbits of two cogs that bear away in different directions, and the product of the dipping is Sam Hill, the American enlisted man.

Can you match him, Mr. Carranza?

Benton Company Departs.

Benton, Ill., June 24.—Company F, Fourth infantry, Illinois national guard, 110 strong, under command of Capt. O. C. Smith, left this morning for Springfield.

THE SICK

All Camp Complaints Trivial Excepting One.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., June 24.—[Special.]—The sick report in Camp Lincoln this morning found the hospitals of both cavalry and artillery without a rumpled bed. There was a long line of huskies in the "sick" detail, and they were most enviably healthy and brown looking.

It is typical of the care being exercised for the good health of the camp that the slightest ailment must be reported. A bruise, headache, galling, chafing, sore feet, strain, or cut must be reported and be treated.

Thirty men reported "sick" in the cavalry and twenty-five in the artillery. The most serious thing complained of was sore feet, usually by men who had been unable to get regulation army shoes and had been marching in civilian shoes.

Maj. Orr of the First cavalry sanitary corps declared he never saw a body of men in finer condition.

"If we get off to a good, healthy start," he said, "the men will harden fast and learn to take care of themselves, so we need have little fear of getting a heavy sick list."

Lieut. Howard Williams of Company K, First infantry, suffered an attack of appendicitis and was taken to the field hospital camp. His home is at 659 West Fifty-ninth street, Chicago. The surgeons do not believe an operation will be necessary.

WAR SONG

of Battery C, as Sung at Springfield.

This is the marching song of Battery C, which by request will not be referred to as the "millionaire battery." Capt. Roy B. Staver at a farewell dinner several months ago at the University club, when he was going east, taught it to the members of the battery, and at the same time promised to come back and take command if it were ordered out.

The song, which fifty or sixty members were singing in the Leland hotel grill at Springfield last night, goes:

Over hill and over dale
We have hit the dusty trail,
And those caissons go rolling along.
Up and down, in and out,
Counter march and left about,
While those caissons go rolling along.

For it's hi, hi, he
In the First artiller-ree.
Sound off those numbers loud and strong.
For where'er we go
You will always know
That those caissons go rolling along
(Keeping them rolling),
And those caissons go rolling along.

HOSPITAL STAFFS TO SERVE.

Gregg Stenographers

Take Dictation Rapidly and Read Their Notes Accurately

¶They write the most legible system of shorthand, which can be read with ease immediately after it is written or any number of years later.

¶Elbert Hubbard, one of the keenest judges of value that ever lived, said: "I have to pay a Gregg stenographer a little more than the average stenographer, but he is worth the money."

¶A Gregg stenographer is the busy executive's efficiency agent and is the conserver of time and temper, increasing output and reducing cost of the day's correspondence, thus proving that the best is the most economical.

¶Do you want to be in the preferred class; to be more successful; to earn the most money right from the start; to have the best opportunities for advancement? Then learn shorthand at Gregg School, where everything is provided that makes for thoroughness, comfort and assured competency for high-grade business service.

¶You can start any week. A good time to enroll is the beginning of the summer term—July 5. Send for large, illustrated book of facts that should be read by every young man or woman who wants to make the most of the opportunities that business offers. Do it today. If you cannot call, just write, or telephone Randolph 6040.

YOU SMOKE THESE FIVE AT OUR EXPENSE UNLESS YOU ARE PLEASED AND SATISFIED
"Monarch" 10¢ "Bismark"
"Agreement" 5¢
LA AZORA
OUR FIVE FREE OFFER

THAT'S our daring offer—five La Azora cigars at our expense if they fail to win you!

Ever hear of such a wide open proposition before?

"Mighty unusual," you say. Certainly! But don't forget that these are mighty unusual cigars.

Must be mighty good cigars or we would not dare to make such an unqualified proposition to the hundreds of thousands who read this paper. Just read our "Five Free" offer as printed below!

Then say La Azora "MONARCH," "BISMARK" or "AGREEMENT" to the nearest dealer.

LA AZORA

A Size and Shape for Every Taste

You know what that name stands for. It has meant good cigars for many years.

But with these new members of the famous La Azora family it now stands for better cigars—as proved by our daring "Five Free" offer.

The "MONARCH" (a straight, extra large, mild, easy draft, Breva shape) and "BISMARK" (full size Perfecto shape) are rapidly becoming the leaders of the Ten-Cent field.

The "AGREEMENT" is strictly hand-made panetela—long filler and the costliest five-center in the dealer's case! Sold at FIVE CENTS STRAIGHT everywhere, like it at the price, and you'll agree never 6 for a quarter. Nothing else with us before you have finished the first one! Try this new delight—at our risk! Mildest cigar in the world!

And, when you have discovered real smoke satisfaction, please tell your friends about these unusual cigars.

Go to the nearest cigar dealer and buy FIVE La Azora Cigars—"Bismarks," "Monarchs" or "Agreements." SMOKE THEM ALL. Then if you are not entirely satisfied, tell us the reason, return the five bands (to La Azora Factory, 222 Forest Av., E., Detroit) and we will remit your cash in full for the five cigars. This offer expires July 15. It can be accepted only once by any smoker. Remember, the bands are to be sent to the La Azora factory—not to the dealer.

WANT CHICAGO TO EQUIP FLEET OF AEROPLANES

Charles Dickinson and James K. Stephens of Aero Club Suggest Plan.

If a plan originated by Charles Dickinson and James S. Stevens, president and vice president of the Aero Club of Illinois, can be put into effect Chicago will purchase, equip, and man a fleet of aeroplanes for military service.

It is Mr. Stevens' idea to have this movement take the place of the one that proposed to furnish a number of machine guns if that undertaking has to be abandoned.

Charles G. Dawes, chairman of the committee formed to purchase machine guns, was approached yesterday and expressed himself as willing to make a donation toward a fund to purchase aeroplanes and give the proposition his moral support. Thus far no other member of the committee has been approached, but Aero club officials believe that a similar willingness will be encountered when the idea becomes known to them.

Receives Letters from Fliers.

It is believed there will be no difficulty in obtaining any required number of aeroplanes, and inquiries are now being made of the manufacturers of various types of machines to ascertain just what may be expected in the way of deliveries.

Mr. Stevens has received six or eight letters from experienced flyers, some of them familiar with the Mexican country, offering their services. Other applications are expected as soon as this plan becomes public. One writer from Moline, Ill., offered himself either as an aviator or as an instructor in flying.

The Aero Club of America has taken up with the war department officials at Washington the question of calling on all American aviators for military service. This action was prompted by the threatening situation below the border and the evident need for the services of aviators to coöperate with the troops.

Officials Favor Idea.

Mr. Dickinson stated that a number of army officials in the federal building here had been approached and that all were favorably inclined toward the idea. One of them quoted the late Gen. Kitchener, who once stated that "one aviator is worth an army corps." The federal building officer said he fully agreed with that statement.

The square mile of open ground known as the Aero Club of Illinois flying field, located between Fortieth and Forty-eighth avenues and Seventy-ninth and Eighty-seventh streets, will be placed at the disposal of the government for the use of the volunteer aviators if the plan outlined by Mr. Stevens is carried through and the machines and the men to operate them are accepted by the war department. This is the same site that was offered to the war department several weeks ago as a training ground for government flying instructors and aviation recruits.

BURNS KILL SOLDIER'S KIN.

Miss Lena Leweck Fatally Hurt While Getting Lunch for Guardsman Brother.

Aurora, Ill., June 24.—[Special.]—Miss Lena Leweck was fatally burned yesterday while preparing a luncheon for her brother, Jacob, who marched away with Company D of the Third regiment, in the Leweck home.

The young man, principal support of his crippled father and his mother and sister, enlisted in the militia when the first call for volunteers was sent out by Col. Greene.

He had to answer roll call at the armory at 8 o'clock. At 7:30 o'clock last night the young man left the St. Charles hospital sobbing.

UNDERWOOD & UNDERWOOD

ORDERS 65 SURGEONS TO MOBILIZATION POINTS.

War Department Requests Doctors to Report for Duty at Various Militia Camps.

On orders from the war department at Washington, sixty-five surgeons of the medical reserve corps, U. S. A., were requested to report for duty at the various national guard mobilization points.

These men have passed examinations and hold commissions in the regular army as first lieutenants. They are not obliged to report, but failure to do so results in the forfeiture of the commission.

The department gave out the names of those who had responded affirmatively to the call. They are: Dr. Arthur J. Reynolds, Dr. James F. Presnell, Dr. Clarence L. Wheaton, and Dr. Francis Deacon, all of Chicago, and Dr. James C. Maxon of Harvard, Ill. Many more responses are expected today and tomorrow when the notification reaches the surgeons situated farther from Chicago.

All the men named are to report at Springfield.

ALLIES GIVE UP MUNITIONS U. S. NEEDS IN CRISIS

Seizure of Supplies Now Unnecessary—Plan to Get Needed Machine Guns.

Washington, D. C., June 24.—Representatives of the entente allies have signified to the United States government their willingness to subordinate their munitions contracts in this country to the needs of the United States in the present emergency.

This will make it unnecessary for the war department to invoke a section of the new army organization act which empowers it to call upon any manufacturer for goods on hand or in process of manufacture needed for the army.

May Take Machine Guns.

In this connection it became known today that Secretary Baker probably will adopt a recommendation that a sufficient number of machine guns to meet the needs of the army be taken over from the private plants filling European contracts.

Action is necessary because 1,077 machine guns, sufficient on the present basis of five to a regiment, to meet only two-thirds of the demand for the regular army and the national guard, represent the entire stock of such weapons in the possession of the war department.

Listen to Morgan Appeal.

The appeal transmitted on Friday by J. P. Morgan & Co. to the British government to release from contract a sufficient number of machine guns to supply the national guard may have been effective in bringing about the announcement from the allies.

The appeal was sent to Morgan & Co. on Wednesday from Chicago, especially in behalf of the Illinois national guard.

DUNNE AND ZIMMER HALT CONVICT "HONOR BRIGADE."

Governor Calls Plan to Send Prisoners to Fight in Mexico "Most Grotesque."

Joliet, Ill., June 24.—[Special.]—A movement to form an "honor brigade" among convicts in the Illinois state penitentiary for service with the United States army in Mexico was blocked today by Warden Zimmer and Gov. Dunne.

"The idea is most grotesque," exclaimed Gov. Dunne. "Why should I advocate this when there are hundreds of free men who are willing to go? It is preposterous."

Scores of convicts asked officials if it were possible for them to form the brigade, among them Robert Webb, Chicago boy auto bandit and murderer.

MEDICAL JOURNAL SAYS ARMY HEALTH IS GUARDED.

American Investigators, Including Army Surgeons, Have Led Way in Camp Sanitation, Editor Says.

That the American soldier will be efficiently guarded against disease should a war with Mexico ensue is the opinion expressed in an editorial in the current issue of the Journal of the American Medical association.

The editorial in part reads as follows:

> Typhoid and smallpox vaccination have practically removed the menace to life from these diseases under military conditions. The militia, however, has not been immunized against typhoid even approximately to the extent that the regular army has been vaccinated.
> The sanitation of camps has developed into a science. In the development of this science American investigators—many of them officers of the medical corps of the United States army and of the public health service—have led the way.
> Typhus fever is particularly a Mexican problem. It has been a factor in the present European war, and the measures instituted abroad show how completely this disease may be controlled. Much has been said in connection with the European war of gas gangrene, tetanus, and secondary wound infection. The frequency of these infections has been attributed to the cultivation of the soil in the region in which the war is being conducted.
> Much of the warfare in Europe has been trench warfare. The problem in Mexico would appear to be a different one. In any event, it hardly seems likely that the old saying that "disease kills more men than bullets" will hold true.

DO YOU WANT TO GIVE 50c to the Suffering, Starving Widows and Orphans of the European Warriors, Or to The Tribune's "Soldiers' Fund"?

Furthermore, do you want one of the greatest pictures inspired by the terrible war in Europe, reproduced by a new process so that it looks almost exactly like the original oil painting, even in the texture of the canvas and the layers of paint? Here is what we will do for you. Buy one of these pictures—

"PEACE FOREVER" for $1.98

50c of this $1.98 will then be given to any European nation you may designate, or to The Tribune's "Soldiers' Fund." Your name will be sent with the money if you wish. Can you think of an easier way of helping the needy of war-torn Europe, perhaps even relatives or friends of yours, or the needy of America's soldiers? Help the war sufferers of Europe and the United States, the mothers and little children!

This masterpiece shows a trench in the seething, soulless action of a heated battle. In the distance is the burning city. Suddenly the battle is stilled. Christ appears on the hill. The fighters, awe-stricken, stop and gaze with upturned faces to their Master.

This splendid picture will be shipped by mail to any point upon receipt of your name and address and the necessary shipping charges, as follows: 25c up to 250 miles; 50c between 250 and 500 miles; $1.00 between 500 and 1,000 miles. Buy one for yourself—send another to friends or relatives—the price is only $1.98—50 cents of which goes to the war-sufferers you designate. Buy yours today.

"PEACE FOREVER," with beautiful deep antique golden frame with hand layed corner ornaments. Frame will not tarnish; each frame has a dust-proof back. Picture measures 14 x 20 inches. Frame 1½ inches............. $1.98

FRENCH RETAKE POSITIONS LOST BEFORE VERDUN

Trenches Seized by Kaiser's Men Northeast of City Are Again Won by Enemy.

PARIS, June 24.—By furious attacks the French last night regained possession of most of the positions northeast of Verdun, which were won by the Germans yesterday. They did not, however, regain the Thiaumont work and some of the village of Fleury still is held by the Germans. The official statement telling of last night's fighting said:

The battle continued with ferocity all last night. Our counter offensive movements made it possible for us to recapture in the vicinity of Hills 320 and 321 a large portion of the ground recently lost there by us and to drive the enemy back as far as the outskirts of the Thiaumont work. This the Germans still hold.

The fighting became particularly violent in the outskirts of the village of Fleury.

Between the woods of Fumin and Chenois our counter attacks put us again in possession of those trenches which the enemy occupied during the night of June 21-22.

Tells of Later Fighting.

The later official communication issued by the war office tonight reads:

On the left bank of the Meuse the day was relatively calm except in the region of Hill 304, where our positions were bombarded by a slow and continued fire.

On the right bank there was an intense bombardment of our lines in the sector of Hill 321, to the northeast of Froi de Terre, and in the Chapitre and Chenois woods.

The fighting continued this morning in the neighborhood of the village of Fleury, of which the enemy succeeded in occupying some houses.

Battle a Terrific One.

Late details show that yesterday's fighting equaled in fury anything yet experienced. The total German forces engaged on a two mile front are estimated at between four and five divisions.

Military experts admit that the Germans scored a success, but point out that this cost more than it was worth, the enemy losses being placed at from 40 to 50 per cent of the effectives engaged.

The object of the German commander is to secure control of the Vaux ravine, without which it is impossible for him to force back the French advanced line and begin an attack upon the main line of forts between Souville and Tavannes. The ravine is closely boxed in by the Caillette woods to the north and the Chapitre wood to the south, and hill 320, where the French position forms its root to the west. German attacks here met with a certain measure of success, but at heavy cost, and their footing is by no means sure enough to prevent their being dislodged by counter attacks.

Germans Report Advance.

BERLIN, June 24, by wireless to Sayville.—Capture of the armored fortress of Thiaumont, north of Verdun, and the fort and village of Fleury, further south, was announced today by the war office. Ground also was gained south of Vaux. The Germans made 2,600 prisoners. The statement says:

German troops, headed by the Tenth Bavarian infantry regiment and the Koenig and Bavarian King's Own regiments, made a thrust on the Froi de Terre Ridge and to the east. The troops engaged in these storming operations captured the armored fortress of Thiaumont and took the larger fort and the village of Fleury and gained the terrain south of Fort Vaux. Up to the present time there have been handed over at the intermediate bases 2,673 prisoners, among whom are sixty officers.

FISHER A SPECIAL COUNSEL.

Aldermen Select Him for Chicago Traction and Subway Commission.

Walter L. Fisher yesterday was selected as special counsel for the Chicago traction and subway commission by a subcommittee of the local transportation committee. If Mr. Fisher's appointment is confirmed by the city council he will receive $100 a day for office work and $150 for work outside. In a letter to the committee he said he quoted these rates, "in view of the public character of the services required."

NEW VERSION OF NORTH SEA FIGHT

Prisoners Prove the British Main Fleet Engaged, Say Germans.

TELL OF HUGE LOSSES.

BERLIN, June 24.—[By Wireless to Sayville.]—On the basis of statements made by survivors from British warships sunk in the North sea battle, further details of the encounter have been compiled and were given out today by the semi-official Overseas News Agency. The statement refers as follows to the disputed question as to the part played in the battle by the main British fleet:

"Statements of British prisoners in regard to the time of Admiral Jellicoe's arrival with the main fleet are at variance. Prisoners from this fleet state that it was sailing southward in several columns when the first wireless warning of the presence of the Germans was received from Admiral Beatty's battle cruiser squadron. Admiral Jellicoe then ordered that the fleet continue on its southward course at top speed.

Torpedo Strikes Marlborough.

"These prisoners had seen only the flames from Admiral Beatty's guns when Admiral Jellicoe turned on his heels northward and developed a line toward the northwest and west. At this time the Marlborough was struck by a torpedo which is said to have come from a submarine. This must have been a British submarine, as no German submarines were engaged.

"The main English fleet opened fire. When the armored cruisers returned to the main body the Defense was missing."

The statement recounts the destruction of various British warships but adds no new names to the list, although reiterating the assertion, denied by the British, that the battleship Warspite and the destroyer Acasta were sunk. The statement continues:

"Reports concerning the movements of the main British fleet until darkness fell are conflicting. The only thing evident is that at dark the British navy steered northward in column.

Fate of the Tipperary.

"The destroyer Tipperary asked permission to turn southward alone to attack the Germans. This permission was given, but the Tipperary came into the midst of a German flotilla and was sunk. Admiral Beatty's thirteenth flotilla had missed a junction with the battle cruisers and turned southward at dark. It encountered several large vessels which it believed to be British but which were German. The Germans opened fire and sunk the Turbulent.

"Most of the British prisoners express dissatisfaction at the fact that the British did nothing to rescue them, although almost all the British ships which were best fitted to fight took part in the battle."

A charge of embezzlement against Antonio Rizzo of 829 Taylor street, a barber-banker, who is charged with having absconded April 20 with $15,000, yesterday was continued until June 27.

AMERICAN FLIER DIES FOR ALLIES; DROPS TWO FOES

Victor Chapman, Son of a New York Lawyer, Killed as He Goes to Aid Comrades.

PARIS, June 24.—The American aviator, Victor Chapman, attached to the Franco-American flying corps, was killed in an air battle on Friday after bringing down two German machines.

An air squadron, consisting of a French captain and the American flyers, Prince and Berry, were engaged by four German machines. Chapman rushed to the rescue and headed straight into the center of the circling Germans.

His machine gun brought down two of the Germans. Their comrades swooped down upon Chapman, turning blasts of machine gun fire at his plane. Chapman fell to the ground, his body riddled with bullets. He had died instantly. The three other flyers, whose lives had been saved, returned safely to the French lines.

Son of Wealthy Lawyer.

New York, June 24.—Victor Chapman, the American aviator killed at the French front yesterday, was the son of John Jay Chapman, wealthy New York lawyer, with offices at 60 Wall street.

DEATH OF GERMAN HERO.

BERLIN, June 24.—Details of the last flight of First Lieut. Immelmann, the famous German aviator, contained in letters from the front published here, show that he was killed in a combat with a British flier, which was one of a group of three Immelmann engaged.

A British biplane, which was selected for attack, swerved to escape the Fokker's swoop. The violent rattle of machine guns indicated to the observers below that all the machines had engaged vigorously the Fokker which continued to follow its selected victim. The second British biplane followed the combat from the rear.

Suddenly, just as the observers below were about to cheer the Fokker's supposed victory, the Fokker was seen to waver and fall.

BERLIN TO FEED CITIZENS.

City Will Distribute Necessities from Public Kitchens at Cost of $500,000.

AMSTERDAM, June 24, via London, 10:35 p. m.—The municipality of Berlin, the Lokal Anzeiger says, yesterday decided to organize communal feeding of the population. All preparations have been made for the daily distribution of food. The first public kitchen will be opened on July 7. The whole scheme, when completed, will cost $500,000.

KAISER TO DENY CAPTIVES FOOD?

Plan Reported to Starve British Prisoners as Reprisal for Blockade.

CECIL HOPES FOR BEST.

LONDON, June 24.—That Germany is determined immediately to institute the systematic starvation of British prisoners in reprisal for the British blockade is the alarming information reaching the correspondent on unimpeachable authority.

The correspondent brought the information to the attention of Lord Robert Cecil, minister of blockade, this afternoon. Lord Robert said that he had been greatly impressed by the continued reports of the scarcity of food in Germany and that he trusted that this would not be made the excuse for serious attempts to cut down the necessary supply of food for prisoners of war.

Would Increase Bitterness.

"If that should happen," he said, "it would arouse such a storm of indignation as to add terrifically to the bitterness of this, the bitterest struggle the world has ever seen. To what extent the indignation of the English would reach if their prisoners were starved, I do not care to say."

Beyond this Lord Cecil did not care to go, but his statement was impressive by the emphatic manner in which it was made.

Reprisal for Blockade.

The contemplated starvation of British prisoners is to be undertaken in an endeavor to force England to relax the strictness of the blockade, it is reported.

The correspondent understands that already rations for the prisoners are being cut down, accompanied by threats of further extensive reductions. This has not yet been hinted to the British public.

HELD IN BANKRUPT CASE.

Meyer Kroll Arrested in New York and Brought to Chicago.

Meyer Kroll, who with his father, Marks Kroll, and three brothers, is alleged to have concealed some $20,000 worth of assets from their estate in bankruptcy, was arrested in New York Friday and brought to Chicago yesterday upon the complaint of the trustee.

CAMP HARRISON RECRUITS MAY GO TO PLATTSBURG.

Shortage of Officers in Central Division Makes Necessary Abandonment of Indianapolis School.

The military training camp which was to be held at Fort Benjamin Harrison has been called off by the secretary of war, the reason given being that all the officers who had been placed in charge are occupied in mustering the national guard. These officers are distributed among fourteen states.

"A telegram was sent to Maj. Gen. Barry, commander of the central department, by Gen. Leonard Wood today," said R. N. Magill, secretary of the central department of the Military Training Camps association, yesterday. "It was explained that the 1,200 men enrolled for the Harrison camp should be submitted to the Plattsburg camp at New York for acceptance."

If the army bill passes Chicagoans can attend the Plattsburg camp without any additional expense. Meanwhile the first Plattsburg camp is in session, the second begins July 5 and last until Aug. 8. All boys under 21 years of age are eligible to become members of this camp. The third camp for seniors is from July 12 to Aug. 12; the fourth, also for seniors, is from Aug. 10 to Sept. 6, and the last begins Sept. 8 and closes on Oct. 5.

A special military training camp for boys from 15 to 18 years opens on July 6 at Fort Terry, on Plum island, New York, and closes Aug. 10.

MORRISON WILL ASSURES $700,000 ORPHAN ASYLUM.

Cook County to Have Home for "All Children of White Parentage" After Relatives' Deaths.

"An orphan asylum free to all children of white parentage, irrespective of nationality or religion," is to be established in Cook county after the deaths of certain relatives of the late Charles E. Morrison, according to the ordainment of his will, which was filed in the Probate court yesterday.

Disposing of a $700,000 estate, the will decrees that the estate's income be divided among a number of relatives, one of them the widow, Mrs. Emma Morrison, whom the will appoints to be its executrix.

At the deaths of the relatives the entire income is to be used for the "Morrison Orphan asylum," to be situated in Cook county. The will directs that the housing of the orphanage shall be "tasteful, substantial, and fireproof, and that the institution shall at no time be under the management or control of any one or more religious institutions or societies."

YOUNG WOMAN AND MAN SOUGHT IN REBBE SHOOTING.

Police Hear of Mysterious Couple in Coupe Watching Near Scene of Crime on Drive.

A further element of mystery was found in the shooting of William Rebbe in Lake Shore drive, near Burton place, on Friday night, when the police today began a search for a young woman and a man who had an electric coupe near the scene of the shooting.

According to George Hosack, a private watchman, the young woman was in the coupe and the man standing near.

"The girl asked if the injured man wore a straw hat, gray shoes, and a pompadour," said the watchman. "I told her the description was correct.

"'That's the man I had the engagement with,' said the girl. Then the man spoke up and said she was mistaken."

The couple then drove away in their machine, but evidently drove around the block, for they returned in time to see Rebbe taken away to a hospital by two chauffeurs who were passing.

At the Alexian Brothers' hospital Rebbe was said to be improving, though suffering with a bullet through his right lung.

"It was simply robbery," he said.

POWDER IN SHOES AS WELL AS GUNS

Foot=Ease to Be Added to Equipment of Hospital Corps at Fort Wayne.

Under the above heading the Detroit Free Press, among other things says: "The theory is that soldiers whose feet are in good condition can walk further and faster than soldiers who have corns and bunions incased in rawhide.

The Government's foot powder order is regarded as the last word in the scientific outfitting of the defenders of the flag."

The English, French and Allied Troops constantly make use of Allen's Foot—Ease. It takes the friction from the shoe and rests the feet. Foot Powder, shaken into the shoes of soldiers, has long been in use in the German army, and Uncle Sam's adoption of this form of treating and easing the feet, emphasizes the testimony of the millions of people the world over, who are shaking Allen's Foot—Ease, the antiseptic powder, into their shoes, and using it in the foot bath, as the only practical and lasting treatment to ease and prevent sore feet. Business Men Buy This Jeffery "Six"

TO say that a list of the purchasers of the Jeffery "Six" in Chicago would resemble a section of the business and professional register of this city would be to state a fact known to every one.

The big point is that not only do the leading business men of Chicago select this car of all cars offered them, but their shrewd judgment in its selection is justified by their experience after its purchase.

We print herewith, by permission, two letters which are fair examples of the opinion of this Jeffery car by the business world of this city. The first is from Mr. James A. Hagan of East 42nd Street, cut stone contractor. Contracting engineers do not buy automobiles by guesswork nor recommend them by chance.

Read, Please, Mr. Hagan's Letter

A. M. Robbins, June 16.
Centaur Motor Co.

Dear Sir: I am in receipt of the regular reminder from your free service department to bring my car in for inspection, and I want to take this opportunity to express to you my appreciation, not only of what I believe to be the most complete and satisfactory service in Chicago, but of the car itself. This is the second Jeffery I have driven, and not only am I thoroughly pleased with my car in every respect, but were I to buy another tomorrow I know of no other car which would have the call at any price. It's right in power, in comfort, in appearance and, in fine—a perfect balance that ought to appeal to every man in this city who wants a "six." I thought the old four was "some car," but this six has everything beaten I have ever ridden in.

JAMES A. HAGAN.

Then here is a letter from Mr. John Kercher, the well-known owner of the equally well-known Kercher Baths:

A. M. Robbins, June 20.
Centaur Motor Co.

Dear Sir: I haven't seen you in so long that I must at least let you know how the new car is doing. I do not believe that there is a "six" in the world that can match it. I have the reputation, I am told, of being a pretty hard driver, and if I ask a lot of a car I want to say that I have never called upon this six for anything it was not ready and able to deliver "spot." In power, flexibility, ability to get up the hills, and in every other respect it's a lot better than you say it is. If you could only find some way to convey to every six prospect you have, the real quality and performance of this car, not a man of the lot would be satisfied with any other.

Very truly yours,
JOHN KERCHER.

We would be happy to adopt Mr. Kercher's suggestion if it were possible. If we could convey to you the difference between this car and any other car selling at under $2000, in quality and performance, in materials, the care used in its building and its marvelous road service, we would have to go no further than this advertisement to make you a Jeffery owner. Since words can not make this difference clear, we can only ask you to come in now and let the car show you.

WE SAY THIS—

We will gladly take this car out on a side by side test with any other car in its price class you can persuade to make the trial. If we can not outdemonstrate the other car—if we cannot prove to your satisfaction that we have in this Jeffery a car superior in power, flexibility, hill climbing, easy riding qualities and style—you are to buy the other car.

You Can Have One Now—Now, at the very top of the rush season, with a demand without precedent, we are still able, by a special arrangement, to get one of these cars for you at once. Let us tell you how.

AUSTRIANS DRIVE RUSSIANS OUT OF CAPTURED CITY

Counter Offensive in Bukowina Brings Victory for Pflanzer's Cut Up Army.

BULLETIN.

VIENNA, via London, June 24.—An Austro-Hungarian encircling advance has pressed the Russians out of Kuty (Galicia), according to the Austrian official statement issued today.

In Volhynia the Austro-German forces are disputing the ground foot by foot north of the Lipa river, northeast of Gorochow and west and northwest of Torchyn, where all the Russian counter attacks have been frustrated.

PETROGRAD, June 24.—The capture by the Russians of the town of Kuty, in Galicia across the Bukowina border at the foot of the Carpathian mountains, was announced today by the war office. The text of the Russian statement says:

In Bukowina, west of Sniatyn, our troops are fighting their way and advancing. Last evening they occupied the heights on the banks of the Rybnitza.

The town of Kuty has been captured by us. The Don Cossacks made 150 men prisoners and captured four machine guns near there.

Enemy artillery effected a concentrated bombardment of the Ikskul bridgehead (Dvina front). In the region of Illoukst we effected a coup de main against German trenches. The enemy attempted a counter atttack, but was repulsed by our rifle and machine gun fire. After this defeat the Germans intermittently bombarded at long range with many batteries.

Russ Win Bayonet Battle.

On Thursday evening the enemy opened a violent artillery fire in the sector of Beresina farm, bombarding the village of Kilby, on the Beresina river to the east of Bogdanoff. Toward night enemy infantry opened an offensive, but, met by our bayonet counter attacks, were put to flight toward their own trenches, leaving large numbers of dead.

To the west of Torchyn, due west of Lutsk, desperate fighting continues.

Thanks to the united and effective efforts of our infantry and artillery, all the enemy attacks in the region of the village of Zubilno were repulsed.

To the southeast of Sviniusky the enemy opened a heavy fire in the region of the village of Pustonyty. He then took the offensive, but was repulsed by our fire with heavy losses.

Capture 300 Austrians.

West of Radziviloff (near the Galician border northeast of Brody) one of our regiments, after artillery preparation, got a footing in enemy trenches and captured five officers and 303 men. The enemy then concentrated his fire and obliged us to retire from the captured trenches to our own positions. We retained the prisoners and succeeded in repulsing all subsequent counter attacks.

An enemy aerial squadron threw bombs on Roudnia and Potchaievska.

Sweeping Over Bukowina.

The southern wing of Gen. Brusiloff's army has now pursued the retreating troops of Gen. Pflanzer two-thirds of the way across the Austrian crown land of Bukowina and has occupied all the important towns of this province except Kimpolung and Dorna Watra. In the direction of these towns the Russians have taken Guarahumora and are now proceeding along the railway line running through southern Bukowina into Hungary.

The only alternative apparently left to the remnant of Gen. Pflanzer's forces which still clings to Bukowina is to follow their comrades into the Carpathian foothills.

The Russians, following up their successes west of Czernowitz, have considerably deepened the breach made in the Austrian line at that point and from Kuty are bringing pressure from a third direction upon Kolomea, which already is threatened from Gorodenko and Sniatyn.

Enveloping Move May Win.

Thus while the Austrians are still maintaining their positions in the Lutsk region and till now have successfully defended the approaches to Lemberg, the encircling movement in eastern Galicia and Bukowina, military observers point out, is daily assuming greater dimensions. This, however, cannot be developed indefinitely without reference to the operations at Lutsk.

According to all reports, the Germans are bringing up at this point a continuous stream of reinforcements, and the issue in the struggle in this sector still is in doubt.

Germans Halt Russ Advance.

BERLIN, June 24.—The German counter attack against the Russians under Gen. Brusiloff in Volhynia has now developed over a front of eighty miles extending from Kolki on the Styr river almost to the Galician frontier.

Gen. von Linsingen's forces have enveloped the Russians, who here had driven a big bend into the Austro-German lines, in front and on both flanks, and now, according to all reports reaching here, are slowly pressing the Russians back all along the line in the general direction of Lutsk.

Although considerably reinforced, Von Linsingen is confronted here by highly superior numbers, which, however, have been unable to check his counter attack and start the Russian steam roller again in the direction of coveted Kovel and Vladimir-Volynski.

The Russian losses here are described as enormous. Russian officers time and again led their men in desperate but fruitless charges against the German lines.

German War Report.

German troops yesterday repulsed attempts of the Russians to advance south of Illoukst and north of Widzy in the Dvinsk sector, according to the official statement issued today at German army headquarters. The statement follows:

Partial advances by the Russians south of Illoukst and north of Widzy were repulsed.

A German aeroplane squadron attacked the railway station at Koloozany, southwest of Molodechno, where troops were observed entraining. Bombs also were dropped on railway establishments at Luniniec.

Gen. von Linsingen's forces advanced to and beyond the Zubilno-Vatyn-Zwinatcze line. Fierce counter attacks were repulsed. The number of Russian prisoners is steadily growing.

Gen. Count von Bothmer's forces have been occupied only in minor engagements between advanced detachments.

ONE YEAR AGO TODAY IN THE EUROPEAN WAR

Severe fighting at Bobrka, eighteen miles southeast of Lemberg.

French chamber of deputies adopted appropriation of $1,120,000,000 for war purposes.

German forces that crossed the left bank of the Dniester near Kozany driven back by the Russians with enormous losses.

Near Martinow the Germans, under Gen. von Linsingen, were forced back across the Dniester by a Russian counter attack.

BRITISH LINER CAPTURED BY A GERMAN SUBMARINE

Large Cross Channel Vessel Seized and Taken Into the Base at Zeebrugge.

LONDON, June 24.—A steamer, believed to be the Great Eastern liner Brussels, has been captured by a German submarine and taken into Zeebrugge, according to a Lloyds dispatch from Harwich today.

The Brussels is a 1,380 ton steel twin screw steamer owned by the Great Eastern Railway company. It has been plying between Harwich and the Hook of Holland.

German submarines have captured several small vessels in the Baltic and off Wilhelmshaven. This is the first report of the capture of a steamer by a submarine so near the English coast.

TURKS CAPTURE HILL TRENCHES AND 500 SLAVS

Drive Enemy Out of Positions North of Chorokh River as Well as from Paltak Pass.

CONSTANTINOPLE, June 24.—Turkish troops on June 22, after an attack with the bayonet, captured the greater part of the Russian positions extending for a distance of 6,000 feet on the mountain ridge north of the Chorokh river, in Turkish Armenia, according to the Turkish official statement issued today.

Turkish War Report.

The text of the Turkish official statement follows:

Our troops intrusted with clearing southern Persia on June 21 energetically attacked the Russians in Paltak pass, which is surrounded on both sides by hills 1,500 feet high.

After driving the enemy from his position they pursued him as far as the town of Serail, which is ten miles east of this pass.

The enemy's losses while defending this pass are estimated to be high.

Capture 500 Russians.

Caucasian front—On the left wing of our troops on June 22 after a bayonet assault captured the greater part of the Russian points of support over a distance of 2,000 yards on the mountain chain north of the Chorokh river.

The enemy for some time had displayed great activity and had fortified this section strongly. We also improved our position further to the south.

The Russians made great efforts to capture the lost positions but were repulsed with heavy losses. We captured 500 prisoners and took a great number of tents and quantities of breadstuffs.

400 Lost on Mercury.

PETROGRAD, June 24.—Four hundred persons lost their lives, according to latest reports, when the Russian passenger steamer Mercury was sunk in the Black sea by a mine. The total number of persons aboard the steamship was approximately 550.

The disaster occurred about 10 o'clock in the morning off the village of Grigorievka. The passengers felt a tremendous shock in the forward part of the vessel, which staggered ahead for three ships' lengths and then went down bow foremost in five minutes.

Survivors tell harrowing stories of the scenes that ensued. All available steamers and tugs hastened from Odessa and rescued the survivors clinging to lifebelts and wreckage. Five were taken from the masthead a few feet above the water. Many women still clasped babies in their arms.

ITALIANS KEEP UP DRIVE ON POSINA-ASTICO FRONT.

Also Extend Advance in the Pasubio Sector in the Trentino, Rome Officially Reports.

ROME, via London, June 24.—An extension of the Italian advance in the Pasubio sector in the Trentino and the repulse of Austrian advances at points along the Posina-Astico front are reported in today's official war office statement, which says:

In the Pasubio sector we extended our occupation as far as the Piazza valley to the west and to the head of the ravines of Monte Pruche to the northeast.

On the Posina-Astico front artillery duels have occurred. Hostile infantry detachments attempting to approach our lines were attacked and put to flight by our patrols.

On the Asiago plateau our artillery has been active. The best results were obtained against the enemy position on Monte Cengio and in the Canaglia valley.

On the remainder of the front artillery actions and infantry raids were especially successful on the upper But.

Enemy aeroplanes dropped bombs at various points along the lower Izonzo without causing any damage. One machine was hit by our artillery and fell in flames near Mernia, south of Goritz.

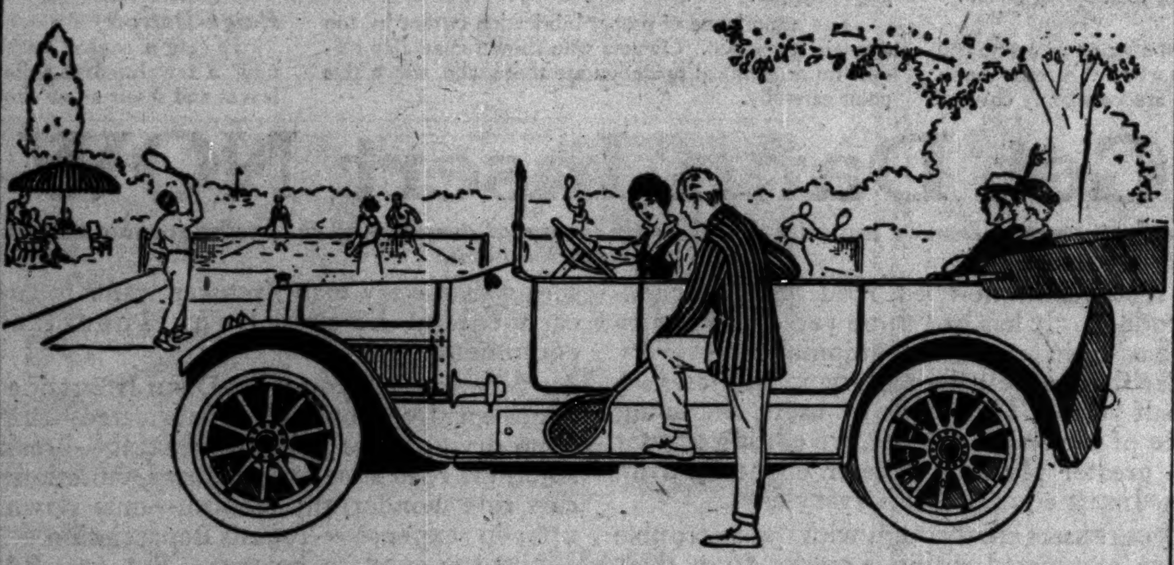
Eight Cylinder Cadillac, $2080



If you could once grasp just how and where the Cadillac stands in the car market today we could not keep you from buying one. No other car would interest you.

Remember, the Cadillac market is mostly among experienced car owners—men who have paid their money to learn the shortcomings of other cars. When men like this buy 30,000 Cadillacs in twenty months there can be but one reason—extraordinary merit and value.

You can best understand this extraordinary merit and value by comparing the market for the Cadillac with the market for other cars. The market proves the merit and value better than anything we can say. The facts are astounding.

30,000 Cadillacs made and sold in twenty months. No other maker whose price is $2000 or over has ever produced this many cars in twenty years. Think of it. And then consider this: Of all other fine cars combined barely 15,000 have been produced in these twenty months. So the Cadillac market is practically twice the combined market of all other cars at $2000 or over.

Even among lower priced cars—in spite of the seeming attractiveness of their prices—not one car at over $1000 has a market to compare with the Cadillac. Not one has merit enough to sell in equal volume.

Extraordinary merit and value! Yes, the words seem tame beside the facts which must exist to so dominate the fine car trade. If you are going above $1000 for your car, could any man keep you from buying a Cadillac? Never—if you know quality and want value.

A Warning

As July 1st approaches, the time when thousands of American corporations will pay dividends, when the savings banks will pay interest on millions of savings deposits, when interest coupons on bonds are due—as this date draws nearer, the thoughts of the public will unquestionably turn towards the investment market.

In times of great business activity stocks and industrial securities offer attractive opportunities to men with speculative minds. No matter how alluring these opportunities may be they can never equal the opportunities for immense and substantial profits offered by real estate in a growing American city. Every section-line corner in Chicago has made profits for its owners that make the tales of Aladdin's Lamp seem mild in comparison. As this wonderful city continues its growth, the prices of real estate which lies along the paths of the city's progress will continue to mount proportionately year after year.

Ponder these things for just a little while.

Auburn Highlands property is one of the choice investments of Chicago. The potential profits to be made in this subdivision are so great that we hesitate to print them in an advertisement.

The transportation lines of Chicago and the public service corporations have already anticipated the growth of this section of the city. The Rock Island Railroad has already provided for a station at 83d Street. The surface lines surround this property on three sides. Sewer, water, gas and sidewalks are in Auburn Highlands. Already over two million dollars have been spent on improvements here. Schools and churches, stores and shops have been established in the immediate neighborhood.

The future of Auburn Highlands has already been guaranteed, its high character has been fixed, its development has been begun.

For many weeks we have been offering property in this great subdivision at a large percentage under actual present value. On July 4th we will raise the prices of all unsold lots in this subdivision up to what we consider fair values. This raise in price will be a scientific one, not made for the purpose of advertising, but it will be a price raise founded upon actual conditions as they exist today.

You can buy lots today at prices ranging from $650 to $1200.

These prices will be substantially advanced at midnight, July 4th.

Our prices include the improvements—sewer, water, gas and concrete sidewalks. Reasonable restrictions protect the property and guarantee the character of its development.

You will be charged no interest the first year.

Never again will you have an opportunity to buy such property as this in a district which promises such substantial returns on your investment.

We urge you to come out to this property today. It will not cost you anything to see Auburn Highlands and we will not urge you to buy against your better judgment. We want you to be convinced that every word we have published and every word that has been uttered by our salesmen are the absolute truth. We want to show you by actual figures what potential profits this investment holds for you. By coming to Auburn Highlands you will be convinced as to the solid and substantial worth of these lots as investments.

Come Out Today! It May Be Your Last Chance!

Make Your Profit on This Big Raise in Price!!

How to Get to Auburn Highlands: Take a car marked "Stock Yards Direct" on State St. in the Loop and ride to the end of the line. Take any north and south line and transfer west on 79th St. to the property. Take any east and west car line and transfer on Ashland Ave. south to the property. Our offices are given at the bottom of this announcement.

'KICK IN' MONEY CALLED 'FINES' BY UNION MAN

Business Agent Arnold Gives Damaging Testimony Against Other Members.

George Fairfield, manager of the Garland building, took the stand in Judge Scanlan's court yesterday and told how he had been forced to pay $200 to Ray Stewart, business agent of the Wood Finishers' union, before the latter would permit the resetting of a plate glass window smashed by the union wrecking crew. The witness said the money was paid following a conference with Stewart and Frank Curran, business agent of the Painters' District council, in the Hotel Sherman bar.

Emil Arnold and Alfred O. Ballard, business agents of the painters' organization, were called to the stand earlier in the day by Assistant State's Attorney Marvin E. Barnhart and forced to give damaging testimony against their fellow union members on trial for conspiracy. Arnold characterized the money extorted from business men as "fines" imposed for violation of union rules.

Tells of Window Smashing.

Mr. Fairfield testified regarding a plate glass window which was smashed in a store occupied by Anderson & Brothers on June 30 or July 1, 1915. Curran, he said, called on him, and after a second conference a meeting was arranged for with Stewart.

"I met Stewart and Curran in the Hotel Sherman bar, on the Clark street side, on Aug. 20," he said.

"The owner of the store had tried to settle with Stewart for two suits of clothes, or $50, but he had refused the offer. I said I wanted to get the glass replaced and asked what could be done.

"Stewart said the matter could be cleared up and the glass put in for $300. In substance I said I would not pay it. During the course of the conversation I offered $200 if the glass would be reset. Stewart declined to accept my proposition. Then we went out on the sidewalk. Stewart and Curran talked to one side. Then Curran came back and said that he had persuaded Stewart to take $200, or words to that effect.

In Goes the Glass.

"Then we went to the bar on the Randolph street side and we sat down at a table in an alcove. There I took $200 from my pocket and paid it to Stewart. The glass was in the next day."

Arnold's testimony established the fact that no business agent has a right to collect money from any person unless authorized to do so by a trial committee which has voted a fine. Previous testimony tended to show that plate glass windows in business places were broken and that before the glass could be reset, the owner was forced to pay extortion money, the money never being turned into union headquarters.

Arnold also said that the list, which the state has characterized as the "blacklist" sent to dealers in glass, was for the convenience of the unions and glass companies, as he understood it. It was to prevent nonunion men working with union men.

Never Heard of It.

"Isn't it true that the glass was put in first so that it could be broken and the owner then be forced to pay money before it was replaced?"

"No, I never heard of that."

"Don't you know that there was a glass breaking campaign?"

"No, I didn't."

"Did you ever collect money from any one on the blacklist?"

"I never put any one on the blacklist."

"Well, let us call it the glass list then," said Mr. Barnhart.

"Only if a boss was fined by the painters' district council," the witness answered.

Fined for Violating Rules.

"What right have the councils to ente a fine against any person?"

"For violating union rules."

"When you attended meetings of the business agents did anybody ever report the collection of any money from persons whose glass had been broken?"

"No."

"If a boss broke any working agreement, who would determine that he would be fined?" interposed Judge Scanlan.

"If he belonged to our organization he would go before a trial committee and his case would be passed upon."

Ballard's testimony was largely similar to that given by Arnold. He was unable to explain why the "blacklists" were sent out.

Judson F. Stone, manager of the Stock Exchange building, was recalled for the purpose of introducing a business card which he had received from Edward Flynn, business agent of the painters' council, now dead, to whom he said he paid $3530 to have glass put in, and showing that he had been given no notice to attend any meeting of a trial committee of the union.

BETTER A HERO'S BRIDE

Miss Wentworth Puts Off Wedding to Soldier Until War Is Over.

Miss Edith Wentworth

Miss Edith Wentworth of 7827 Muskegon avenue comes of a fighting family, but she would rather be a hero's bride than take a chance of becoming a Mexican war widow. Therefore her marriage to Lieut. Charles Keating of the First infantry has been postponed until after he gets back from the border. On the day he left for Springfield Miss Wentworth obtained a warrant for Frank Perry, who, she says, has been annoying her with his attentions.

CHILDREN'S DAY AT HORSE SHOW

Youngsters Have Gay Time at Closing Day of the South Shore Fete.

BY FANNY BUTCHER.

The horse show at the South Shore Country club came to its triumphal close yesterday afternoon with an arena packed with gayly frocked and hatted women and men in summer togs. It was like a great circus, with lots of sunshine.

It was children's day, and many of the boxes were filled with boys and girls who were fascinated by the high stepping horses and the jaunty little carts and ponies. Little Loretta Hines, in a riding suit of tan and a perky little scarlet riding hat, won all sorts of applause as she jaunted by in the ring.

Happy Youngsters.

In Mrs. J. G. Warden's box, her small daughter Theodora watched everything with such eager eyes that she answered with nods when her mother spoke to her. Mrs. Walden W. Shaw had her two lovely girls, Margaret and Bessie, with her. There was one box, C. A. Brown's, that had four buxom happy sisters in it, Miss Marian, who is almost a young lady, Barbara, Winifred, and little Meredith.

The children were not the only ones who were thrilled by the championship runs and dashes and drives. Everyone applauded as the ribbons were awarded as they have not applauded since the show began. Everett C. Brown, president of the club, with Mayor William Hale Thompson and Mrs. Thompson as his guests, atttracted many pleasant greetings.

Hunt Ball Brilliant.

The crowning social event of the horse show season was the hunt ball last night. The guests numbered 1,700. It was one of the largest parties in the history of the club. The equestrian committee with their brilliant scarlet coats, their black satin waistcoats, and their white knickerbockers, the ballroom gay with the hunting colors and American flags, and the guests in the most formal of formal evening frocks, made a most charming picture.

HAWKEYE CLUB TOLD ALL ABOUT IOWA GREATNESS

At Least One Speaker Explains Log Cabin Accommodations.

The Hawkeye club of Chicago held its annual picnic yesterday afternoon in Jackson park west of the German building. Three thousand persons attended.

The day began with the admission in a body of the Megue Moquoketa club, composed entirely of Iowans, like the Hawkeye club.

After every one was tagged with an identification badge giving the name of the town from which he came, Chairman Schaefer gave notice that the "men's button sewing contest" would be held.

Cash Prizes Given.

The boys' 100 yard foot race and the men's one legged race followed. Cash prizes were given the winners.

Col. Frank O. Lowden, candidate for governor and president of the Hawkeye club, presided. He read a letter from Howard Jayne of Monmouth, Ill., presenting to the club a gavel, the white wood of which was taken from the foundation of the building, where the first session of the Iowa legislature was held, and the dark wood from the foundation of the first school in Iowa.

That Log Bungalow.

Former Senator William E. Mason of Illinois, a candidate for nomination as congressman at large, gave the first address. He recalled his early life in a log cabin in Van Buren county, Iowa.

Lafayette Young of Des Moines followed with a description of the beauties of his birthplace, Monroe county, which he contrasted with the horrors of war which he saw during a five months' tour through Europe for his newspaper.

The last speaker was Miss Florence King, a Chicago attorney, who spoke on woman suffrage.

The games then proceeded.

And then came luncheon.

HIGH SCHOOL GRADUATE SAVES DROWNING YOUTH.

James Serrin Sees Swimmer Sink—Paddles Out in Canoe and Dives and Pulls Him Ashore.

Ralph Bryson of 4807 Kenmore avenue was saved from drowning yesterday afternoon at the Lakeside beach by James Serrin of 940 Lakeside place, who has just been graduated from the Senn High school.

Bryson, who is 20 years old, went out beyond his depth and was unable to swim back. He went down several times, and when he failed to come up young Serrin leaped into a canoe, paddled to the place where Bryson went down, dove for Bryson, and bought him back to shore.

Several men carried the young man to the residence of O. A. Reed at 908 Lakeside place, where he was resuscitated and sent to his home.

WHERE DID I MEET YOU?

She Never Had Met the Detectives, but They Spoke to Her Anyhow.

She was nifty in a sport skirt and much blonde hair, and the Observers' club at Clark and Madison streets was looking her over when a pair of detectives happened along.

"Pardon us," said one of the sleuths, "aren't you Miss Karina Nielson of Omaha?"

She was, but she didn't believe she remembered the handsome detectives. Her memory cleared, though, when she was held on a charge of purloining a $400 ring from Mrs. F. L. Haller of Omaha.

What It Is
Dann Insert is a thin perforated strip of soft, shock-deadening, anti-friction metal inserted between the leaves of all the springs. The Insert is packed with a special graphite compound which will not flow liquid and insures maximum efficiency at all time. Springs are perfectly, continuously, permanently lubricated. They will not become stiff, inactive or squeak. Your car will ride as easily as though it were floating on air. We guarantee these results — or your money back.

And this applies to every make of car on which Dann Inserts are NOT NOW specified as regular equipment

Here is what manufacturers say about springs, taken from their own instruction books—we cannot print them all—but they all say about the same thing.

Cadillac:— When the springs are not lubricated, water works its way in between the leaves and causes them to rust, often to such an extent that they become like solid pieces. This causes them to lose much of their spring action.

Hudson:— Springs need lubricating on an average of every 500 miles; if used in the winter, or when the roads are in poor condition, and the springs are constantly covered with mud, they will have to be lubricated more frequently. This also is true of heavy closed cars, especially limousines, which are washed more frequently than the average touring car.

Marmon:— The importance of proper lubrication cannot be too strongly impressed. Owners who show remarkable records for economical operation are those who watch this point carefully.

Cole When springs are not lubricated, water works its way in between the leaves and causes them to rust, often to such an extent that they become almost like solid pieces. This causes them to lose much of their spring action.

Paige-Detroit In case a squeak develops in the springs after running a few hundred miles, it is well to separate the leaves and insert a few drops of oil.

Dann Insert is a time-tried, road tested, owner-proved product. It has had three years of big success. It has been standard equipment on every Winton Car that has left the factory in the last two and one-half years. Thousands of users, including every make of car on the market, are getting greater efficiency, greater pleasure, greater economy from their Dann Insert equipped cars every day.

Dann Insert users are through with spring trouble—they have eliminated spring squeaks from their cars—they have obtained a riding ease that they have never had before—they have secured the perfect spring that every manufacturer wants to supply, but cannot until he uses Dann Insert as regular equipment.

When we tell you what Dann Insert does—how it keeps springs continuously lubricated—stops springs from drying out, rusting, squeaking—breaks up and smothers road shocks — reduces vibration — makes cars ride wonderfully smooth—cuts down tire and upkeep expense — retards depreciation — it sounds almost too good to be true. But we BACK our claims with this straight-out-and-out guarantee—proved comfort or your money back.

Our Riding a Comfort Never Known Before
Our Hudson car is equipped with Dann Insert. It rides smoothly over all roads and the maximum of riding pleasure is obtained. My wife and I are over sixty years of age and the fact that our car has the extra equipment of Dann Inserts makes our riding a comfort never known before. I heartily recommend Dann Inserts.—A. S. Eichner, Chicago.

Not a Squeak From My Car Since
I had Dann Inserts installed in my Hudson "54" about eight months ago and am perfectly satisfied with it. I have not had a squeak from my car since the springs were inserted, and the riding qualities have been improved very much indeed. I expect to have these springs put in my new car.—A. H. Potter, Pottery Confectionery Co., Cambridge, Mass.

The Results Were Absolutely Perfect.
The writer used a "Little Six" Hudson 1914 16,000 miles after you had placed your Inserts in the springs. The results were absolutely perfect.—E. L. Cox, German-American Portland Cement Works.

Positively Would Not Be Without Them.
I am more than pleased with the easy riding of my Hudson Car since the Inserts were put on. I can say for myself and for the three men that are using them on their Ford cars, we positively would not be without them.—A. D. Renfro, Kansas Natural Gas Co., Independence, Kan.

More Than Satisfactory In Every Way
Last June I bought a Cadillac 8 car and had it equipped throughout with your spring inserts by the Carolina Cadillac Co. of Winston, N. C. They have been more than satisfactory in every way. I have never had a spring squeak, and have remarked on the noiseless and easy riding qualities of my car.—Chas. B. Wagoner, Concord, N. C.

Car Rides More Smoothly Than Before
The springs on my Hudson "37" were equipped with a set of Dann Oil Cushion Spring Inserts last June, and the results have been very satisfactory. Rides more smoothly than before the Inserts were installed and squeaking of springs have been entirely eliminated.—Ernest Lunn, Pres., Walker Vehicle Company.

All You Claim and Then Some
I purchased through a local supply house your Inserts for my "55" Fiat and have been riding on them with a great deal of satisfaction. I believe they are all that you claim for them and then some.—Wm. E. Beers, Morgan & Beers Piano Co., Hartford, Conn.

Increased the Riding of the Pierce-Arrow.
I procured one set of Dann Inserts from your local representative and to my pleasure I find I have increased the riding of the Pierce-Arrow Car which I am driving. I have just placed one more set of Dann Oil Cushions on my other Pierce-Arrow Car.—Edward C. McCullough.

Would Not Sell Them for $50.00.
I felt so enthusiastic about the Inserts that after three days good trial I wrote the home office a letter of satisfaction. They make my Hupp a real pleasure car and I am more than satisfied.—Henry L. McVickar, Roslyn, L. I.

Best I Have Ever Seen.
Mr. Armstrong of the Cutting-Armstrong-Smith Sales Company has asked me for an expression concerning the Dann Spring Inserts, a set of which we tested out last Winter. I drove these in one of our Saxon Roadsters for about six months and, in my opinion, they are the best type of Spring Insert I have ever seen, improving the riding qualities of the car at least fifty per cent.—R. E. Cole, Chief Engineer Saxon Motor Company, Detroit, Mich.

MRS. MADELINE FORCE-ASTOR-DICK ARRIVES

And with Her Comes Her $5,000,000 Bridegroom Sphinx.

BY KATHERINE SYNON.

Mrs. Madeline Force Astor Dick, looking tired, hot, and bored, with eight trunks, thirteen bags and boxes, her maid, her motor coat, and her new husband, came to Chicago yesterday in the course of a honeymoon that started in Maine, passed Niagara Falls, and is speeding on to California.

The arrival of Mr. and Mrs. William K. Dick, the latter the widow of John Jacob Astor and one of the survivors of the Titanic, happened in midafternoon at the Park Row station and didn't even stop traffic on Michigan boulevard. No one met them but a zealous photographer, who greeted them with a flashlight explosion that the bridegroom disliked and at which the bride laughed.

They took a taxicab to the Blackstone hotel, where they remained until their departure at 7 o'clock on the Overland Limited of the Northwestern railroad on their way to Santa Barbara.

Just Ordinary Pullmanites.

In spite of rumors of private cars, the Dicks came westward in an ordinary Pullman on a Michigan Central train, which was nearly three hours late in arriving in Chicago. They escaped public notice in a stateroom, however, while Mrs. Dick's diminutive maid and the huge piles of luggage she supervised took up nearly all the rest of the car.

They emerged from their seclusion only once, and then to glimpse the Falls, which used to be part of every first class American honeymoon tour. They also read many magazines—15 cent ones—continuously, by the evidence of the stacks of fictional reading matter through which they waded outward.

Mrs. Dick, who is of the Lady Clara Vere de Vere type of feminine loveliness, coldly regular and splendidly calm, wore a dark blue serge gown severely tailored, whose shortness accentuated her height. Her golden brown hair was almost hidden by a black silk beaver mushroom hat, ornamented only by a broad band of ribbon.

Only a silver fox fur scarf and a single orchid enriched Mrs. Dick's gowning, but her black patent leather shoes glistened almost as brightly as did the breast plate of platinum, diamonds, and cabochon emerald which she wore among the several strands of pearls of her necklace.

Her husband, for whom she gave up $5,000,000, wore a gray suit, a straw hat, and a scowl that sat tightly upon his heaviness. Mr. William K. Dick is broad shouldered, long armed, and cold eyed. From behind the shield of his spectacles he transfixed with baleful glare any one who ventured to address him, from porter to reporter.

Where Mrs. Dick's silence was negative in its indifference to the public, Mr. Dick's silence fairly bristled with positive anger. Seldom did he break it; once when he ordered the transfer of Mrs. Dick's maid from the taxicab where she sat with his wife, and directed her to follow them to the hotel from the railway station in another car.

Just as Mrs. Dick alighted from the coach in the station a tiny boy, who had become separated from his mother in the crowd, ran toward the bride with the cry of "Mamma! Mamma!" Mrs. Dick leaned down and gently disentangled the child's hands from her skirt, pointing out his mother to him, and smiling at him slightly, perhaps in recollection of her son, John Jacob Astor, born after his father's death on the Titanic. Mr. Dick, however, continued to frown.

Frowns on Taxi Man.

He frowned even harder when the taxicab starter informed him that he would have to pay $3 for the transfer of his party to the hotel. Then his stony silence broke.

"How far is it?" he demanded.

"Five blocks," said the African red cap in his wake.

"Robbery," snorted Mr. Dick. "Highway robbery." But Mrs. Dick beckoned to him from the car, which was becoming the center of curiosity on Park row, and he paid the charge.

Through the gauntlet of a curious crowd at the Blackstone Mrs. Dick retained her equanimity with the poise of more years than her 24. In possible appreciation of the evident speculation concerning the young man for whom she sacrificed the larger part of her share in the Astor estate, she kept close to him while he registered the name which she took on Thursday in her country home in Bar Harbor, Me.

Order Belated Luncheon.

At the hotel the honeymooners ordered the belated luncheon which they had been unable to secure because of the lateness of the train from the east and its lack of a dining car.

Then they went on a sightseeing Chicago tour while Mrs. Dick's maid unpacked a case of exquisite gowns.

No one knows what the Dicks think of Chicago—or of Niagara Falls. Neither may it be set down what Mrs. Dick thinks of American honeymoons, or of the Mexican war, or of Mr. Dick. Nor may it be chronicled what Mr. Dick thinks of Michigan boulevard, or of the Astors, or of Mrs. Dick's monetary sacrifice in wedding him. For to all such pleasant little queries hurled at them the Dicks maintained the silence of the grave. And even outside a poker game a poker face has its advantages.

MEXICO AND NOT TEXAS.

Picture Labeled San Antonio Not Meant for American City.

Owing to an unfortunate error a photograph in the pictorial weekly of THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE on June 18, showing the Fifth and Sixth United States cavalry troops, was captioned as "on the march north from San Antonio, Tex., stopping to inquire for information about bandit raiders." The caption should have read San Antonio, Mex. San Antonio, Tex., of course, is far removed from the scene of the Mexican bandit depredations. THE TRIBUNE is glad to make this correction.

LARKIN'S JOB IS RENEWED.

Healey Appoints Him for 60 Days More as Chief of Detectives.

Chief of Police Healey last night announced that Capt. Charles Larkin has been reappointed chief of detectives. Capt. Larkin holds his place under temporary authority, which must be renewed every sixty days. He was first named two months ago after the resignation of Nicholas Hunt. At that time it was announced by President Coffin of the civil service commission that an examination for the place would be held, but so far none has been called.

CARLETON HUDSON FILES WATERMAN AGREEMENT.

Document Shows Former Judge Agreed to Transfer Deeds to Real Estate.

Carleton Hudson Betts, who called himself Carleton Hudson, has filed in Recorder Joseph F. Connery's office an agreement made in 1911 by himself and former Judge Arba N. Waterman, by which agreement Mr. Waterman agreed to transfer to Hudson, who was to give his notes for the purchase price, warranty deeds to more than $80,000 worth of Mr. Waterman's real estate.

The deeds, which were given later, were filed by Hudson a few months ago in Recorder Connery's office, and immediately the conservator of the former judge's estate sued to set the deeds aside, alleging that Hudson had not obtained them legitimately.

The agreement which was filed yesterday set forth that most of the property therein described was vacant, and added: "Owing to the advancing age of the party of the first part [Waterman], it is not desirable for said party to attempt to make improvements. Said party of the second part [Hudson] has rendered a large amount of services in connection with said property without compensation and is familiar with said property. It is the desire of said party of the first part to gradually withdraw from active business and to provide for a definite income for a term of years."

Appointment of a receiver for the Illinois Rawhide Box company, a $100,000 corporation, is asked in a petition filed yesterday by Lewis W. Parker. The concern, the petition states, has ceaed operation.

SAVES LIFE FROM MANIAC BY SHAMMING DEATH.

Barber Lies Motionless After Insane Man's Bullet Hits Him—Cobbler Kills Self.

Peter Bedall, a barber at 1167 Larrabee street, saved his life by shamming death yesterday after he and Sebastian Puccio of 1156 Larrabee street had been wounded by Cassarino Raffaele, a cobbler, who is believed to have become demented. After shooting the two men Raffaele ended his life by firing a bullet into his brain.

The shooting occurred in Raffaele's shoe repair shop at 1169 Larrabee street. Bedall had dropped in from his shop next door for the usual daily friendly chat and Puccio had called for a pair of shoes he was having mended when the cobbler emerged from the curtains at the rear of the shop with a revolver in his hand.

Without warning he began firing at the visitors. The first shot struck Puccio in the shoulder and knocked him down. The second grazed Bedall's cheek. Bedall dropped to the floor. He said Raffaele walked over to him, pointed the revolver at his head, and evidently was on the point of firing again when he decided Bedall was dead. He walked to the back of the shop and returned again and stood over the barber, but Bedall lay motionless, and he finally went back again, pressed the muzzle of the weapon against his own head, and pulled the trigger.

The Tourabout—
A Four-Passenger Roadster

$1145

Empire Automobile Co.
Indianapolis Ind.

We announce the arrival and invite your inspection of the EMPIRE Tourabout—an up-to-the-minute four-passenger roadster. At $1,145, this car ranks as the lowest priced six-cylinder model of its type—absolutely the most advanced body style of the season.

The Tourabout is a car of solid comfort. It is a "four-passenger" in fact as well as in name—every passenger being accommodated comfortably. The front seats are individual parlor car type. The rear seat is 37 inches wide. There is not another roadster within several hundred dollars of the price which affords such roominess as the EMPIRE Tourabout.

Baggage is carried in the roomy, dustproof rear deck compartment, with entrance through the hinged upholstery of the back seat. With these facilities for luggage carrying, the Tourabout, built on the sturdy six-cylinder EMPIRE chassis, is the ideal car—not only for city use but for general touring purposes.

The number of these cars which we can secure is limited. We advise your immediate consideration of this model.

Why Multiplied Thousands Choose the Chandler

NOTHING has been added to the price and nothing taken from the car to compensate for the higher production costs of the Chandler Six.

Before the prices asked for other cars were marked up, Chandler was the first choice of thousands of careful buyers. It is not to be wondered at, therefore, that with distinct price advantage added to distinct mechanical superiority, the Chandler is first choice today of multiplied thousands.

Chandler sales for the year 1916 are setting a new big record for high grade sixes.

In the midst of extravagant claims for new and uncertain theories, the Chandler Motor, refined and perfected through three years of development, remains free from any hint of experimentation. And Chandler bodies are the most beautiful of the year.

SIX SPENDERS AT SOUTH SHORE GO OVER $4,500

But Who Are They? Their Names Are Kept a Secret.

Who are the six spenders at the South Shore Country club who spend $4,500 or more a year there?

President Everett C. Brown is keeping their names secret, but he mentions them in an article headed "Nothing But Facts" in the first issue of the club's monthly publication.

What the Figures Show.

Mr. Brown shows there are 1,319 members of the club who either have no house accounts at all or who spend less than $150 each year. He says:

"Two hundred and forty-nine of the members do not have any house account at all, 682 members spend less than $75 annually, 388 spend from $75 to $150 each year, 326 spend from $300 to $500 annually, 106 spend from $500 to $1,000 per year, and 85 spend from $1,000 to $2,500 each year, and 21 spend from $2,500 to $4,500 per annum."

Not a Bad Record.

"That isn't a bad record at all," explained Mr. Brown. "If you remember, I wrote a similar article once in connection with the Chicago Athletic association, and I want to say right here that our average of members who have no house accounts is way below the number in most of the downtown clubs. In fact, I think we will compare favorably with most of the New York clubs."

DRYS PLAN NEW ATTACK ON WETS

Governor of Idaho Offers to Buy Wets' Property When State Goes Dry.

WILL SELL AT A PROFIT.

BY THE REV. W. B. NORTON.

An attack on the saloon at a new angle will be made by Moses Alexander, governor of Idaho.

He will be one of the speakers at the seventeenth annual convention of the Anti-Saloon league of America, which begins today in Indianapolis.

Gov. Alexander is a man of large wealth and he offers to buy banks and stores which are offered for sale by persons who say they will be forced to sell whenever a city or a state votes dry. In his address he will tell of various properties he has so purchased and then sold back at a greatly increased value. He calls the statements of liquor advocates that prohibition means financial loss as the biggest attempt at deceiving the people ever devised.

The national convention will begin this afternoon with an address by Dr. P. A. Baker, national superintendent, and United States Senator Wesley L. Jones of Washington.

An oratorical contest on prohibition by the representatives of eight different states, who have previously won state honors, will be held tomorrow afternoon and a young people's rally will be held tomorrow night. The convention closes Thursday night.

The Chicago delegates will go by special train tomorrow noon.

JEALOUS MAN WOUNDS WOMAN; KILLS HIMSELF

Brewery Worker Thought Others Were Paying Attentions to Housekeeper.

Jealousy over alleged attentions paid his housekeeper, Mrs. Nellie Ganno, by other men caused Frank Fisher, an employé of the Birk Brothers Brewing company, to shoot her in the jaw as she lay asleep yesterday morning and then end his own life by firing a bullet into his temple. The double shooting occurred at 3457 West Adams street, where the two had been living for the last two months.

Woman Denies Charge.

Mrs. Ganno, who denies Fisher had any grounds for his jealous suspicions, was rushed to the West Side hospital, where phyicians say she will recover. Fisher was unconscious when taken to St. Anthony's hospital and died a few hours later. He was 56 years old. Mrs. Ganno is 43.

Fisher left a note addressed to "Dear Friends" gave the reason for his act.

His Note Explains.

It read:

NO PROOF THAT ORPET EVER HAD POISON: DEFENSE

Missing Link in State's Case Lack of Such Evidence, Say Lawyers.

TO RELY ON RULE OF LAW.

BY WALTER NOBLE BURNS.

The missing link in the state's case against Will Orpet, according to the defense, is the lack of any evidence to prove that the young collegian had cyanide of potassium in his possession when he kept his tragic tryst with Marion Lambert in Helm's woods.

Attorney Ralph Potter, in an impressive argument to have the case taken from the jury, declared before Judge Donnelly in Waukegan yesterday that this was a fatal defect in the circumstantial chain by which the state hopes to convict the boy of murder.

"There is no evidence of any kind in this case," said Mr. Potter, "to show that Will Orpet had any cyanide when he met the girl or ever in all his life had any.

Where the State Has Failed.

"Granting that by his own admission, Orpet was in Heim's woods with Marion Lambert when she died, the state has failed to show he administered poison to her. It has failed to show by what possible means he could have administered poison to her. It has failed to show he had any poison to administer.

"It must be proved that at the moment of his opportunity, Orpet had in his possession the instrument of death. That proof, which is absolutely essential, is absolutely lacking in the state's case."

This was the crux of Mr. Potter's argument. From the weight with which he emphasized it, it was clear it will be a crucial point in the defense. Despite its plausibility, Judge Donnelly denied the motion to instruct a verdict of not guilty.

Wilkerson Uses Arithmetic.

Another glimpse of what the defense will rely upon to free Orpet was revealed by James H. Wilkerson, the boy's senior counsel, in an argument to have stricken from the record that portion of the testimony of Dr. Ralph Webster, the Chicago toxicologist, which tended to show that Orpet killed Marion Lambert by administering to her liquid potassium cyanide. Mr. Wilkerson brought out a fact which pointed impressively to suicide as the cause of the girl's death.

In establishing this point Mr. Wilkerson used a simple sum in arithmetic. From the transcript of evidence he showed that by the testimony of Dr. Webster, a state's witness, cyanide of potassium found in the form of a white powder encrusted on the right hand of Marion Lambert after death contained 58.16 per cent potassium cyanide and 31 per cent potassium carbonate, a precipitate caused by the exposure of the cyanide to the atmosphere during the twenty-four hours the body lay undiscovered in the snow.

Dr. Webster's analyses showed that the lumps of cyanide found by State's Attorney Dady in the greenhouse at the home of E. O. Orpet, the boy's father, were 48½ per cent pure and the cyanide obtained from the laboratory of the Deerfield High school, where Marion Lambert studied chemistry, was 91 per cent pure.

What Analyses Establish.

"The addition of 58.16 and 31 gives 89.16 per cent as the original strength of the potassium cyanide that killed Marion Lambert before exposure to the air had decomposed it," Mr. Wilkerson pointed out. "It will be seen that the 89.16 per cent strength of the original poison is almost the same as that of the cyanide taken from the Deerfield High school. Nothing is more definitely established by Dr. Webster's analyses than that the cyanide of the Orpet greenhouse could not have been the cyanide that caused the girl's death.

"It will be shown that Marion Lambert on the day before her death was found alone in the laboratory of the Deerfield High school just after Prof. Craegd, her chemistry teacher, had announced a lesson on cyanide. The comparative figures, developed by the analyses of the state's poison expert, taken in conjunction with this incident, would seem to indicate that the cyanide which killed Marion Lambert was procured by the girl herself for the purpose of committing suicide."

Mr. Wilkerson's motion was denied.

Rely on Rule of Law.

Strong reliance is to be placed by the defense upon that rule of law which makes it imperative for a jury to acquit if, by any reasonable construction, the evidence can be reconciled with the theory of Orpet's innocence. This became known during the day.

This rule of law seems a logical basis for hope of an acquittal. In one particular the Orpet case is one of the most remarkable in criminal records—from the same set of facts it is possible with equal facility and plausibility to conclude that Marion Lambert's death was either suicide or murder. The defense believes the jury will have no difficulty in reconciling the facts adduced by the state with the theory that the girl killed herself.

Mr. Potter based his argument to have the case taken from the jury on four points:

1. Lack of evidence that Orpet ever had cyanide in his possession.
2. Lack of plausible opportunity.
3. Lack of motive for murder.
4. Possibility that the girl killed herself.

"The only thing the prosecution has proven, upon which to base guilt so far as opportunity is concerned," said Mr. Potter, "is that by his own admission Will Orpet was in the woods with Marion Lambert when she died. The mere fact that he was present is no proof that he administered the poison.

"The proof in this record is that Marion Lambert had been taking medicine for a delicate condition. As a matter of fact, she knew before she died she was not in that condition. This was proved by the testimony of Josephine Davis, Dr. B. N. Parmenteer and by the letter which she wrote the night before her death to Miss Minnie Rumsey, her Sunday school teacher.

Motive for Suicide.

"The evidence in this case proves conclusively that she had no possible reason for taking abortion medicine. That excludes the theory that she was influenced to take the poison as medicine.

"On the contrary, the proof is conclusive that she had a motive for suicide. On the night of Feb. 6, when she slept with Florence Russell, in a three hour talk in bed Marion Lambert said she had heard Will Orpet was engaged to another; that he was going to come down from Madison to Lake Forest to see her soon, and if she found that the report of his engagement was true she did not know what she would do.

"On that same day Josephine Davis testified that at her birthday party Marion Lambert said if Will Orpet deserted her to marry another she would kill herself.

"It has been established she could have obtained cyanide of potassium in the greenhouse at her home or in the laboratory of the Deerfield High school. No proof has been introduced that Will Orpet obtained cyanide from the greenhouse at his father's place or that he knew where it was kept, or had any knowledge of it whatever.

Not Sufficient to Convict.

"On the question of motive, what possible motive could the boy have had to kill this girl? The state has shown they had an illicit love affair, that Orpet had admitted he was engaged to another girl—in these facts only the state finds its motive for murder.

"But granted that this raises a suspicion of a motive, granted also that the fact that Orpet was present when she died might raise a suspicion of opportunity, these two facts are not sufficient to convict this boy of murder.

"Then there is no proof in this case of the corpus delicti. It was proved that she died of cyanide of potassium. To prove the corpus delicti, a criminal agency as the cause of death must be established. No more proof has been adduced that he killed her than that she killed herself."

The opening statement for the defense will be made by Mr. Wilkerson on Monday.

ASSESSORS PENALIZE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR.

Barratt O'Hara, Who Filed No Schedule Last Year, Has $600 Added to $1,200 He Lists.

Lieut. Gov. Barratt O'Hara was penalized 50 per cent this year for neglecting to file a personal property schedule. The lieutenant governor filed no schedule last year. This year the board of assessors assessed him on $1,200 worth of personal property, and then, because he had filed no schedule, added $600 to the sum he was to be assessed upon.

Col. Milton J. Foreman of the First cavalry, who paid no personal property tax at his home last year, was assessed on $3,000 worth of personalty. Federal Judge Kenesaw M. Landis also was penalized 50 per cent. For failing to file a schedule the assessors, having assessed him on $1,200, raised the figure to $1,800.

Nellie L. Sessions of 5487 Blackstone avenue, who was assessed on $3,900 last year, will this year be taxed on $20,940. Catherine Thompson of 5406 East End avenue, who last year paid no personal property tax, this year will pay on $67,500. J. H. Defrees of the Windemere hotel was assessed on $8,300. The James E. Holden estate at 5401 Cornell avenue was taxed on $160,000.

BABY WEEK A BIG SUCCESS.

More than 300 Addresses Delivered to Children in Chicago Public Schools.

Baby week, conducted under the auspices of the health department, ended yesterday. More than three hundred addresses were made to children in public schools and many talks were made from automobiles to street corner crowds. "It has been a most successful week," said Health Commissioner Robertson.

"Tribune" Free Ice Fund Open for Subscriptions

The hot days are coming—the days when the mothers in the poorer districts will have trouble keeping baby's milk cool.

Infant ailments are most prevalent during the summer months and the mortality rate soars. Most infant diseases are attributable to improper nourishment. Milk is practically the only baby food. If the milk goes above a certain temperature it becomes impure rapidly. Impure milk means sickly babies and a high death rate. Sickly babies make poor future citizens. Well babies are the foundation of the nation. Well babies mean preparedness.

Do Your Bit.

Now is the time for you to do your bit in keeping baby's milk cool—not the babies on the boulevards and sunparlored apartments, but the babies in the congested tenement district, the babies who won't have pure milk unless you help.

Tomorrow THE TRIBUNE will start its annual summer ice fund for needy families and from then on until fall you will be given an opportunity not to give to charity, but to do your civic duty in giving aid to the most helpless of all the city's dependents, the babies. You probably have given to the European war sufferers, to preparedness propaganda, to political campaigns, to charity. Remember we wouldn't have so many sturdy boys on the way to Mexico now if they hadn't been strong, healthy babies.

Method of Distribution.

As in the past the ice fund will be administered by the United Charities. The ice will be distributed in two ways, first, directly to the homes, and, second, to day nurseries, baby tents, and fresh air schools maintained by the city. A total of $2,959 was expended in this work last year, and of the 848,100 pounds of ice distributed, 720,100 pounds went directly into the homes of the poor.

Yellow cards consisting of seven coupons will be issued as they are needed by the workers from the eleven district offices of the United Charities and by nurses of the Visiting Nurse association, the Infant Welfare society, the city health department, and the municipal tuberculosis sanitarium. Arrangements have been made with the Consumers company to deliver the ice at the door.

Coupon books calling for from 2,000 pounds to 10,000 pounds already have been issued to the institutional managers of some of the nurseries.

$1,000 FOUND IN A TAXI.

And Chauffeur Hunted Until He Found Out to Whom It Belonged.

Here is a chauffeur who certainly will go to heaven.

His name is H. Zarek. Last night he was called to take a party from the Hotel Sherman to the Northwestern station. Having performed the commission the chauffeur looked over his car and on the seat found a purse containing a $1,000 bill.

The taxi order was traced to W. B. Raymond, a guest at the Hotel Sherman, and his $1,000 bill was returned by the Shaw Taxicab company.

CELEBRATE GOLDEN WEDDING

Max Kramer, 82 Years Old, and Mrs. May Friedman Kramer, 68, Have Been Wed Fifty Years.

Max Kramer and Mrs. May Friedman Kramer celebrated their golden wedding anniversary yesterday at their residence, 1350 East Sixty-second street. Mr. Kramer met Miss Friedman, who is the last of that family of shoe merchants, in Philadelphia. He was in the notion business in Chicago, where he came at the age of 14 years. At present he is 82 years old and his wife 14 years younger. They have five children, Mrs. Sol S. Davis, Mrs. Emile S. Davis, and Leon, Arthur, and Belle Kramer. One boy, Jesse Kramer, is dead.

WAR CALL HITS SHAM WAR HARD

Not Thousand Men at U. S. W. V. Spectacle, but Serious Air Prevails.

What remains of the soldiery of Cook county staged a little war yesterday afternoon at Riverview park. The proceeds will be used for the expenses of the annual encampment of the United Spanish War Veterans in Chicago in September.

In all, there were not 1,000 men to conduct the imitation war, and most of those who participated were naval reserves or apprentices from the great lakes naval training station. A note of seriousness entered the tournament by the talk of Gov. Dunne, who spoke to the men before the sham battle commenced. oGv. Dunne was in Chicago because of the marriage of his son, who was called to Springfield with the national guard. He was accompanied by another son, Jerome Dunne, and by Col. M. R. Kelly.

Gov. Dunne told the men of the Sixth regiment who were present that he would do all he could to see that they left for Mexico at the same time as the other regiments.

"I know you are just as ready to respond to the call to duty as the men who are mobilizing in Springfield," he said. "We are told by Washington that we could have only six regiments. Don't be discouraged because the call has not come to you, and keep yourselves in good soldierly condition.

"We have been paying little attention to military equipment. For fifty years, xcept for the short Spanish war, we have had profound peace. But the time has come when we must prepare against assault from abroad. We know now that even an ocean 3,000 miles across does not protect a nation from aggression.

"If war comes, the chances are that every man now facing me will be called to duty. And I want to say that of the 10,000 men at Springfield not one has asked to be excused from duty. It is true that some thirty or forty wives and mothers dependent on the soldiers have asked to have the men excused, but that is all. An this great country is going to take care of all the families who are in want because of the call of the men to Mexico."

CORN PRODUCTS TRUST DISSOLVED BY COURT ORDER

Company Declared an Illegal Combination—Allied Concerns Also Included.

IS $80,000,000 CORPORATION

New York, June 24.—Dissolution of the Corn Products Refining company and its allied concerns as an illegal combination in restraint of trade was directed by Federal Judge Learned N. Hand in a decision filed today sustaining the complaint of the government.

Under the decree the federal trade commission, acting as a master in chancery, will arrange the details for the dissolution. This is the first time the commission has been called upon by a court to act in such a capacity.

The suit was instituted by the government on March 1, 1913, under the Sherman anti-trust law, and hearings had been held in New York and other cities before a special commissioner.

The Corn Products Refining company is an $80,000,000 corporation with plants in New York, Illinois, and other states. Edward T. Bedford of this city is president.

Other Defendants in Suit.

Other companies made defendants in the suit were the National Starch company, the Novelty company, and the St. Louis Syrup and Preserving company. There also were several individual defendants.

The form of the decree, Judge Hand said, would be similar to that in the government's suit against the International Harvester company, except the time in which to file a plan for dissolution will be 120 days, instead of the ninety allowed in the Harvester case.

Judge Hand declared he saw "no reason to exempt from the injunction the defendants Speyer, Boardman, Kelsey, and Nichola, who were directors for three years before the filing of the governmnt's petition and must be supposed to be privy to the general plans of the company." He added that "if they wish they may be excluded from such parts of the decree as cover any trade practices which terminated before Jan. 1, 1910."

Attempted to Fix Prices.

The Corn Products company, the decision states, manipulated and attempted to fix prices and to restrict production by dismantling plants and suppressing proposed companies. The decision declares it was the purpose of the combination to control the sirup industry, and tells of freight rates and transit privileges which were heavy advantages to the company.

"The Corn Products Refining company's industrial history," Judge Hand stated, "has not only been characterized throughout by attempts to create sporadic competition but we have the richest possible evidence that it never meant to maintain it as a policy, but only to drive out weak competitors so as to gain the field."

"All their conduct illustrates the kind of competition which tries to prevent the development of newcomers who might permanently secure their own positions. The company has tried throughout by its power temporarily to affect commercial conditions so to obscure the actual industrial facts as to make impossible any test of relative strength."

CONTROLLED BIG PRODUCTION.

When the government initiated the anti-trust action in March, 1913, it was contended that the company controlled 66 per cent of the entire production of starch and glucose made from corn and 80 per cent of the interstate trade in mixed sirups. It also was alleged it sold 30 per cent of the output to candy manufacturers.

The Corn Products company was chartered in New Jersey in 1902 and included the Glucose Sugar Refining company, the National Starch company, the New York Glucose company, the Illinois Sugar Refining company, and the Charles Pope Glucose company.

The Corn Products Refining company was chartered in New Jersey in 1906, taking in the Corn Products company and the latter's subsidiaries, absorbing all except the National Starch company.

Take In Six More Plants.

The National Starch Manufacturing company was formed in 1890 by joining twenty different factories. In 1900 the concern was reorganized as the National Starch company and six more plants were taken in. All but seven shares of the stock, it was shown, were owned by the Corn Products Refining company.

The government contended that William Rockefeller, John D. Archbold, the late H. H. Rogers, and E. T. Bedford, all of whom were dominant figures in the Standard Oil group in 1906, when the Corn Products Refining company was formed, made handsome profits through its organization.

FRANK BOPP HELD AS SLAYER OF POLICEMAN MALLOW.

Three Others, Including Grace Lytle, 17 Years Old, Held as Accessories, and a Fourth Is Sought.

Frank Bopp, 1711 Monroe street, was held to the grand jury yesterday by a coroner's jury for the murder of Motorcycle Policeman Hermann Mallow in Oak Park early on the morning of June 14. Three others, including Grace Lytle, 17 years old, were held on charges of accessory to murder after the fact and recommendation was made that a fourth man, who is now being sought, be apprehended and held on a similar charge. Those held as accessories besides the Lytle girl are Frank McErlane, who roomed with Bopp, and Fred Michalini, or Meyers, as he is sometimes known. The man sought is Warren Ralston.

THE real estate market last week gave unmistakeable evidence of the unsettling effect of the Mexican trouble, to say nothing of the presidential campaign and the European war. The element of uncertainty as to what is to come from each of the causes named is having a somewhat disquieting effect, particularly among the more conservative operators. Several good sized deals are said to have been held up because of this, but it is believed they will be carried through during the next week or two.

Considering these handicaps, the market made a surprisingly good showing. Perhaps the number of really important transactions was not quite up to the average of the last few weeks, but the movement of the cheaper class of property, mostly lots, was fully up to the average, as evidenced by the figures of the recorder's office.

Lake Geneva Deal.

One of the most interesting features of the week's market was the deal whereby the handsome country home of the late John M. Smyth at Lake Geneva passed into the possession of E. W. Pardridge.

Apartment property also made a surprisingly good showing, while purchases involving large building projects were also conspicuous features of the market.

The most important of these was the west side deal, reported late in the week, involving an investment of about $250,000 in land and the proposed building. It covers the property at the southeast corner of Fifteenth and Laflin streets, 264x124 feet, with the B. & O. C. T. railroad on the south and improved with three three story and five five story buildings. It has been sold to William Seymour, the consideration as well as the name of the seller being withheld, but the Otis Elevator company is said to have been the grantor.

It is announced that the entire plot will be improved with a five story sprinkled mill building to cost about $180,000, which has been leased to the Riley-Schubert-Grossman company, a mail order concern. The terms of the lease are withheld, but it is said to contain an option of purchase at $250,000. The firm is now located at the southwest corner of Jackson boulevard and Loomis streets, where it began business. Hugo D. Loeb and Miltenberg & Guettel represented all the parties.

Indiana Avenue Sale.

Another interesting transaction was the sale by Edward I. and Marie C. Bloom to John A. Hayes of the 106x160 feet, east front, on Indiana avenue, in the block between Twenty-second and Twenty-third streets, for an indicated consideration of $75,000. Mr. Hayes subsequently conveyed to the Chicago Title and Trust company, trustee. It is stated the negotiations are on for the construction of a six story mercantile building for the occupancy of an automobile concern, to cost about $150,000. There are old improvements on the property which are said to be have been given no value in the transaction. Thomas E. Sullivan & Co., William H. Gehring, and Joseph A. Bitsel were the brokers.

Alexander Bauer purchased from Frank Kaplan and Charles Hasterlik the old Purcell malt house property, 116x127 feet, on Larrabee street, just north of Chicago avenue, which he will improve with a garage with a capacity of 300 machines, one of the largest in the city, which is expected to cost about $70,000. He paid $28,000 for the property, the transfer being subject to an incumbrance of $12,000. The building will be three stories and will be devoted principally to providing accommodations for trucks and business cars.

Plans $50,000 Laundry.

John White of the White Lumber company purchased from C. E. Ernst the 81x100 feet at the southeast corner of North Clark and Ainslie streets, which will be improved with a high grade sanitary daylight laundry to cost about $50,000. George W. Walker and Edward C. Hoyer were the brokers.

The Anchor Leather company, tanners, purchased from William A. Dougal the property at the southwest corner of Hickory and Division streets, comprising 12,500 square feet, for an indicated consideration of $14,000. It will be improved with a three story and basement building to cost about $35,000. Sidney Kehnweiler & Co. represented the purchasers.

Mrs. H. Harriet Dale has sold through Willis & Frankenstein to Max Annenberg, circulation manager of THE TRIBUNE, the vacant 64x165 feet at 590 Belmont avenue for $11,840. Mr. Annenberg will improve with a high grade six apartment building with garages to cost about $45,000.

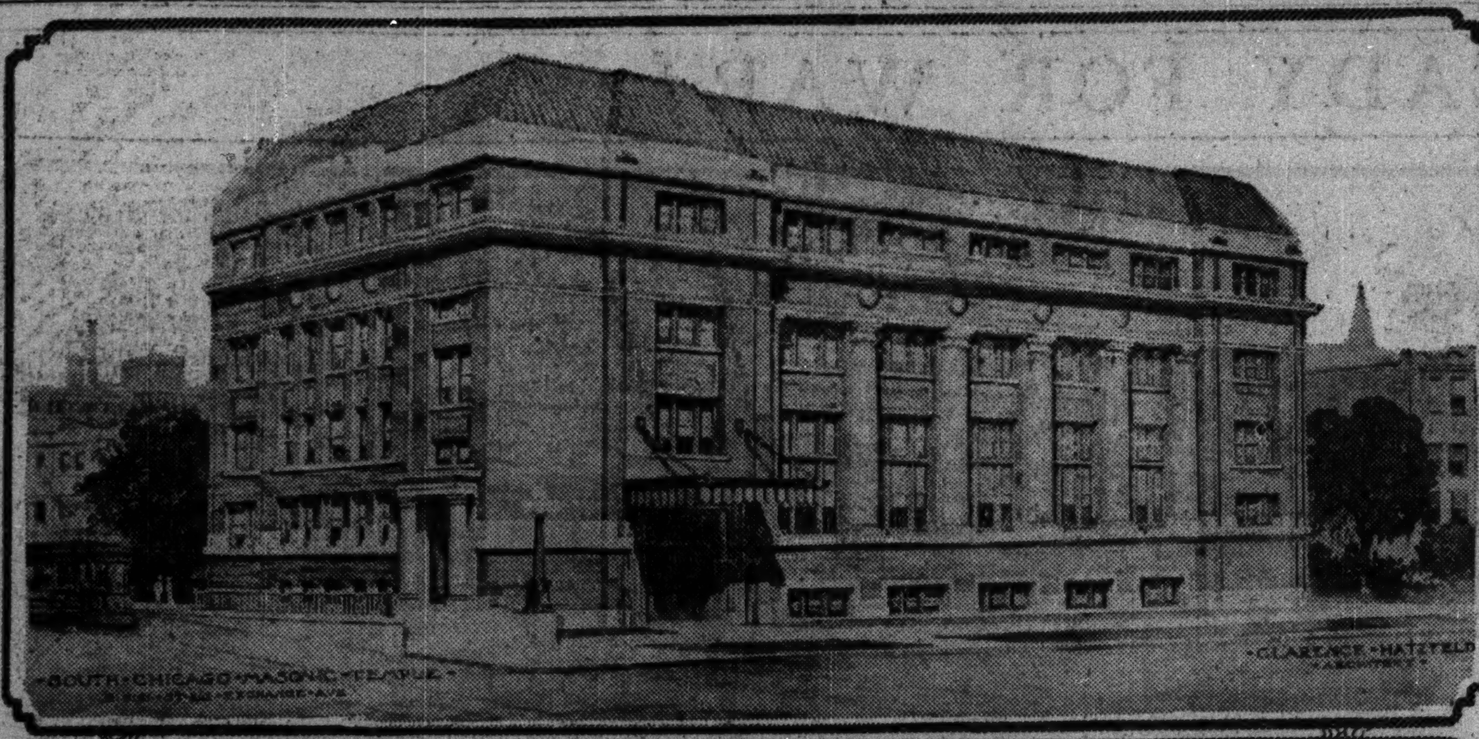
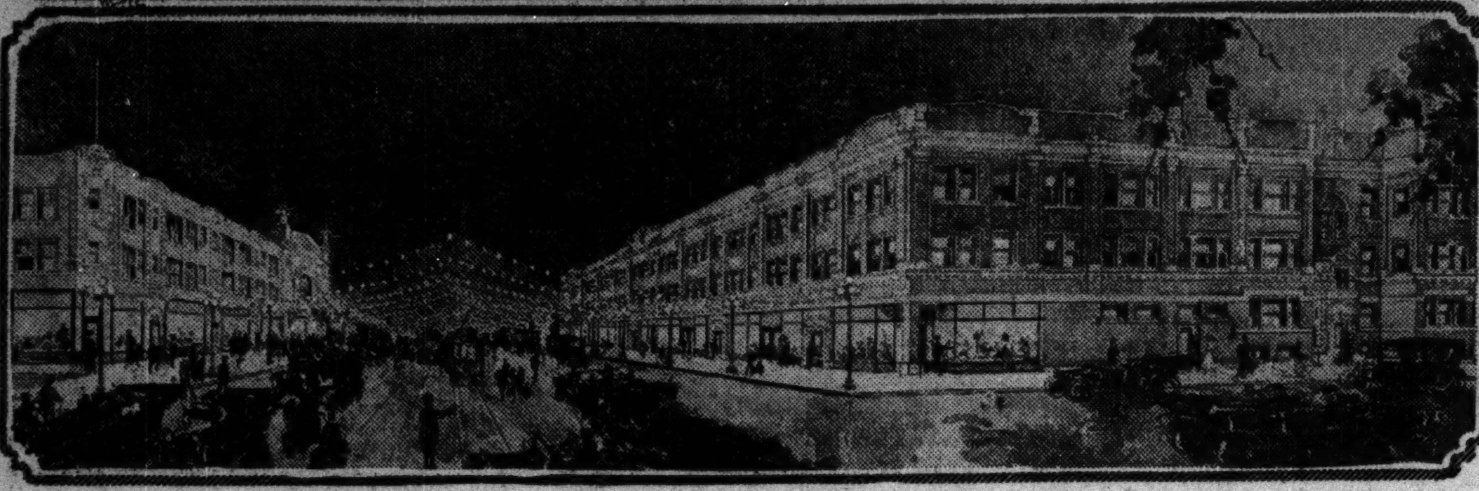
BEGIN WORK ON SOUTH CHICAGO MASONIC TEMPLE

Calumet Region to Have $125,000 Four Story Building at Ninety-first Street and Exchange Avenue.





New Buildings in Austin.

Work has been begun on the new Masonic temple at the southeast corner of Ninety-first street and Exchange avenue, South Chicago. It will be four stories high, will occupy a lot 61x132 feet and will cost about $125,000. The corner stone will be laid in a short time and it is hoped to have it completed before the end of the year.

The first floor will contain an auditorium with accommodations for about 1,000, to which have been added parlors and other accessories, also a large stage. A part of the basement will be utilized for a banquet hall. The entire floor above the auditorium is for the principal lodge halls, combined with special features for the various lodges which are to have quarters in the building, to which have been added club quarters, smoking rooms, parlors, etc. Dr. B. M. Arnold is president of the association, while the building was designed by Architect Clarence Hatzfeld.

The southeast and the southwest corners of Cicero and West End avenues are to be improved with exceedingly attractive buildings by G. H. Gottschalk & Co. The building at the southeast corner will be three stories on a lot 150x125 feet, will contain eight stores, twelve flats of two rooms and kitchenette and a 1,600 seat theater.

The owner is Joseph Trinz, who will personally conduct the theater in connection with the chain which he conducts throughout the city. Its cost is placed at $145,000. The building at the southwest corner, owned by Adolph Raphael, will be on a lot 180x100 feet and will contain eleven stores, twenty-seven flats, and four offices and seven garages. Its cost is expected to be $160,000. Greenebaum Sons Bank and Trust company made a bond issue loan of $90,000 on the first named building and $100,000 on the latter. Walter W. Ahlschager is the architect.

OUTSIDE DEALS SHOW ACTIVITY

Considerable More Doing in Business Property than in Week Previous.

There was considerable doing in outside business property, the showing being decidedly better than for the previous week.

An interesting transaction in Sixty-third street business property was the recording of the deed by which Julius Kramer of the Pullman Couch company, took title by sheriff's deed to the property at the southwest corner of Ashland avenue, lot 100x160 feet, improved with a two story building containing 9 stores on the ground floor and 5 offices and 5 apartments above. Mr. Kramer took title for himself and partner, J. L. Schadig, the deed being issued, pursuant to the sale, held April 11, 1916, at which the accepted bid was $128,706. Sonnenschein, Berkson & Fishell attended to the legal details.

Another south side deal covered the property at 6831-37 Stony Island avenue, which was sold by Joseph M. Browarsky, the builder, to Edgar Wolfe for a reported consideration of $50,000, subject to an incumbrance of $30,000. The lot fronts sixty-three feet, with a depth of 112, and is being improved with a building, three stories and basement, containing four stores and six apartments.

Crawford Avenue Deal.

Frank A. Carolin sold to Hulda Johnson the property at the northwest corner of Crawford and Montrose avenues, lot 52x125 feet, improved with a two story business building. It was sold for a reported consideration of $50,000, subject to an incumbrance of $30,000. The building is now being remodeled into a store, flat, and office building. The sale was negotiated by Richard A. Connell, who represented Mrs. Johnson, and C. H. Connelly, who represented Mr. Carolin.

Samuel Pikensky has purchased from Benjamin Cohen the property on Ridgeway avenue, southwest corner of West Fifteenth street, lot 50x125, east front, with store and flat improvements, for an indicated consideration of $30,000, subject to an incumbrance of $25,800.

Factory Property Deal.

A deal in north side factory property, made a matter of record, was the sale by William D. Morris to William D. Rosenberger and Samuel Gessless of the property at 609-13 North La Salle street, eighty-one feet south of West Ontario street, for an indicated consideration of $25,000, subject to an incumbrance of $12,000.

The lot is 54x100 feet and is improved with a five story and basement mill sprinkled building occupied by several tenants. J. J. Harrington, who negotiated the deal, will have charge of the building.

FEDERAL RESERVE GROWS.

Store of Gold Increases about $6,000,000 During Week Ending June 23.

Washington, D. C., June 24.—The total gold reserve of the federal reserve system increased about $6,000,000 during the week ending June 23, according to a statement of the banks' condition issued today.

FACTORS IN SUBDIVIDING TO INSURE GOOD RESULTS.

The real estate operator who is so lazy or so blind as to fail to see the necessity for subdividing his land in partial accordance at least with its character truly deserves to reap the very inconsiderate returns which will most surely be his, says Harland Bartholomew, engineer St. Louis plan commission, in Realty. He has failed to learn the lesson so dearly purchased by those of his fellows left with miserable failures on their hands in the form of partially sold tracts with heavy carrying charges and constantly depleted returns. It is not so much that land has been overexploited as that its adaptation to function has been unappreciated. Nonpaying investments in realty have led to an increased consideration of the fundamentals of land subdivision.

There are several now generally accepted basic factors to be borne in mind in all land subdivisions. These may be briefly stated as follows:

Relation of subdivision to city and to neighboring property.

The major and minor systems of streets.

Lot and block sizes.

Recreational facilities.

Public building sites.

To properly subdivide land is no simple task. To so divide a tract, however, with sufficient care and forethought to warrant a paying investment which might otherwise result in failure would seem to be an exceedingly wise procedure, particularly where the actual cost of planning would be an inconsiderable proportion of the amount of value represented. Many of the most successful subdivisions are the result of careful planning. The more progressive dealers in realty are appreciating the principles of proper land subdivisions and the discriminating buyers already are alive to the opportunities which are being presented.

GOOD MOVEMENT IN APARTMENT HOUSE PROPERTY

Most Important Deal of the Week Is Evanston Flat Sale.

There was a good movement of apartment house property last week considering the generally dull market conditions which prevailed. Under the circumstances it is an encouraging sign in view of the inactivity in this class of property for some time.

Outside of the sale by Fred Becklenberg to the John M. Smyth heirs of the new high grade thirty-five apartment building at 2311-19 Commonwealth avenue for $190,000 in connection with the sale of the John M. Smyth country home at Lake Geneva, the most important deal of the week was the sale by Martha Zimmermann to James P. Grier of the eighteen apartment building on Michigan avenue, Evanston, 100 feet south of Lee street, known as the Michigan Court apartments, for a reported consideration of $110,000.

The purchaser conveyed in part payment the twelve flat building at the northwest corner of Davis street and Oak avenue, Evanston, which was conveyed for a reported consideration of $60,000; also the property at the northeast corner of Grove street and Oak avenue at a reported valuation of $17,500. Mason & Smart were the brokers representing both parties.

Lincoln Street Deal.

The twenty-four flat building on a lot 100x152 feet, west front, in Lincoln street, 192 feet north of Montrose boulevard, was sold by Louis Rosenbluth to George A. Fry for an indicated consideration of $80,000, subject to $30,000.

The eighteen apartment building at the northeast corner of Green and Seventy-seventh streets, on a lot 80x124 feet, was conveyed by Ernest Pearson et al. to Joseph Weidenhoff, for an indicated consideration of $70,725, subject to $45,725.

Murray Wolbach sold to John H. Crawford the twelve flat building with 60x134 feet of ground at the northeast corner of Sixty-seventh place and Dorchester avenue, for an indicated consideration of $46,500, subject to an incumbrance of $30,000. In part payment the purchaser conveyed the eight apartment buildings at the southwest corner of Seventy-third street and Blackstone avenue, 67x125 feet, for $23,500, subject to $14,000. Gren M. Gooder of W. K. Young & Bro. was the broker.

Prairie Avenue Sale.

The twenty-four apartment building at the northwest corner of Fifty-fourth street and Prairie avenue on a lot 100x180 feet has been sold by the Michigan Trust company of Grand Rapids, Mich., to Samuel and Charles Rothschild for a reported cash consideration of $67,500. The sale was negotiated by Grapperhaus, Russell & Co.

The apartment house property at 2828-30 Cambridge avenue has been sold by Thomas Tagney to Frank A. Coari for a reported consideration of $42,000, subject to an incumbrance of $20,000. John B. De Voney negotiated the sale.

R. B. Clark has sold to Fred W. Haines of Trenton, Mich., the property in Sixty-fourth street, between Maryland and Drexel avenues, lot 101x126 feet, north front, with flat improvements, for an indicated consideration of $32,000, subject to an incumbrance of $17,000.

Buys Row of Residences.

W. O. Baird has sold to Julia S. Angell the property on Kolmar avenue, 250 feet south of Lexington street, 275x116½ feet, west front, with row of residences, for an indicated consideration of $44,000, subject to an incumbrance of $27,500.

The six apartment building on a lot 50x125 feet, east front, in Harding avenue, 141 feet south of Wrightwood avenue, has been sold by J. B. Dahl to Kristina Thorgerson for an indicated consideration of $25,000, subject to an incumbrance of $10,000.

The six apartment building at 4911-15 Prairie avenue has been sold by Kelly Bros. to Charles L. White for an indicated consideration of $27,500, subject to an incumbrance of $17,500. The purchaser conveyed in part payment vacant property in the south shore district. F. P. Basko represented both parties.

AFFIRMS FOELL DECREE.

The Supreme court handed down late last week an interesting decision in which it was held that a restriction against the erection of any but a single detached dwelling house does not prohibit the erection of a flat or apartment building. The decision, which was delivered by Chief Justice Craig, affirmed the decree entered by Judge Foell in the case of Voorhees vs. Blum et al. Levinson & Hoffman represented Blum, while Harry S. Mecartney represented Mrs. Voorhees.

Leases and Loans.

There was little doing of any importance in leases or loans last week, the downtown district being without a representation in the way of leases, while with the exception of the 4½ per cent loan made by Edgar M. Snow & Co. there was nothing of any moment in loans. The Snow loan is for $50,000 and runs five years. It is secured by the property at 438-40 South State street, lot 25x100 feet, improved with a five story and basement building, the property being between Van Buren and Harrison streets.

Joseph H. Buttas gave a trust deed to the Fort Dearborn Trust and Savings bank to secure $130,000, seven years at 6 per cent, secured by the property at the northwest corner of Surf street and Pine Grove avenue, lot 100x197 feet, occupied by the Chesterfield apartments.

The Chicago Title and Trust company is trustee in a loan of $125,000, five years at 5½ per cent, to Isaac Ettelson on the property at the southeast corner of Belmont avenue and Broadway, 98x150 feet, with store and flat improvements.

Greenebaum Sons Bank and Trust company has made a serial bond issue loan of $90,000, running seven years at 6 per cent, to Joseph Trinz on the West End building at the southeast corner of Cicero and West End avenues.

A. S. Peabody is trustee in a loan of $45,000, six years at 6 per cent, under the Torrens system, to Bertha Hobschied, secured by the property in South Park avenue 369 feet south of Sixty-first street, lot 99x178 feet, east front, with new flat improvements.

Greenebaum Sons Bank and Trust company is trustee in a loan of $37,500, maturing serially up to six years at 6 per cent, to James Kutten, secured by the property at 1526-34 North Crawford avenue, 109x125 feet, improved with a two story store, hall, and loft building.

Record was made of the lease by Dr. L. Read Brown et al. to the Heusel Cut Rate Drug company of the store at 4000 Irving Park boulevard for a term from Jan. 1, 1917, to Dec. 31, 1931, for an indicated term rent of $25,500.

LANDMARK MAKES WAY FOR HIGH GRADE FLATS.

Another of Chicago's landmarks is scheduled to make way for a high grade apartment building. Venice Elizabeth Stephens has sold to Samuel Lanski the property at 5130-38 South Park avenue. A $100,000 structure of white brick with stone trimmings will be erected and will supplant a little one story frame building nearly eighty years old which formerly stood at Fifty-first street and South Park avenue and which was operated as an inn by James Horan.

The new building, which will overlook Washington Park, will contain twenty-four apartments of two, three, four, five, and six rooms. It will be called "The Venetian" in honor of the grantor.

One of the features will be a model dining room, furnished like a private dining car with built-in settees and chairs. The old inn building used to be a resting place for the funeral cortèges on the way to Oakwood cemetery, when Washington park was a wilderness and when the ride to the city was thought to be a tedious journey. The size of the lot is 70x215 feet. Julius J. Cohen represented both parties and will superintend the construction of the building, which was designed by Thomas R. Bishop.

TORRENS SYSTEM WINS IN STATE SUPREME COURT.

By affirming the decree of Judge Smith of the Circuit court the Illinois Supreme court on Thursday rendered a decision of great importance and of particular interest to real estate and loan brokers and to corporations who act as trustees.

When Albert J. Brockman registered the title to property at 4052 Kenmore avenue, which he had sold to Christine F. Wachs, Chester C. Broomell, who is trustee in the loan secured on the property, asked the court to deny the application on the plea that the value of the property would be diminished by registering in the Torrens system.

Judge Smith refused the plea and declined to hear evidence in its support, holding that the right of the owner of a fee simple title to show his title in any manner he chose cannot be interfered with, and that the rights of a trustee under a mortgage loan are not adversely affected by registration of the title. This decision the Supreme court now upholds.

Charles T. Farson represented Brockman's client in the proceedings.

NORWOOD PARK BUNGALOWS.

The construction of a number of bungalows in Norwood Park to cost about $4,500 each, at the northeast corner of Hobart street and Nina avenue, generally known as the "Circle," is involved in the sale by Charles Dickinson of the Albert Dickinson Seed company to A. C. Dobrick. The property is 476x204 feet, southwest front, and is reported to have been sold at the rate of about $15 a foot. It is the last large tract of vacant on the Circle and the nine lots will be improved by Mr. Dobrick as indicated. H. E. King and H. J. Thorsen were the brokers.

E. W. PARDRIDGE BUYS J. M. SMYTH COUNTRY HOME

Secures What Is Considered One of the Choicest Lake Geneva Estates.

Probably the most interesting transaction of the week was the one involving the acquirement of the handsome Lake Geneva country home of the late John M. Smyth by E. W. Pardridge. The property, which is one of the most attractive of the many beautiful homes at that point, was first conveyed by Thomas M. Smyth, Mrs. Mary Smyth Nelson, Mrs. Jane Smyth Patera, and John M. Smyth to Fred Becklenberg, the builder, who conveyed in part payment the high grade thirty-five apartment building at 2311-19 Commonwealth avenue, just west of Lincoln Park and south of Fullerton parkway, for an indicated consideration of $190,000, subject to an incumbrance of $90,000.

Mr. Becklenberg then conveyed the Lake Geneva property to Mr. Pardridge, the consideration being withheld. In the transfer to Mr. Becklenberg it was given a value of $112,000, clear. The apartment building occupies a lot 111x197 feet and is stated to have a gross annual rent of about $24,000.

Fronts on Lake Geneva.

There are fifty-six acres in the Lake Geneva property with 2,400 feet of lake frontage, 1,100 feet of which is terraced and ornamented with shrubbery. The house is a large, attractive structure, and was occupied by Mr. Smyth as his summer home for over twenty years. It was one of the show places of Lake Geneva.

The steam yacht, furniture of the house, stables, and equipment were included. Both parties were represented by Thomas H. & L. Thomas Kelley. The latter, who is a son of the former, is a first lieutenant of Battery D.

North Side Deal.

A notable deal in high class north side vacant was reported in the sale by Morris Frankfurter to Francis Ryan of the property at the southwest corner of Pine Grove avenue and Surf street, 148 feet on the former and 164 feet on Surf street, for a reported consideration of $45,000. The purchase is said to have been made as a speculation, owing to the rapid advance in values in that section, Mr. Ryan having no plans in the way of improvement. The office of John B. De Voney represented all the parties.

An interesting deal in vacant in the new north side harbor terminal district was reported by White & Tabor, in which $282.50 a front foot was paid for the 100x130 feet at 203-211 East Chicago avenue. The property was sold by the Old Reliable Motor Truck company to L. M. Richardson for a reported consideration of $28,250, subject to an incumbrance of $7,500.

TWO HIGH GRADE DEALS IN RESIDENCE VACANT CLOSED.

Two interesting deals in high grade residence vacant, which, it is announced, will be handsomely improved, were closed during the week.

A notable Kenwood transaction was the conveyance by Edward F. Swift to Jacob Newman, who then transferred to Sophia R. Adler, wife of Max Adler, the 71x250 feet, west front, on Greenwood avenue, 100 feet north of Fiftieth street, for an expressed consideration of $21,300, which is at the rate of $300 a front foot. It is understood that Mr. Adler plans to improve with a handsome residence.

The other transaction covered the forty feet on Sheridan road 100 feet south of the corner of Stratford place. It will be recalled that the property was recently purchased by John F. Brady, who now transfers the same to Robert Lay through Baird & Warner for a reported consideration of $21,000, which is at the rate of a little in excess of $500 a front foot. It is stated that Mr. Lay contemplates improving with a high class town residence.

G. O. P. LEADERS FOR WARREN AS HUGHES MANAGER

Michigan Man One of Outstanding Candidates for Committee Chairman.

BY CHARLES N. WHEELER.

New York, June 24.—[Special.]—Charles B. Warren of Michigan, a member of the Crane-Penrose subcommittee, is the candidate of the so-called Old Guard contingent for chairman of the national committee.

This became known today following a conference between Mr. Hughes and Senator Warren G. Harding of Ohio, chairman and keynoter of the recent national convention and chairman of the notification committee.

Congressman William B. McKinley also called on Mr. Hughes and is reliably reported to be ready to indorse the Michigan man if there appears to be any chance of his selection by Hughes.

Congressman McKinley told Mr. Hughes there could be no doubt that the next congress would be overwhelmingly Republican and that the Republican national ticket would go in with a great sweep.

He said that the Republicans would gain enough congressmen in Kansas, Illinois and Indiana alone to wipe out the present Democratic majority.

Senator Harding and a number of Washington statesmen affiliated with the Crane-Penrose forces have reported to the guard headquarters at the Biltmore hotel. James A. Hemenway of Indiana is the chief doorkeeper at this retreat.

Chance to Land Warren.

That the Crane people believe there is a fighting chance to land Warren was indicated in the inspired information passed out to the newspaper men late in the day, coming direct from the Biltmore retreat and intended to correct the impression that Warren is one of the dyed-in-the-wool Old Guardsmen, as the term was used in the 1912 scrap.

Emissaries from the Crane camp said Warren was not one of the 1912 buccaneers, but has been all along an independent worker for the Republican cause. They let it be known that he is a real scout, a good fellow, and with uplift tendencies.

Select Manager Within Week.

Before departing for Bridgehampton late today Mr. Hughes intimated that the national chairman might be selected next week. He made it clear that there was no connection between the delay in the notification ceremony and the selection of a chairman.

He has some twenty-five names to pick from and is trying to get a man in whom the country will have confidence and at the same time be an efficient head of the committee.

Strong opposition to Warren is being encouraged by Gov. Whitman, who would like to see either William Hayward, former secretary of the committee, or William R. Wilcox, one of Hughes' first appointees to the public service commission, named for the big job.

Notification in July.

Senator Harding intimated, after leaving Mr. Hughes, that the notification ceremony would be delayed until the second week in July at least.

He said that one of the issues of first magnitude in the coming campaign will be Mexico. For publication he permitted this statement to be recorded:

"Nothing can happen in Mexico, whether it be out and out war or a retreat, that can help the Democratic administration. Today's situation is a direct result of the blundering of two years, and every day that passes adds just that much more to the general condemnation of the administration's record in the minds of the people."

When the notification is formally made Harding again will do the keynoting, and it is understood he will lay particular stress on the Mexican situation and the conditions to be met after the war, which will be set forth exhaustively in Hughes' formal reply.

That Mr. Hughes may have something to say before his notification was intimated today. He said if the spirit moved him and he deemed it his duty to talk in the meantime he thought he might find both the words and the determination to speak out.

"I have met advisers from all sections of the country," he said, with a smile, today, "and I am now going to Bridgehampton to take counsel with my special adviser—Mrs. Hughes. I have followed her advice pretty generally on many things and I want to have a quiet day with the family tomorrow."

Moose Leaders Here Today.

The eastern wing of the Progressive national committee, armed with copies of Roosevelt's stirring letter in behalf of Hughes, departed on the Lake Shore Limited this afternoon for Chicago. They will hold a caucus at the Auditorium hotel tomorrow evening for the purpose of getting as many committeemen as possible lined up for the Roosevelt program that will be submitted Monday.

The party leaving today were George W. Perkins and Oscar King Davis, secretary of the committee; H. P. Gardner, Maine; William Savacool, New Hampshire; Dr. H. Nelson Jackson, Vermont; Matthew Hale, Massachusetts; Herbert Knox Smith, Connecticut, and Dr. Edward H. Harris of Rhode Island.

NORTH SIDE ASSOCIATION WILL BE FORMED MONDAY.

The proposed organization of the "North Side Commercial association" from the separate district bodies will be passed upon by representatives from all sections at a dinner to be held Monday evening at the Edgewater Beach hotel. Spearman Lewis and H. Van H. Chase will be the speakers.

The movement to consolidate the smaller district civic bodies is being carried out at the instance of the heads of seven sectional organizations.

These are J. A. Cordell, Argyle district; George W. Kolbe, Belmont district; Charles Coulou, south end of Clark street; C. A. Johnson, north end of Clark street; O. F. Paisley, North Edgewater district; Charles Kleinfelder and J. C. Curry, Rogers Park district; and H. D. Schiller, Wilson avenue district.

A permanent organization, including directors and officers, will be elected at the meeting. Three hundred have already accepted invitations.

THOMPSON MEN MAKING SLATE

Say It Will Sweep Great Majority of Committeemen Before It.

ALL BUT TEN WARDS.

Another move to leave Charles S. Deneen and Edward J. Brundage factional leaders with nothing in Cook county to lead and so to establish a sort of harmony in Republican county politics is well under way, according to information which circulated yesterday among members of the county committee.

Those back of the move say the organization slate will be eminently satisfactory to the Thompson forces and that Brundage and Deneen will have only ten of the thirty-five wards in the city to divide between them. The plan is for the Thompson battlers to take the various committeemen right out from under the other two leaders by putting up an organization slate to satisfy the great majority of the committee.

Deneen Leaders Gather.

Leaders of the Deneen forces in state and county will get together tomorrow to discuss slates and plans of campaign. Meanwhile, Isaac N. Powell, the Deneen "harmonizer" on the committee of three, shows little liking for any get-together propositions. The Deneenites do not wish to give the appearance of rejecting all peace overtures, but neither do they want it said that they entered peace negotiations and then backed out because they could not obtain satisfactory terms.

President Edmund J. James' refusal to seek the Republican nomination for governor "at the present time" has left the Deneenites in a bad way for a man to head their state ticket. Several of the Deneen leaders in Cook county, including Ald. Henry D. Capitain, Isaac N. Powell, and Thomas J. Healy, have shown an inclination to support Col. Frank L. Smith of Dwight, but Mr. Deneen and Roy O. West have not looked upon Col. Smith's candidacy with enthusiasm.

Andrew Russel of Jacksonville arrived in Chicago last night, bringing with him the definite announcement that he is no longer a candidate for the Republican nomination for governor. Instead Mr. Russel is seeking the office of state auditor.

Merriam Not Acceptable.

Efforts by the Progressives to make Ald. Charles E. Merriam an anti-Lowden candidate for the Republican nomination are not received with approval by the Deneen leaders, who do not feel that the alderman will make a strong candidate on state issues, especially outside Chicago.

Col. Frank O. Lowden leaves Chicago this evening for a trip around the state. A series of receptions, banquets, and massmeetings await him in twenty different towns.

Sheriff John E. Traeger flattened out his own gubernatorial boom yesterday by declaring himself not a candidate for the Democratic nomination in opposition to Gov. Dunne. Attorney General P. J. Lucey and Congressman William Elza Williams remain as the two men in the field most likely to receive the Sullivan indorsement. The sheriff's declination, it appears, is based upon his belief that there will be a Republican landslide which will bury the Democratic state ticket. In Cook county, however, the sheriff has hopes that Democracy will triumph.

The Sullivanites are making it their slogan that "a vote for Hughes is a vote for Mayor Thompson." The executive committee of the Young Men's National Democratic club assembled at the Hotel Sherman yesterday and indorsed Woodrow Wilson as "the greatest president of the age."

M. I. CONNEY FOUND DEAD IN WASHINGTON PARK LAGOON.

Brother-in-Law Believes He Fell Into Water in Darkness While on His Way Home.

Anxiety concerning the disappearance of Moses I. Conney, retired manufacturer, was dissipated yesterday when Mr. Conney's body was found in the lagoon in Washington park.

It is the opinion of William Rothschild, a member of the old general merchandise firm of Rothschild Bros., who is a brother-in-law of Mr. Conney, that Conney was walking home through the park and fell into the lagoon in the darkness.

Conney, who lived at 3200 South Park avenue, had attended a card party at the residence of Henry Kuh, 4404 Ellis avenue, a member of the firm of Kuh, Nathan & Fischer, on the night of June 21. He left for his home about 12:30, expecting to take a Cottage Grove avenue car. It is presumed now he decided to walk.

CITY BATHING BEACHES OPEN FOR 1916 SEASON.

Dedication Ceremonies at Clarendon Not to Be Held Till All Details Are Complete.

City bathing beaches, with the exception of Clarendon beach, are open for the 1916 season. The opening of Clarendon beach, scheduled for yesterday, was postponed until Monday because of failure to complete the locker system and electric installation. Dedication ceremonies will be held after the season is well under way. Bathers will be allowed on the beach today, but the city will not give out suits until Monday.

Jackson Park, Diversey, Calumet, Rocky Ledge, and Washington Heights beaches are open and fair sized crowds were present yesterday.

The temperature of the water, as given by the south park commissioners, was 62.

MOOSE TICKET WITHOUT T. R., PARKER'S HOPE

Committeeman from Louisiana Says South and West Have Rights.

With the fixed determination to demand a Progressive national ticket "in justice to the south and west," John M. Parker of New Orleans, Bull Moose candidate for vice president, reached Chicago last night for the meeting of the Progressive national committee tomorrow.

Like other Progressive leaders, Mr. Parker is convinced that Theodore Roosevelt will decline the third party nomination and indorse the candidacy of Charles Evans Hughes, but Mr. Parker wants to see some Progressive named in place of Col. Roosevelt at the head of the Bull Moose national ticket.

"There is nothing personal in my wishes," Mr. Parker explained, "but I don't believe the Progressive party should be allowed to die. We'll need it four years from now. It is the only party which offers men of the south an opportunity to vote in accordance with their convictions, for they can never vote with the Republican party and many of them do not believe in the principles of the Democrats.

Wants Ticket in Field.

"For one—and I think there will be many with me—I shall demand and fight for a Progressive national ticket. Who the nominee should be I am not prepared to say, but we are not going to lay down our arms just yet."

Col. James M. Ingersoll of Pocatello, Idaho, Progressive national committeeman, also reached Chicago yesterday and issued a pronunciamento to the effect that he will support neither Mr. Hughes nor Mr. Wilson.

The colonel announced himself in favor of giving Col. Roosevelt another chance to accept the Progressive nomination. If the Oyster Bay colonel again refuses, the Pocatello colonel expresses the opinion that "it is a good thing a man doesn't have to vote."

Here's Hot Stuff.

"We are asked by the Democrats to support a school teacher who is all theory and words," Col. Ingersoll said. "By the Republicans we are asked to support a man who is primarily a cold blooded, selfish New York lawyer, a man who has lived well at the expense of his unfortunate clients. Later we find him handing down Standard Oil and Tobacco trust reasonable monopoly court decisions. A reasonable monopoly is impossible.

"From the above you will understand that I have little use for Candidate Wilson and still less for Candidate Hughes. And lastly, I must add that to do any real good we must get into this campaign under our own colors and prove to our voters and the wide world that we are a going concern battling for the truth and all humanity without stopping to count the cost."

THE steadily growing list of Goodyear Cord users includes in addition to the manufacturers who regularly equip their cars with these tires—the owners of practically every car built.

What makes so many motorists glad to pay the higher first cost of Goodyear Cords?

Greater goodness, of course, and greater comfort; less-power-lost, and more-mileage-gained; and a new-found freedom from stone-bruise and blowout.

Goodyear No-Hook Cord Tires are made strong, safe and sturdy by these unique advantages:

Jars and jolts are combatted by great oversize and the suppleness of Goodyear Cord construction.

They are easy to put on and take off because they do not rust fast to the rim.

Blowouts are lessened by our No-Rim-Cut feature.

Punctures and skidding are reduced by our double-thick, All-Weather Tread.

Loose Treads are diminished by our On-Air Cure.

Blowing off the rim is prevented by our Braided Piano Wire Base

DEATH NOTICES.

IN MEMORIAM.

BROWN—William S. Brown. In sad and loving memory of my beloved husband, who passed away a year ago today.

More and more each day I miss you,
  Friends may think the wound is healed;
But they little know the sorrow
  That lies within my heart concealed.
Peaceful be thy rest, dear husband,
  It is sweet to breathe thy name;
In life I loved you dearly,
  In death I do the same.
When days are dark and friends are few,
  Dear "Willie," how I miss you!
Your loving wife, ELLA.

WARSHAWSKY—Fannie Warshawsky, nee Goldstein. Dedication today at 2:30 at Tiktimer cemetery, Waldheim. Friend invited.

OBITUARY.

CHARLES ANGELO BECK DIES.

Charles Angelo Beck of 3200 Lake Park avenue, who retired as general manager, third vice president, and chairman of the board of pensions of the Illinois Central railway with high honors in 1907, died yesterday at his residence. He was 80 years old.

Mr. Beck began his career as a freight clerk and operator for the Illinois Central in Dunleith, Ill., and rose to the positions from which he retired at the age of 70. His retirement was attended with considerable ceremony, in which the officials of the railway participated.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Roxana Burt Beck, and two sons, Raymond A. Beck and Burt A. Beck, the latter being secretary of the Illinois Central.

MRS. ALICE L. THON, wife of William G. Thon, state representative from the Twenty-third senatorial district, died at 2210 Cortez street yesterday. Mr. Thon returned from Arizona with his wife on Thursday. Mrs. Thon, who was Miss Alice L. Botsford, was born in Freeport, Ill. She was educated in Milwaukee. She and her husband were married while Mr. Thon was attending classes at the Northwestern university law school.

MRS. REBECCA LAWRENCE THOMAS, widow of Watson Thomas and mother of the late Frederick H. Thomas, died on Thursday at La Grange. She was born in New York City March 5, 1830, residing there until 1860, when she came to Chicago. She is survived by a granddaughter, Mrs. J. W. Peck, with whom she made her home for the last eighteen years, and a great-grandson, Thomas Butler Peck of La Grange.

DR. PAUL CHESTER of Champaign, Ill., for many years attending physician at Mercy hospital, died at the residence of his mother in Champlain on Friday. He was 46 years old and is survived by his widow and 3 year old daughter.

ACCUSED CITY MEN RESIGN.

Daniel J. Kenna and Herbert L. Scriba, Accused of Looting City Treasury, Quit Pay Roll.

Daniel J. Kenna and Herbert L. Scriba, who were accused of looting the city treasury by means of padded pay roll graft in the water pipe extension department, yesterday offered their resignations through an attorney. The civil service commission, which was about to place them on trial, decided to accept the resignations. Capt. Percy B. Coffin, president of the commission, said this was done to save the expense of a trial and to avoid disclosing information that might be prejudicial to prosecution by State's Attorney Hoyne. The criminal proceedings are set for June 30.

Two little pistons—two new little pistons—now weigh less than one old one—and they do more work

Big jars and big noises are made with big hammers.

Little hammers cause much less disturbance.

By reducing the size of the pistons, and increasing their number, we have not only lessened the vibrations of the motor, but we have increased its power and responsiveness.

The new Packard is quieter, smoother, safer, and much more powerful.

Six pistons—made twelve! Light, agile, quick pistons! We have cut their size in half—multiplied their number by two—and the result has been the most marked improvement ever made in the Packard car.

A big idea—hard tested by six thousand delighted users. A record-breaking success!

The twelve cylinders do more work—do it quicker—with less fuss—than six ever did.

That's why the Packard is more to be desired today than ever before. And that means something.

Prices, $2750—$3150 and upward—f. o. b. Detroit. Packard Motor Car Company of Chicago, 2357 Michigan Ave. Branches at Milwaukee, South Bend, Peoria, Rockford, Grand Rapids, and Dubuque.

AMERICAN DESTINY AND DUTY.

The American destiny is the master of American policies. When they do not serve it, it puts them aside. When a man does not serve it, it puts him aside. The national impulse is seldom consciously felt and seldom definitely phrased, but it controls, and American destiny will be worked out.

For more than three years President Wilson has held himself stubbornly in the way of events and has denied facts, but gradually he has been forced back and out of the way. There is an aspect of inevitability to our dealings with Mexico against which Mr. Wilson stands helplessly.

He may be able to resist, but in that case it will merely be recorded of him that he had the opportunity and could have seen the need but left the work for another man to do.

For three years he has protected Mexico against the consequences of her own sinning, of her own sinning against herself, against the United States, and against the creditor nations of Europe. He has allowed misery to have its way in Mexico.

The south bank of the Rio Grande is dotted with starving thousands of wretched Mexicans looking over towards the United States as towards an asylum in which, if they were physically fit to pass the immigration tests, they might find food and work.

Mexico, in the hands of bombastic rhetoricians who are either feeble or thieving administrators, has imposed more sufferings upon her own people than the Spanish ever imposed upon Cuba. Cuba now is under our control. It is the lightest control that ever rested upon a nation, and the Cubans are not restless under it. They are orderly and seem to be content, and they have every bit of self-government they could desire and will have it so long as they are worthy of keeping it.

But the Cubans will not be allowed to make their island a hideous thing of misgovernment. The intelligent Cubans know that and the knowledge keeps Cuba orderly.

The control of the United States is spreading over the islands and mainlands to the south, not with severity, but with kindness. It is not destroying independence. It is establishing real independence. Independence of misery, starvation, corruption, disease, and violence.

Will any friend of humanity designate the spot on the earth where American control has caused unhappiness? Will any friend of humanity say that Mexico is happy? Does any friend of humanity prefer Mexican to Cuban conditions?

The destiny of the United States indicates an American protectorate in Mexico. Mr. Wilson does not believe it. Mr. Wilson, who does not believe it, has done more intervening in Mexico than any president since Polk.

In spite of everything he has said he has now in motion every soldier within the continental limits of the United States.

The reason he has all the soldiers of the United States in motion is set forth in the reply of the United States government to the Mexican government, an answer to the Carranza demand that American troops be withdrawn.

This is a recital of the events which the United States has endured and which Mr. Wilson has tried to withstand. It is not possible in any terms of humanity to contemplate a continuance of such conditions. There is wordy patriotism in Mexico City, where Carranza and Obregon commit their bodies to the cause of their nation's independence and their souls to God, but the most sentimental American need not be dismayed by the charge that his nation is brutal.

If Carranza and Obregon were willing to devote themselves to their country they could bring Mexico to order and gradually to happiness. They are not facing formidable armed forces of rebel chiefs. They have a plain duty of policing to do. If they cannot do it, Mexico is incapable of self-government. If they will not do it they are unworthy of being at the head of the de facto Mexican government. They will not or cannot; and in either case judgment is against them.

The destiny of the United States and the needs of the Mexicans call American troops into Mexico for the good of their country and the good of humanity. Mr. Wilson does not want to make a thorough job of it, but the future event may be larger than any one man's power to control it.

This nation may temporize with Mexico, but it will end by establishing peace and order there. The United States will govern directly or indirectly. Mr. Wilson has tried to avoid the inevitable. He may succeed, but some one else will accept it.

THE NATION'S PLAYGROUNDS.

Your Uncle Sam may be negligent in some things and inefficient in others, but when it comes to providing playgrounds for his nieces and nephews he has done his full duty. To be sure, nature has been generous in giving him material with which to work, but, as in other things, he might have let it go to waste or become private property. There is no other country in the world which has set aside the grandeur of nature within its boundaries for the benefit of the whole people as has the government of the United States.

Not only has it taken over such wonderlands as Yellowstone Park, the Yosemite, Glacier Park, the Grand Cañon of the Colorado, the fastnesses of the Rockies, the glaciers of Mount Ranier, Mesa Verde, and the medicinal waters of Arkansas, but it has built roads, hotels, trails and shelters in these places, making them accessible to all. It provides fishing in the finest trout streams in the world, guides to assist travelers to scale the loftiest peaks, where views may be had of unsurpassed beauty or grandeur. Tourists are protected alike from physical danger and rapacious innkeepers.

There is nothing in Switzerland or elsewhere which surpasses the scenery of Glacier Park or Mount Ranier; no trees such as may be seen in the Yosemite or in Sequoia Park. The awful grandeur of the Grand Cañon has no equal, and the prehistoric ruins of Mesa Verde are said by scientists to be the oldest known. These and many smaller reservations of nature's wonders are all in government care for the benefit of the public. They have been made accessible by railroads, and they furnish to the patriotic American places for recreation such as cannot be had anywhere else on the globe.

Those who would learn more of these regions may do so by sending to the department of the interior, which will supply its "Portfolio of National Parks," a series of illustrated bulletins, the perusal of which cannot but stir the pride of every citizen.

THE NEW WILSON.

President Wilson is not making it any easier for Mr. Hughes to defeat him in November. He is not making it any less desirable, but he is not making it easier. A campaign correction of three year old errors may lack sincerity in the opinion of critical citizens, but it gives criticism a harder task.

The weakest spot in Mr. Wilson's record was his failure in the matter of national defense. He recognized the need and talked a great deal about it. He out talked nearly every advocate of national defense. The only thing he did not subscribe to was universal military service, and he tried to make his refusal confusing and bewildering by saying he believed in voluntary universal service, or something of that sort.

He told the Germans in St. Louis that he was for a navy "incomparably superior" to any navy in the world. That pleased the Germans because they want our national preparation directed against Great Britain. When this speech got into the Congressional Record the phrase was "incomparably adequate," which is a twin of "universal voluntary" service.

Against the record of Mr. Wilson's speeches there was the record of his failure to act. He did nothing to help the army when the southern Democrats in control of the house of representatives tried to prevent army legislation. If it had not been for the senate the nation would not have been given the compromise measure it got.

He has consistently supported Daniels, and Daniels as secretary of the navy is ludicrous even in a Democratic administration of this republic. Daniels has lobbied against appropriations which would return the United States navy to second place, and his activities were not checked by the president, as they could have been.

Now Mr. Wilson, it is announced in Washington, is for the building of seven capital ships, two dreadnaughts to be added to the building program. This is the change for which the Republicans were fighting and which Daniels and the Democrats were opposing.

It is much better that Mr. Wilson should make this a campaign contribution to the nation than not to make it at all, and in the opinion of a great many people it will remove one of the damaging arguments against his administration. It will make it more difficult for the Republicans to defeat him, a consideration not without importance to Mr. Wilson's way of thinking.

Criticism, however, is not at all stopped by this concession, as the uncritical might think. What the nation needs for its security is an administration capable of consistent work. Against the decision reached in a campaign to strengthen a bad spot in a record are three years of neglect.

The administration which reduced the naval building program, cut it in two, is the administration which finds it necessary at the beginning of a campaign to speed up in order that the lost rating of second place may be regained. The damage that neglect did cannot wholly be undone because time has been lost.

If Mr. Wilson forces or persuades congress to provide seven new big ships for the navy the country will benefit thereby. What motives are urging him to this need not be examined savagely. What we are interested in is the future. Which Mr. Wilson, in case of Democratic success, will be at the head of the next administration—the Mr. Wilson whose record of three years was the reducing of naval building to one-half the program, or the Mr. Wilson who in the first week of the campaign ordered the speeding up of the navy?

In 1917 are we to find the navy dropping back again as it dropped in 1913? Which period represents Mr. Wilson's convictions, the period from March 4, 1913, to June 17, 1916, or the period from June 17 to June 21?

Spasmodic building cannot make or sustain a navy. It cannot depend upon campaigns for its strength.

GENERAL OFFICERS IN THE GUARD.

National guard officers have not had experience in the command of larger organizations than regiments and consequently it would be folly, with a chance of serious consequence, to have guard officers as general officers.

Any officer with the limitations of guard experience will do very well if he brings a regiment through whatever work may be given it to do. The larger commands are outside the reasonable probabilities of guard ability.

It is in the line of natural military ambition for the brigade commanders of the guard to want to convert a theory into a fact and take command of a brigade when there is one in being. For the most part the generals in theoretical command of brigades have not seen three regiments in movement under their command. The brigade has been a paper organization. The brigade generals have not directed it. They may never have seen it.

It does not require much military intelligence to know that a time of emergency is a poor time to give opportunity to officers to whom normal times gave only titles. The general commands of the guard, for the sake of the guard, belong to officers who have had experience and they will be found in the regular service of the United States.

NO MORE MONEY FOR CONSULS.

[From the Philadelphia Inquirer.]

Just now we are making great efforts to increase our foreign commerce and there is every reason to believe that we shall be successful, but this means our diplomatic and consular representatives should have every chance to work for this country. Something like $400,000 was asked for this extra service and the house has refused it. At the same time it has increased, or proposes to increase, the national expenditures by $250,000,000, making them equal to those in civil war times.

In our view it would be a good plan for congress to spend several millions in trying to get trade by peaceful means, although we know that we must be able to protect it. The cost of a few useless officials in this country who are trying to destroy American trade would well pay for all that is asked to expand our commerce abroad. But of course we can have no commerce abroad if there is an official notion that it is wrong. That seems to be the idea at Washington.

NUMISMATISTS in the United States and Canada will do well to take note that the Egyptian government has just issued a new coinage to signalize its emancipation from the suzerainty of Turkey and its complete severance of all connection with the Ottoman empire. The new coins have on the obverse the monogram of Sultan Hussein I., with the hegira date of his accession underneath, and on the reverse the words, "Sultanate of Egypt," with the date of the year in which the coins are struck and the amount of the value marked underneath, the latter in both Arabic and European characters.

The size, shape, and denomination of the coins will be as heretofore, except that the nickel ones will have a hole in the center.

Until now no European inscription has ever figured on any of the Egyptian coins, nor has there been any reference thereon to the ruler of the country, the monogram with which they were adorned having been that of the reigning sultan of Turkey, in accordance with one of the stipulations of the Ottoman firman under which the khedives held Egypt from the Sublime Porte.

Vice Admiral Sir Somerset Gough-Calthorpe, just appointed by King George to be a lord commissioner, one of the sea lords of the admiralty, has for the last two years been in command of the second cruiser squadron of the grand fleet in the North sea, flying his flag on the Shannon. He has seen plenty of active service on land and river military operations in Africa, and afterward spent some time as naval attaché at Petrograd. He is married to a Canadian, a daughter of the late Robert Dunsmuir of British Columbia, and is second heir to his elder brother, Lord Calthorpe. The latter is a soldier by profession and has an American wife, who is the daughter of Ogden Hoffman Burrows of Newport, R. I.

The barony of Calthorpe was originally created in favor of Sir Henry Gough, second baronet of his line, who on the death of his maternal uncle, Sir Henry Calthorpe, and on inheriting the latter's extensive property, assumed, with the permission of the crown, the name and arms of Calthorpe in addition to his own. The Calthorpes hail from Norfolkshire, and Sir James Calthorpe, an ancestor of the present Lord Calthorpe and of the new sea lord of the admiralty, was knighted by Cromwell in 1636.

With regard to the Goughs, they were originally merchants in London, and the founder of the house was Sir Richard Gough, who acquired a great fortune in the India and China trade and was knighted by George I.

Lord Calthorpe is very rich, the entailed property comprising a considerable amount of real estate in the Clerkenwell district of London and several thousand acres in the Edgbaston suburb of Birmingham, from which large rentals are derived. The Lords Calthorpe have been the principal benefactors of the Birmingham university, which owes to their generosity the large site of twenty-five acres for its scientific department and a much larger tract of ground now used as a recreation ground.

Charles Murray Marling, minister plenipotentiary of Great Britain at Teheran, who has just been given a knight commandership of the Order of St. Michael and St. George, on the occasion of his sovereign's birthday and in recognition of the cleverness with which he defeated German intrigues in Persia, was the cause of an extraordinary and unique reproof, addressed by Edward VII. to the now deposed shah, prior to the latter's dethronement.

When Sir Cecil Spring-Rice, now ambassador at Washington, returned home to England from Teheran, prior to his appointment to Stockholm, he left Marling to direct the affairs of the legation there, as chargé d'affaires. Marling distinguished himself by extending his protection to a number of Constitutionalists who had sought refuge, with their wives and children, in the grounds of the legation from massacre by the shah's troops.

Thereupon the shah addressed a personal dispatch to Edward VII., making bitter complaints to the effect that Marling was interfering in the internal affairs of Persia, inviting mischief makers into the legation and allowing the latter to become a refuge for evil doers.

"Under these circumstances," he added, "I ask your majesty, my good and exalted brother, unofficially and in a friendly manner, to put a stop to these grossly improper acts of your charge d'affaires, and to send in his stead a competent and accomplished minister."

To this King Edward, who was always noted for punctilious courtesy, replied by telegram over his own signature as follows:

"The statement of your majesty that my charge d'affaires is inviting mischief makers to the legation is the direct contrary of the truth. I have no interest or desire to intervene in any way in the internal affairs of your country.

"The conduct, however, of your troops in surrounding my legation and in arresting those who come out is an indignity which I will not tolerate, and unless steps are immediately take to put an end to the situation my government will be compelled to take measures to vindicate the honor of my flag. I have every confidence in the prudence and good faith of my charge d'affaires."

At the same time the king caused Marling to be informed that he had bestowed upon him the third class of the Order of St Michael and St. George, in token of his satisfaction.

The result of this was that the Persian troops around the legation were at once withdrawn; the prime minister proffered, in the name of his sovereign, an abject apology for the indignity offered to the mission, while the shah invited Marling to an audience, at which he received him as a long lost brother and expressed his profound sorrow that so many weeks had elapsed without his having had the pleasure of seeing him.

Marling, who now has become Sir Charles Marling, is the second son of Sir William Marling, second baronet of his line, the great wealth of the family being derived from the manufacture of cloth in the Stroud valley.

SOME CONGENITAL CONDITIONS AND WHAT SHOULD BE DONE ABOUT THEM.

CLUB FOOT—Every baby is born club footed, in a certain sense. Unborn children lie in the mother's body curled up in a roll. The head is bent on the chest, the back is bowed, the thighs are bent on the trunk, and the feet, bent inward, lie with the soles against each other. Therefore newly born babies have bowed heads, stooped shoulders, curled backs, legs drawn up, and feet in the club position. When the nurse lays the little fellow on his back to wash him she unrolls him, and for that and other reasons he yells. When she turns him on his stomach to wash his back he is very apt to quit crying because in that position he curls up into a more comfortable position.

As he lies on his back at any time during the first few weeks of life he draws his legs up because that is the natural position of curl. The bend on his back and neck can be expected to practically disappear in a week. If the club foot is only due to position before being born the feet can be easily bent into position at any time, and within a few days all tendency to club foot has disappeared. If the feet persist in turning the soles each toward the other and at the end of the week they cannot be easily straightened, the child has the condition known as club foot.

The cause of club foot in a newly born baby is always short muscles or short tendons. After club foot has been neglected for a long time the bones get into bad positions and bad shapes, and that very seriously complicates matters. If the condition is left until the child begins to walk the position of the feet is well known. The toes turn in almost directly toward the opposite leg, the weight is carried on the outer edge of the foot or on the back of the foot, the sole stands nearly perpendicular and faces nearly backward.

Most club feet can be straightened by manipulation if the handling is started in the first month of life, and if it is persisted in. Willard makes this statement, and it seems reasonable when we remember that the trouble at the start is due to short muscles and tendons, and these respond to manipulation. Willard's statement, to be more exact, is that if the foot be straightened by the hands, and if it could be held straight by human hands for six months cure with good motion would result.

The teachings of these facts are these: A mother need not be alarmed when she notices that her newly born babe lies with his feet in the club foot position, provided she can easily straighten them. If by the end of the first week she has been unable to straighten out the clubbing she should call the matter to the attention of the physician. She must not delay in the hope that the baby will outgrow it. Club foot is never outgrown. It does not correct itself.

Treatment should be begun when the baby is 2 weeks old. The feet and legs grow and mature very rapidly in the first month of life. The feet are to be straightened with the hands and held in the straight position for half an hour. At the same time the legs below the knees and the feet are to be gently rubbed. This is to be repeated four times a day. After this has been kept up from two to three weeks the doctor will straighten the feet and put them up in a light plaster of paris bandage.

Congenital club foot can be cured by manipulation if it is recognized within the first ten days, manipulation begun within the first three weeks and persisted in.

FLAT FOOT—The foot of the newly born babe always appears to be flat. Sometimes the instep bulges down a little instead of arching up. This appearance is of no consequence in the great majority of cases. It merely means that there is a good deal of fat in the foot. If the foot turns out and the inner ankle bone is very prominent then the case is one of flat foot and the sooner it is corrected the better. The turned out foot should be manipulated every day for a month or two and then put in light plaster. This deformity is easily cured without operation if taken in hand early.

WRY NECK.—In wry neck the head is inclined toward the affected side and the face is turned toward the sound side. If the head is drawn to the right the chin and face seem to be lifted and turned to the left.

If the mother recognizes this condition in the first weeks of life, and she should, it can be remedied in most cases by manipulation and keeping pillows always under the affected side of the head and neck.

BAT EARS—The ears which stand out from the head so as to be unsightly can usually be trained into a more pleasing position. A cap worn over the head so as to hold the ears against the head is all that is needed in most cases. If surgical treatment is needed it should be left until the child is old enough to be controlled—several years old.

HARE LIP—The lower lip is formed by two plates which grow from the neck forward and meet in the middle line to form the lip, chin, and lower jaw. If anything happens to prevent these two plates from coming together the result is a hare lip on the lower lip. When there is hare lip on the lower lip it is located in the middle line. Hare lip on the lower lip is very rare.

The making of the upper lip in the forming child is a more complicated process. Way back yonder in the beginning at the time when the mass of protoplasm is beginning to take on the shape and appearance of a human being two plates start to grow from the back part of the face or the front of the neck. They grow toward each other as is the case with the lower lip. But in the meanwhile a third plate is growing down from above. This third plate makes the septum of the nose and the center of the upper lip and the bone which lies just behind them. The two plates which are growing from behind forward never reach each other as do the same plates in the lower lip. They meet and join the central plate, one on one side and the other on the other. Therefore, hare lip on the upper lip is always on one side or both, but never in the middle. This central piece contains the rudiments of the four front or incisor teeth. Hare lips therefore occurs between the incisors and the eye or canine teeth. In fact, sometimes the germ of one of these teeth gets in the way, preventing the lip plates from growing together and thus causes hare lip.

The lips are fully formed by the eighth week. If the baby is to have a hare lip it is already there seven months before the time for birth. Nothing that happens to the mouth during the last seven months of pregnancy can possibly cause the child to have a hare lip. In fact, what happens to the mother has nothing to do with hare lip. It is what happens to the child within the first eight weeks of development.

There is no cure for hare lip except operation. What is the best time to operate? As soon as possible after birth. Nothing is gained and much is lost by waiting. If operation is done on a very young child the muscles and tissue heal so that no indication of hare lip is left. If the operation is delayed for years the muscles can never be trained to work just exactly right. A baby operated on for hare lip can take food the second day after the operation.

CLEFT PALATE—When the head is first formed the nose and mouth make one cavity. Presently a ridge forms along each side of the interior of this cavity. These ridges develop to form plates. These plates grow toward each other to form the palate. The palate is a partition which separates the mouth cavity from the nose cavity. The hard or bony part of this partition, the bony palate, lies in front. The soft palate is behind that, still further back the cavity is undivided. The naso-pharynx is a large space in part nose and in part mouth. The bone which carries the four central teeth and forms the center of the upper lip and the septum of the nose slips in between the two fusing plates. Therefore, if there is a cleft in the back part of the palate it will be in the middle line. If it is in front it will be to one side. It may open into one nostril in front. If it is behind it opens into the nose cavity.

The palate is completely formed by the ninth week of development. What happens to the mother in the last thirty weeks of her pregnancy cannot possibly cause her child to have a cleft palate. As a rule mothers, nurses, and doctors have no difficulty in recognizing cleft palate. If the lips are perfect the trouble the child has in sucking and the tone of the cry indicate that something is the matter and inspection of the mouth shows what it is.

There is no cure for cleft palate except operation. The earlier the operation is done the better. Nothing is gained by delay. The baby is not likely to thrive so long as sucking and breathing are interfered with by a cleft in the palate.

BIRTHMARKS—If the capillaries or veins of an area in the skin are overlarge the condition is known as a birthmark. The blood can be pressed out of a birthmark. Coughing and straining increase the amount of blood in them.

Two-thirds of all birthmarks are on the face. They are twice as frequent on the faces of girls as on those of boys. In some cases birthmarks do not grow. In other cases they grow rapidly. Birthmarks can be removed by liquid carbonic acid, by X-rays and radium, and by operation. Which is the best way for any case must be decided for that case. If a birthmark is stationary it is just as well to wait until the baby has passed into the years of childhood. If the birthmark shows any tendency to grow it should be treated without delay.

SPINABIFIDA—In spinabifida there is a failure of the spinal canal to close. When the baby is born the head chamber is not closed at the two soft spots, but this makes no difference since the baby is not to stand on his head. When, on the other hand, the bony plates of the spinal column are defective the pressure causes the membranes of the spinal canal to bulge out to form a rounded tumor. This tumor is generally in the middle line of the back low down toward the buttocks. This tumor swells when the child cries. When the tumor is pressed upon the soft spots in the head bulge out. Not much can be done for spinabifida. Solid tumors apparently growing out of the backbone near the buttocks are less dangerous than spinabifida.

RICKETS—An early sign of rickets is rosary ribs. In rosary ribs there are two rows of beadlike knobs on the ribs an inch or more outside the breastbone. The knobs are apt to be tender on pressure.

PIGEON BREAST—This also is a sign of rickets. The breastbone stands out in front of the ribs, like the breastbone of a bird or the keel on a vessel. The ribs from the second to the eighth are sunken in just to the sides of the breastbones.

BOW LEGS—Is another sign of rickets. Mothers should detect a tendency of the legs to bow or the knees to knock and bring the matter to the doctor's attention. Most cases of such tenderness of the bones and joints as cause the baby to cry when lifted or shifted are due to rickets.

CONGENITAL SYPHILIS—Persistent snuffling should cause congenital syphilis to be suspected. For a long time it may be the only symptom. There may be a bloody discharge from the nose or the baby may simply seem to have a cold which hangs on.

The next symptom may be a mild, simple, nonitching and nonpainful eruption. The eruption is very apt to appear on the palms of the hand and the soles of the feet. Not long ago I was at a baby show. There were a hundred or more babies in the room. The doctors were weighing, measuring, and examining them. An attendant came and asked the physician in chief to see a certain child. From a distance of fifteen feet it could be seen that the child was covered with a slight red, splotchy rash. His eyelids were red along the edges. He had a chronic bad cold. His hair was thin and worm eaten and unhealthy looking. Though he was fairly fat he was pot-bellied. It was plain at a glance that this child was suffering from congenital syphilis. Yet the parents had thought that he might win a prize in a scientifically conducted baby show. If these parents had so far overlooked the symptoms of congenital syphilis that they thought their baby worthy of a prize is it not probable that other parents overlook the same symptoms in their babies, thinking them nothing but bad colds, stomach rashes, etc. and that time will clear them up?

OPERATING WITH LEAST POSSIBLE NOISE.

Chicago, June 15.—[To the Friend of the People.]—For a long time I have been kept awake nights by the incessant noise of the engines on the tracks crossing Washington boulevard on Rockwell street. This constant and continued loss of sleep is maddening. Are we all obliged to submit to this, or can something be done to rid us of this nuisance?

MRS. E. M. KELLY,
2743 Washington boulevard.

The above complaint was taken up with Chief Agent and Supt. W. H. Scriven of the Pennsylvania lines, who had test observations made from 8 p. m. to 5:30 a. m. The report shows that thirty-eight trains passed during that period. On only three occasions was the engine bell ringing, and there was no whistling of any kind. The observations will continue. The railroad management say that they are reasonably sure that the trains are being operated with the least possible annoyance to their neighbors.

WILLIS O. NANCE,
Chairman City Council Anti-Noise Subcommittee.

CURBING WASTE OF WATER.

Chicago, June 14.—[To the Friend of the People.]—Several weeks ago I read an article complaining about the great waste of water by consumers through leaky plumbing or neglect in closing faucets properly. There are two public drinking fountains on State street within the loop and I found both of these fountains pouring forth a goodly stream of water continuously this afternoon. Both of these fountains have faulty faucets and are the reason for a considerable waste of water.

CHARLES GRIMM.

Both of these fountains have been repaired. The department will be appreciative if any person seeing this waste of water at these fountains will call Main 447, Local 116, so that the matter can have immediate attention.

H. L. LUCAS,
Superintendent Water Pipe Extension.

WHEN DEBT BECOMES OUTLAWED.

Chicago, June 20.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—(1) Is a debt outlawed by limitation after five years? (2) Must I sue a man for debt in the county in which he lives?

J. M.

[1] A debt on an oral contract is outlawed in five years; on a written contract in ten years.
[2] You may sue him in any county in which you can have a summons served upon him.

ADVISABLE TO PROBATE ESTATE.

Chicago, June 19.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—1. A widow dies, leaving a sister, a brother, a nephew, and niece. The niece is her executrix. The widow claims that it does not have to go through the Probate court, as it consists of mortgages and also stock in a large manufacturing company. Is this correct?

2. She gives all personal belongings to said niece and nephew. Would this include a fur coat, as she does not name anything in particular?

3. If, outside of said will, she calls her executrix and in the hearing of two witnesses she names certain articles, such as clocks and statues and furs she wishes the executrix to have, and then has it written down and signs it and has them sign it, how can said executrix get same if the widow's sister refuses to give them up?

E. C.

[1] It is advisable for it to go through probate. [2] Yes. [3] Unless the paper signed is a will the executrix is not legally entitled to the articles mentioned. We should have to see it to determine whether or not it is a will.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

WIDOW'S SHARE IN ESTATE.

Chicago, June 19.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—Kindly advise me whether a second wife with one child does not get one-third of the husband's property at his death. This property is both real and personal.

F. E. J.

She gets one-third of the personal estate and a life interest in one-third of the real estate. In addition she gets a widow's award and usually a homestead.

REBATE ON NORTH FORTY-FOURTH COURT PAVING.

Chicago, June 18.—[To the Friend of the People.]—Could you inform me when the rebate will be due on paving of North Forty-fourth court between Irving Park boulevard and Berteau avenue?

JAMES COLMAN PRATT,
4158 North Kilbourn avenue.

Paving improvement of North Forty-fourth court, between Irving Park boulevard and Berteau avenue, was done under special assessment warrant 38107. The last installment of this warrant was in collection in 1915. It will, therefore, be reached for consolidation some time late this year, and if any surplus remains same will be figured for rebate and all property owners who have paid into the assessment will be notified in the regular manner.

WHO'S TO BLAME FOR PADDED LEASES.

Chicago, June 20.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—The communication by Howard Brothers & Co. in your issue of a recent date on "Honesty in the Realty Business," suggests a step in the direction of rectifying an abuse which if not stopped very soon will bring disaster to many realty owners.

The recommendation that the Apartment Buildings association pass a resolution forbidding "concessions" is a good one and should be acted upon at once. But the evil does not rest with the legitimate owners of apartment buildings, but rather with a greedy lot of contractors who are rushing the erection of hundreds of buildings and giving three to six months' concessions to fill them up at once, with a view of selling them at high prices. These "concessions," which is another name for "padded leases," have so demoralized the renting business that tenants do not know where they are at.

It is the builders who are the real offenders in this matter, and real estate agents should insist that they stop the padding of leases and make them cooperate with the Apartment Buildings association in refusing to give these "concessions." The "Renting Agents' association" have it in their power to do this by refusing to handle buildings for contractors who will not agree to this and thus relieve the realty business of the stigma this practice has brought upon it.

A REALTY OWNER.

WANTS HUGHES TO PICK CABINET NOW.

Chicago, June 22.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Wilson's "luck" may again land him in the White House—who knows? We want something more explicit from Hughes. The impressive dignity which he maintained while a member of the court of last resort is admirable. His utterances since that time have been decidedly pro U. S. to all who understand, but some of us want more pronounced assertions. Let us depart from the usual order of things in such a crucial time as this portends and avail ourselves of every opportunity to win. Why not let us vote for the cabinet? Why could not Hughes pick his official family now?

FRANK McL. GARROW.

STOP EXPORTING HORSES.

Monmouth, Ill., June 21.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Owing to the great probability of war with Mexico, the exportation of horses and mules should be stopped immediately, as the United States will need every horse and mule we have if war does come. Of course, the men interested in the business of selling horses to the allies and horse breeders interested in future high prices will say that we have a large surplus and that the horses sold are of a poor class any way, but we should not believe them without at least an investigation of the facts when the future interests of our own country are at stake.

ELVIN GODDARD.

PATRIOTISM AND PRICES.

Chicago, June 22.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—These two paragraphs appeared the same day in Chicago newspapers:

"A. Watson Armour of Armour & Co.—It was decided at a meeting of the executives of the company this morning that positions would be held open for employés for any reasonable period of time during which they might be called on to serve with the army. It was further decided that while with the army the company would add to the amount paid them by the government a sum sufficient to make up their usual salary."

"Wholesale meat prices were boosted a trifle in the stockyards markets here today in anticipation of a heavy run of government buying."

Is there, after all, none who will pass by an opportunity to exploit his country for personal gain?

These same men have, no doubt, voiced their indignation at the "pork barrel." It would seem their only contention in defense of their position could be that the stockyards was a better place for "pork" than congress.

Should not patriotism, like charity, begin at home?

ARTHUR L. HARVEY.

EXTRAVAGANCE OF SOUTHERN DEMOCRATS.

Washington, D. C., June 19.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—If every one could read your Sunday editorial, "The South and Democracy," and if a few of your taxpayers would read the proceedings of congress, or, better still, come and see for themselves that the government is surely in the grip of the south, it would make them squirm as it has made me squirm. If they could see how helpless the minority is to stem the tide of the reckless extravagance of the Democrats who have appropriated millions upon millions to improve little fishing streams in the south, to build piers for millionaire yachtsmen to step from their yachts to their automobiles, all to be paid for by the poor taxpayers, I think they would rise in their might and bring the fulfillment of Senator Kenyon's prophecy. "You have said outright, 'let the taxpayers squeal,' but in November the taxpayers will not be the only ones to squeal."

ONE OF THE TAXPAYERS.

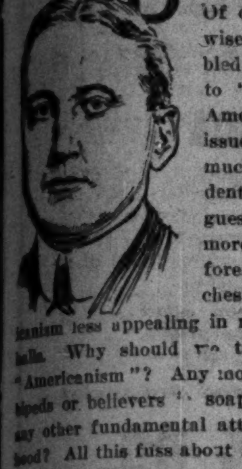
MOBILIZATION AND POLITICS.

Chicago, June 21.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—I awaited the appearance of THE TRIBUNE for some editorial comment on Mayor Thompson's calling the president's mobilization order "cold politics." What do you suppose such a statement from a man in his position means to the soldiers, to the soldiers' loved ones, or to the "man in the street"? Does not this lead the soldier to believe that he is merely a pawn in the political game to further the president's fortunes? We are in urgent need of soldiers. Are men going to flock to the colors with much enthusiasm if led to believe they are tools used to further the selfish ends of individuals?

AN EX-SOLDIER.

AMERICANISM

By Robert Herrick



"BOTH candidates strong for Americanism!" So I read in a newspaper. Of course. How could it be otherwise? All three parties have tumbled over themselves in their efforts to "put themselves on record for Americanism," to "appropriate the issue" of Americanism. For so much we have to thank the impudent activities of our hyphenated guests. All political parties are more vocally patriotic than ever before. Yet there is something in this chesty, oratorical fervor over Americanism less appealing in reflection than in the convention halls. Why should we take credit for proclaiming our "Americanism"? Any more than in proclaiming ourselves bipeds or believers in soap and water, or honest men, or any other fundamental attribute of manhood and womanhood? All this fuss about Americanism, so far as the word means merely a proper patriotism, a real loyalty to our country and its institutions, a love of ourselves and belief in ourselves as one of the family of humanity, should not be necessary. It should be taken for granted without the flourish of platform planks and partisan declamation. The fact that we feel obliged to pour out so many words of a perspiring oratory to prove our devotion, our common loyalty to our country, is not altogether admirable. And that, too, we have to thank our ill assimilated German born citizens for. The treacherous conduct of a few of them has made common loyalty a possible national issue!

THE Democrats, to my thinking, have the best of it so far as paying verbal respects to patriotism in the party platform is concerned. Both Republicans and Progressives had a wealth of fervid phrases about Americanism, but beyond the primary idea of loyalty to the United States and an indefinite amount of "preparedness" there was nothing specific in their words. In this respect the Democratic instrument, one must admit, is a better performance. The schoolmaster helped the politician out: it explains quite precisely what is disloyalty to one's country. It tries to define intelligibly what Americanism should be in positive terms—in relation to our American neighbors, in relation to Europe. It is a theory of strict neutrality in the world's affairs, of scrupulous nonaggression. That was to be expected. Perhaps a majority of Republicans and Progressives really believe in the same sort of negative Americanism, but they have avoided saying so in so many words, knowing that some of their party fellows hold other views as to the content of true Americanism.

The country has a pretty thorough idea of the Wilson sort of Americanism, and the Democratic delegates at St. Louis made it plain what part of the Wilson Americanism they most preferred—the pacific part. Judging from their demonstrations over certain significant sentences, the true Democratic brand of Americanism consists in keeping the country out of trouble at any cost, in "minding our own business," in preserving the American fireside from military service, etc. There must be a few Democrats as well as many Republicans and Progressives to whom such an interpretation of Americanism as exemplified by the Wilson administration is distasteful, appears when stripped of sophisticated oratory plain provincialism at the best, selfish cowardice at the worst.

TO my way of thinking it is a pity that the personal antithesis to the Wilson brand of Americanism was not put forward as the Republican party leader. Everybody knows the Roosevelt type of Americanism, and whatever its defects may be, it has the virtue of being at the other pole in ideals and impulses from the Wilson type. After a three months' campaign between Wilson and Roosevelt there would be little left in the vague term of Americanism not explained and illustrated. It would have afforded a much needed education in political thinking from which our conception of Americanism would have emerged clarified and effective.

It is doubtful whether the Hughes leadership will accomplish as much. The party platform which the candidate heartily indorses and paraphrases in his letter of acceptance is intentionally unspecific and elementary. It contains nothing distasteful to the suspected elements of our citizenship, from which we must conclude that both candidate and platform have no very positive convictions on the subject. The history of the Republican party when in power is not reassuring as to the meaning that Republicans would read into Americanism if they got back into office. High tariff, protected big business, the creation of a favored class—that is a good part of Republican "Americanism" hitherto. It is time that the Republican candidate defined himself more explicitly—told us just what he means by Americanism, without rhetoric and without evasion.

FOR I can think of nothing more important for Americans to determine than this—what is the content of Americanism? Surely something more than a love of country, than a loyalty to the United States "right or wrong." To the intelligent citizen it should mean belief in that body of principles and ideals which are distinctively and characteristically ours—the social ideas that we as a people have evolved and for whose perfection we are all more or less consciously striving. What are they?

That there are definite tendencies in American life, in American purposes other than minding our own business and keeping out of trouble and becoming more prosperous is evident even in the St. Louis platform. First and foremost, I take it, Americanism implies a profound belief in the democratic principles, unadulterated and unmodified, in the giving of every human being, no matter what his birth or his circumstances, all the opportunity he or she can absorb. Secondly, it implies a free kind of coöperation between many individuals for a common aim, not simply a selfish convenience. Thirdly, a disbelief in military aggression of any sort. This last is not so much a virtue on our part as an accident of our world position, but whatever its cause, it is a valuable contribution to world ideals, especially at this moment of history

One might go on adding and defining more precisely the content of Americanism, approaching nearer to the heart of that common impulse which is aroused by an appeal to our patriotism. Among other things, what does "Americanism" mean in our foreign relations? A position of international aloofness or isolation has been deemed an essential part of our national policy, the most precious inheritance among the traditions of the republic. It is odd that the first move to break this century old policy of Americanism should be made by a Democratic president; that the first specific reference to the advisability of broadening our conception of Americanism should be contained in a Democratic party platform. Timidly, of course! Tentatively. But the thought is there. Americanism cannot henceforth mean merely our own safety and welfare on this continent. Americanism must be involved in the common destiny of the world. We are concerned not only in keeping the highways of the sea open for our trade but also in maintaining peace among the nations of the earth. And this concern is not simply an academic affair of good wishes and general pacific feeling: it is an active principle of self-interest that must lead us to "interfere" and "break our traditional isolation."

President Wilson has traveled farther than his party and is looking into the future, when he considers the propriety and the necessity of the United States coöperating with Europe for the maintenance of international peace and justice between the peoples of the earth. That will take him a long way from the traditional policy of isolation. That will take Americanism into the armed camps of Europe in some more real fashion than the penning of hortatory notes to the great powers. For it is childish to think that we can coöperate to bring about peace without being ready to enforce the maintenance of peace if necessary by arms.

WHAT does Candidate Hughes think about this sort of Americanism? Does he personally and politically believe that Americanism should stop at the Atlantic and Pacific oceans; that it is merely a formula for prosperity and comfort at home, a sublimated form of provincial happiness? Or does he think that Americanism is an ideal which in its working out must bring this great nation into closer contacts with all the other peoples of the narrowing world? That is a real issue as I see it between the pacific and satisfied delegates at St. Louis and the hungry and hopeful delegates at Chicago, between the verbiage of the Democratic platform and the verbiage of the Republican platform, between one kind of American citizen and another kind.

Candidate Hughes must emerge from the vapor of judicial reserve, from the thickets of partisan declamation, and define exactly what to him is the full, the inner meaning of this "Americanism" to which we all so readily and vociferously shout our allegiance.

MORE PORK

By Henry Reuterdahl

Mr. Reuterdahl, author of the following article, has long been well known for his work as an artist and illustrator of scenes and events in connection with the United States navy. He is recognized by many as an authority on naval questions, and he is an associate in the United States Naval institute.

UNDER the cloak of helping the navy certain gentlemen in congress are trying to increase their political swag and capital. And tucked away in the navy appropriation bill practically undiscovered are some juicy paragraphs which will supply 300 civilian political jobs in the navy.

The situation is alarming. Thirty civilian engineers, without any practical naval engineering, are each year to be added to the navy for a period covering ten years. They are to enter the service as acting ensigns. In other words, in ten years there will be in the navy a little engineer corps of 300 civilians.

That the navy does not wish additional engineers from land matters not. That every officer in the navy save one is strongly opposed to the infusion of an untrained, unskilled element of political appointees matters not at all. That the chief of the bureau of steam engineering, with a lifetime experience, is dead against it means little. The frameup of this new civilian engineer corps of 300 more plums for the politicians took place in the dark—there were no special hearings, no board of officers was asked for opinions, neither the war college nor the general board. But back of it Mr. Daniels, as the godfather of this latest offspring of the pork barrel, seems to stand sponsor, and the reports of the naval appropriation bill state that this scheme has the recommendation of such high "naval" authorities as the president of the United States, the secretary of the navy and Admiral Blue, two civilians and one naval officer, an admiral by virtue of his office, and who is without experience on board dreadnaughts.

THESE appointees are to come from among the graduates of colleges, technical schools, and universities. Naturally these young men have no practical experience whatever. On the other hand, the graduates of the naval academy, in addition to their technical training, have spent each summer, approximately three months, on a practice cruise. As midshipmen they have been engaged in the operation of the steam machinery, the remainder of the time being devoted to turrets, guns, mounts, and other equipment. In addition to this practical experience while at the naval academy they are also given drills on board ships, as well as work in machine shops, foundries, and in the test and laboratories where the special machinery used on board vessels of the navy is available for their training. Here they get to know their jobs as naval officers.

To make officers out of graduates of technical schools will require several years. To appoint them as officers and give them commissions as such does not necessarily relieve the pressure due to the lack of officers. The lack of officers is a lack of TRAINED officers.

These civilians can, under no circumstances, be classed as competent or equal in education, training, practical experience, and judgment with the type of officer who is being detailed at the post graduate school in engineering. To take the technical school graduate with practically no knowledge and place him in the post graduate school alongside officers who have had four years at Annapolis and from five to ten years' service in the navy, operating guns, engines, navigating, and training for war, is ridiculous and will not produce efficiency.

IN 1899, as a result of continued dissension, the amalgamation of the line and engineer corps was accomplished. Col. Roosevelt was then assistant secretary of the navy. It has resulted in better relations between the officers doing deck duty and those doing steam engineering, because each understands something of the work of the other. It anticipated the changes in types of ships, guns, torpedoes, wireless, etc., which has made it necessary for every officer to be something of an engineer as well as a seaman, for a dreadnaught is but a mass of engines afloat.

Engineering training of any description is of value to the navy only as the personnel acquiring it has a knowledge of the navy. The eternal question is not "Is the machine a good machine?" but "Is the machine a good machine for installation in a battleship, cruiser, destroyer, or submarine?" Only the man with a navy training can answer that question. The high standing of the navy's engineering, which is its life, must not be tampered with for the sake of politics.

Nor should congress be permitted to divorce the study of engineering from the line as also proposed in the appropriation bill. The navy as a whole is solid against it. It would simply mean constant friction and inefficiency. And it would be nothing short of criminal to have line officers deprived of the opportunity to learn engineering when their whole naval career is just one engine after another.

AUTHORITATIVELY Col. Roosevelt has already voiced the navy's opinion against the reëstablishment of an engineer corps in the navy. Naturally he is being taken to task for believing, as a former assistant secretary of the navy, that these civilian engineers might, later, try to obtain more rank and additional privileges. This statement was particularly raised and objected to by Commodore Eaton, a retired officer. A line officer of high standing, formerly an engineer, emphasizes the correctness of Mr. Roosevelt's views and writes: "If the new engineer corps is established the line officer will cease to feel his responsibility for the care and upkeep of the machinery of the ship and will not take the vital interest in engineering matters that he is forced to take at the present time, and consequently our navy will suffer in its development. The introduction of another corps in the navy will cause friction to a certain extent. After a few years the new engineer corps will put forth its claims as we did in the old engineer corps—that is, we stated that our training and knowledge was identical with that of the line officers.

"That the ship as a whole was a machine; that navigation was purely a mathematical question, and that we felt that we were eqully fit to navigate the ship. A lobby was established in Washington, the engineers contributing a certain portion of their salary to meet the expenses of the same. Various engineering colleges, distinguished engineers, and able engineer writers were secured to lend us their aid in giving us the position and title that we considered our profession entitled us to.

"This same question will undoubtedly be brought up again in a few years after the new engineer corps is established. They will have the same institution and the same backing from the engineering world to amalgamate them with the line, the same old fight with its detriment to the progress of the service will be gone over again, and, in my opinion, the new engineer corps would win more easily than did the old engineer corps."

Another officer says: "The navy has no objection to 300 well educated men who can pass the examinations being admitted to the navy as ensigns, but the kick is against these men coming in as special corps to do engineering only, thus depriving our future young officers of their engineering training. We need officers and we are willing to take them where we can get them, but they should come in as ensigns, pass the examinations of ensigns, and perform the duties of ensigns."

ANITA GARIBALDI

By Edward Goldbeck

O verdi, interminabili, deserte distese della Pampa! O pascolanti saure, dal fren della sua mane esperte:

Ivi ella crebbe con l'alte erbe ondanti,
ivi Ei le apparve, biondo come il sole,
e la guardo con gli occhi scintillanti . . .
Marradi.—"Rapsodia Garibaldina."

TO introduce Anita to us let us listen to Garibaldi's own artless narrative: "The loss of Luigi, Eduardo, and others of my countrymen left me utterly isolated; I felt quite alone in the world. . . . I needed a human heart to love me, one that I could keep always near me. I felt that unless I found one immediately life would become intolerable. . . . By chance I cast my eyes toward the houses of the Harra, a tolerably high hill on the south side of the entrance to the lagoon, where a few simple and picturesque dwellings were visible. Outside of one of these, by means of the telescope I usually carried with me when on deck, I espied a young woman and forthwith gave orders for the boat to be got out, as I wished to go ashore."

The girl, whose dark features and hair, proud carriage and determined face he had examined to such good purpose through his telescope knew well enough who Garibaldi was and what deeds he had done, for he had just taken part in the liberation of her native town. Her name was Anita Riberas; she was a maiden of 18 years of age and her father had promised her to a suitor whom she could not love.

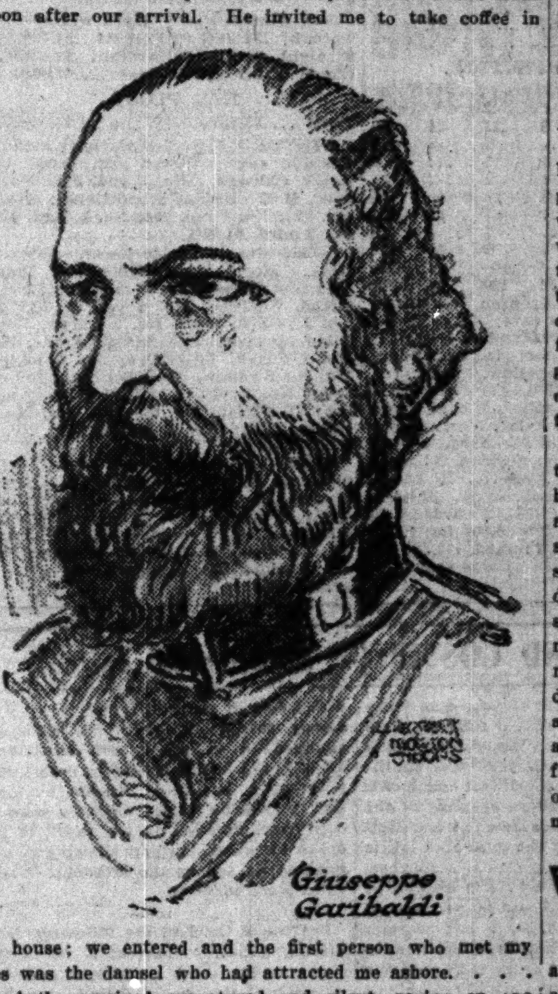
MEANWHILE Garibaldi was being rowed ashore: "I landed and, making for the houses where I expected to find the object of my excursion, I had just given up hope of seeing her again when I met an inhabitant of the place whose acquaintance I had made soon after our arrival. He invited me to take coffee in his house; we entered and the first person who met my eyes was the damsel who had attracted me ashore. . . . We both remained enraptured and silent, gazing on one another like two people who meet not for the first time and seeking in each other's faces something which makes it easier to recall the forgotten past. At last I greeted her by saying: 'To devi esser mia!' (Thou oughtest to be mine.) I could speak but little Portuguese and uttered the bold words in Italian. Yet my insolence was magnetic. I had formed a tie, pronounced a decree, which death alone could annul."



Giuseppe Garibaldi

Of course, there was no "insolence" in this primitive wooing. Garibaldi was a real hero and instinctively he reëstablished the simple and original relation between man and woman which civilization has obscured. He read in Anita's face and bearing the clear imprint of all those Amazonian qualities of mind and body that made her the only possible wife worthy or able to bear him company in flood and field and mate his adventurous spirit at its own level. She, a woman most direct and valiant, highly strung, too, by the prospect of the forced marriage that awaited her, suddenly saw face to face the hero of her time and country, with his lionlike head and flowing mane of gold, come as her deliverer, armed with the irresistible might of his will.

She did not resist and who would have wished her to behave conventionally? Theer was no hope that her other suitor would forego his claim, favored as it was by her father, and, since in those rough times and lands possession was nine points of the law, Garibaldi, a few nights later, came back and carried her off on board his ship.

In later years he reproached himself bitterly, the horrors of the hour when she died in his arms made him morbidly sensitive and unjust toward himself: "I had come upon a forbidden treasure, but yet a treasure of great price. If guilt there was, it was mine alone. And there was guilt. Two hearts were joined in infinite love, but an innocent existence was shattered. She is dead; I am wretched; and he is avenged, yes, avenged! In the day when, vainly hoping to bring her back to life, I clasped the hand of a corpse, with bitter tears of despair, then I knew the evil I had wrought. I sinned greatly, but I sinned alone."

ANITA and her lover were legally married as soon as they returned from the wilderness to civilization at Monto Video after an enforced delay of more than two years. Garibaldi had won for Italy a heroine. She was not by birth or nature an Italian, but had in her veins the fighting blood of the race that ruled on horseback the deserts of Brazil. She was a splendid horsewoman and those who had seen her riding a curvetting animal by the side of her husband could never forget the splendid sight. What spaces of earth and sky, what speed, what freedom, what glory of life and love were theirs as they galloped side by side and slept under the stars! Like her husband, she was tender as well as brave and her only uncontrolled passion was that love for which she risked her life so often and lost it at the end.

So these two sailed away and spent their honeymoon in amphibious warfare along the coast and in the lagoons, fighting at close quarters against desperate odds. In her first severe action Anita was knocked down on deck by the shock of a cannon ball. She fell across the bodies of three dead men. Her husband rushed to her side, but she was already on her feet and as active as though nothing had happened to discompose her.

ANITA proved as admirable a mother and housekeeper as she had been a warrior; it was a hard struggle against poverty, for her husband always shared what little he had with others, while at the same time he refused the rewards of land, rank, and wealth eagerly proffered by the state which he had saved. Anita was almost weeping, one day, to find that the last three little coins had vanished from the recess where she kept the family hoard till her warrior confessed that he had stolen them to buy their little girl a toy and Teresita herself appeared in the doorway brandishing the trophy in exculpation of the offender. One day Garibaldi appeared on parade with his golden locks close shorn, because the universal and passionate adoration of him by the ladies of Monte Video distressed Anita—for her relief he had despoiled his beauty.

In 1848 Garibaldi returned to his country, and while he took a prominent part in the defense of Rome Anita and her children stayed at Nice. But when the news of Rome's approaching fate awakened in her the apprehension that some terrible crisis in her husband's life was hastening on she set out, although again pregnant, for the seat of war, determined to share the extreme perils with the man whom she regarded as unlike the husbands of other women and of more value than any child could be. She left posterity no record of her motives, no apology for her choice, but she died for her belief and so she is absolved. She suddenly appeared in Rome and her husband, with a cry of surprise and joy, sprang into her arms. She had found her way from Nice into the beleaguered city before he even knew of her intention to start upon a journey which he would not have approved.

WHEN Rome surrendered and Garibaldi left the Eternal city with a few thousand volunteers, Anita accompanied him, mounted and dressed like a man in the garb of the legion. After four weeks of a guerilla campaign which every day more degenerated into a desperate flight, Anita showed grave signs of illness. Garibaldi implored her to stay with some friends of his, but she, indignant at his remonstrances on this subject, silenced him with the words: "You want to leave me." The little army dispersed and the Austrians hunted Garibaldi like a deer. Anita grew hourly worse and, no longer able to understand what was going on around her, was in agony at the idea of being separated from Garibaldi.

The man who had undertaken to save Garibaldi's life, Bonnet, insisted on the terrible danger that the fugitive would incur by remaining together with Anita, but at last he bowed to the ruling of love and granted that death alone should part the wife from her husband. Anita died in a little dairy farm near Mandriole not far from Ravenna. The last words she spoke concerned the children whom she left to his care. When she had passed away the noble outward calm of Garibaldi, which had been proof against all the dangers, disappointments and sorrows of the last months, gave way and he burst into a flood of prolonged and bitter weeping.

Restraint on American Trade in China.

By Gilbert Reid.

[President of the International Institute of China.]

THE war in Europe, having become a world war, is certain to affect the political and commercial conditions of the populous nations of eastern Asia, and their relations to the treaty making powers of Europe and America. Such great trading peoples as the British, including their colonies, the Japanese and Americans, have been dreaming dreams as to the advantages to accrue to themselves by the military subjugation of Germany and the equally disastrous downfall of Germany's economic and commercial schemes.

Amid such glowing portrayal of one's own profit through another's loss one is apt to lose sight of the conflict which is sure to arise in a commercial and industrial way between the British on the one side and the Japanese and Americans on the other. It is not yet quite clear whether the conflict will take place first with Japanese or with Americans, or whether the conflict with these two peoples will be simultaneous. "To be forewarned is to be forearmed."

In previous years the policy generally professed, though not always lived up to, has been that of "the open door," or "equal opportunity to all." This policy I for one still maintain to be the best, but if we may judge by past actions, which have knocked to pieces past treaties and conventions, the future of China is likely to witness a renewed devotion to the spirit of exclusiveness, and the policy, not of separate spheres of influence, but of one, whether that sphere be British or Japanese, an out and out hegemony.

This danger to China has been averted in the past by the peculiarities of the international competition. A cleavage could be seen between the British, Germans, and Americans on the one side, and the French, Russians, and Belgians on the other, while the Japanese, commercially and socially, have as a rule been a class by themselves, sometimes lining up with one group and sometimes with another. This war has changed, at least for the time being, these conditions of the past.

It would be well for Americans to note the altered condition and so be ready for the coming contest.

Already the British merchant in the far east, under the patronage of his government, so different from its former attitude, has begun the commercial war before the war of arms has ceased. By utilizing the war of arms, which was unnecessarily brought into China, it is hoped that the ground may be preëmpted by the British, and that Americans and Japanese, as well as Germans, may be handicapped in the race for trade. Everything is done legally, for there is an English law, called "trading with the enemy act."

This law, as the various orders in council, is meant not merely for British observance, but for universal application. In fact there is more a prohibition placed on others in trading with the enemy than is placed on the British themselves. In a word, the traders of all countries, neutral as well as the allies, can trade only under suffrance of England.

They may trade, of course, but under no circumstances with the Germans, though the trade be in American and Chinese goods, and not properly German goods. If they presume to do as they please and trade with the Germans, then England's might is brought to bear, restraints on trade are ingeniously devised, and a regular boycott is set in motion. All this is done in the name of law, for the British have a trading with the enemy act.

The position of the American merchant, to say nothing of the American missionary and educator, is, under this tremendous force of circumstances, a subordinate one—subordinate to British official action even more than to British mercantile action. The only way for the American in China to do any business at all is to "keep in" with the English. The British consulate has two lists, the black list and the suspected list, and on these lists American firms as well as British are placed by the good pleasure of the British consul general, resident in China, and dwelling in an international settlement. "Instructions" are in some cases issued to Americans, particularly if they represent British or Japanese business houses.

If an American merchant should presume to go contrary to the will or wish of his British majesty's consul general, he will find it difficult to do any trade at all. For financial reasons he will find it expedient during the period of war to do England's bidding and disassociate himself, both in a business and social way, from the Germans. This much is clear, the American merchant's position is subordinate to England. In fact, out here in China the Briton rejoices in the predominance of England over all countries, a predominance which he claims as a right, and certainly as a fact through superior power.

Germany is thus not the only country which has advanced the theory that might is right. It is not a wrong theory which is to be overthrown by England and her allies; it is the military and naval power of some other country which must give place to that of England. More than once have I heard it said by some Britisher when I complained of British interference, "This shows we have the power. You Americans can't do anything without us."

The fact that most of our American firms are carrying on trade as usual with the British cannot indeed be taken as proof that their trade is under restraint, but if we look closely we will see that there is here proof of subordination to England.

When once any of our firms ventures to have any business relations with England's "enemy," then the American is made to suffer. No matter that international law gives no countenance to such restraint on trade, if the American can't help himself, why should he rush into needless trouble?

There are at least three firms in Shanghai which were told they must dismiss a German or Germans connected with the firm, and this though the connection was of many years' standing. A refusal to comply meant that they could not ship cargo on ships of England and of her allies and could not negotiate a draft through any bank. Even the International Banking corporation, an American bank, which has an Englishman as local manager, has received instructions to negotiate a draft with no person who is blacklisted or suspected by the British authorities.

An American acting for an American house was trying to purchase certain goods from Norway, as in past years, through the London branch. The transaction could not be carried through, as no bank in London would negotiate a draft, since this American was reported to London as having dealings with Germans. There was no question of this man being engaged in contraband or having sold goods to Germany or purchasing goods from Germany. He was merely under restraint and suspicion because he had done business with a German in China.

It was suspected of another firm that goods which it was exporting for Chinese merchants were the same class of goods which German firms had previously been accustomed to export to America. Spies were set on the track of this firm and no Japanese or British steamship company would undertake to carry the cargo.

There have been two American ships to sail between San Francisco and China. The German male passengers of one were seized by an English cruiser, contrary to all international law, and until their release is secured it may hesitate in future voyages to carry the same kind of passengers. The other ship carried considerable German cargo of Chinese goods sold to America, but as the English cruisers have been stopping and searching Japanese ships to see if there is any cargo shipped by Germans, it is thought probable that this ship will go to Hongkong for English cargo rather than to Shanghai for German cargo. The company has no assurance that its legitimate trade will not be molested by the British. The impression prevails that even if we had an American marine it would have to do the bidding of the British.

I happen to be the director in chief of an international institute. As we have not excluded Germans as members and officers, and as I have dared to write in a local German paper, every English newspaper out here, under official approval, has proposed a boycott of this institute. Pressure has been brought to bear on members of other nationalities. Thus far we have been independent of such control and are the only organization where Germans are included. Still we suffer financial loss.

Some months ago the local British chamber of commerce imparted the following information to its members:

"Getting Busy—Our American friends recognizing the possibilities of this market and the fact that European powers are engaged at the moment elsewhere, are 'getting busy' so as to take away all the trade they can from all of us.

"Organization.—It is very necessary that British merchants should recognize that Americans have been laying their plans on very broad foundations and with consummate skill and foresight through a number of years.

"The British Position.—The Americans have understood the Chinese character and have acted upon their understanding better than we have or can hope to do. We have no surplus indemnity, as Sir Edward Grey has stated, to hand back to China. We only estimated the exact costs of our expedition and trade losses, consequently there is nothing left over. If there were, it is too late for us to repay with any hope of imitating Americans. They were so long first in the field and have been so far the only ones that any repayment by ourselves would only add to the 'Kudos' gained by the American move.

"British Effort.—A consideration of the above and many other facts which are within the ken of the members of the chamber should make us realize that we must fight for our commercial position not only against the Germans, who were our great competitors, but now against the Americans, who are seriously endeavoring to capture the Chinese market. It is extremely necessary for British merchants to unitedly strain every nerve to keep all we have and to increase our trade."

INVISIBLE WARFARE

James Norman Hall's "Kitchener's Mob," published by the Houghton-Mifflin company, is one of the best books that have come out of the war. Its intensely human touches of characterization, from the pen of an American citizen who fought with the first expeditionary force sent to Flanders by the late Earl Kitchener, has brought out in bold relief the humor loving but reticent, restrainedly emotional English Tommy as few books have. The following passage from it gives an insight into the real conditions of modern trench warfare.

By James Norman Hall.

"Fritzie, w'en you comin' out?
This wot you calls a fight?
You won't never get to Calais
Always keepin' out o' sight.

"We're a-goin' back to Blighty—
Wot's the use a-witin' 'ere
Like a lot o' bloomin' mud larks
Fer old Fritzie to appear?
'E never puts 'is napper up
Above the parapet.
We been in France for seven months
An' 'aven't seen 'im yet!"

SO sang Tommy, the incorrigible parodist, during the long summer days and nights of 1915, when he was impatiently waiting for something to turn up. For three months and more we were face to face with an enemy whom we rarely saw. It was a weird experience. Rifles cracked, bullets zip-zipped along the top of the parapet, great shells whistled over our heads or tore immense holes in the trenches, trench mortar projectiles and hand grenades were hurled at us, and yet there was not a living soul to be seen across the narrow strip of No Man's Land whence all this murderous rain of steel and lead was coming.

Daily we kept careful and continuous watch, searching the long, curving line of German trenches and the ground behind them with our periscopes and field glasses, and nearly always with the same barren result. We say only the thin wreaths of smoke rising, morning and evening, from trench fires; the shattered trees, the forlorn and silent ruins, the long grass waving in the wind.

Although we were often within 200 yards of thousands of German soldiers, rarely farther than 400 yards away, I did not see one of them until we had been in the trenches for more than six weeks, and then only for the interval of a second or two. My German was building up a piece of damaged parapet. I watched the earth being thrown over the top of the trench, when suddenly a head appeared, only to be immediately withdrawn. One of our snipers had evidently been watching, too. A rifle cracked and I saw a cloud of dust arise where the bullet clipped the top of the parapet. The German waved his spade defiantly in the air and continued digging; but he remained discreetly under cover thereafter.

This marked an epoch in my experience in a war of unseen forces. I had actually beheld a German, although Tommy insisted that it was only the old caretaker, "the bloke wot keeps the trenches tidy." This mythical personage, a creature of Tommy's own fancy, assumed a very real importance during the summer when the attractions at the western theater of war were only mildly interesting.

"Carl the caretaker" was supposed to be a methodical old man whom the emperor had left in charge of his trenches on the western front during the absence of the German armies in Russia. Many were the stories told about him at different parts of the line. Sometimes he was endowed with a family. His "missus" and his "three little nippers" were with him, and together they were blocking the way to Berlin of the entire British army.

Sometimes he was "Hans the Grenadier," owing to his fondness for nightly bombing parties. Sometimes he was "Minnie's husband," Minnie being that redoubtable lady known in polite military circles as a "Minenwerfer." As already explained, she was sausage-like in shape and frightfully demonstrative. When she went visiting at the behest of her husband, Tommy usually contrived to be "not at home," whereupon Minnie wrecked the house and disappeared in a cloud of dense black smoke.

One imagines all sorts of monstrous things about an unseen enemy. The strain of constantly watching and seeing nothing became unbearable at times. We were often too far apart to have our early morning interchange of courtesies, and then the constant phtt-phtt of bullests annoyed and exasperated us. I, for one, welcomed any evidence that our opponents were fathers and husbands and brothers just as we were. I remember my delight one fine summer morning, at seeing three great kites soaring above the German line.

There is much to be said for men who enjoy flying kites. Once they mounted a dummy figure of a man on their parapet. Fritz and Hans were true sportsmen while the fun was on and did not once fire at us. Then the dummy was taken down and we returned to the more serious game of war with the old deadly earnestness. I recall such incidents with joy as I remember certain happy events in childhood.

The heavy selling of wheat futures on Friday resulted in an oversold market condition and when shorts tried to cover offerings were found to be light and prices rallied easily. There was little pressure, although weather conditions were favorable and cables indifferent, with no appreciable improvement in the export demand. Last prices were 1c to 1@1⅛c higher.

With the exception of a few local showers, the weather over the winter wheat belt was generally fine, with the forecast for fine weather over Sunday. Weather permitting harvest will become general over the greater part of the belt the coming week, and from recent reports the outlook is much more optimistic than it was a month ago. Spring wheat reports also were more favorable.

Northwest Reports Bearish.

In the northwest conditions have been favorable the last month and in parts of North Dakota and the Canadian northwest as big yields as last year are being predicted. The general impression is the July crop report will show much larger crop than was estimated last month. The local cash market was a little firmer, with No. 2 red selling as high as 2c over July and best No. 2 hard at 1½c over on track.

The cash sales were 10,000 bu. There was some buying of Manitoba wheat at the seaboard, but there was no buying of consequence of our wheat, and foreigners are displaying but little interest in the new crop wheat, although it is decidedly probable that purchases of the latter will be heavy if the quality is satisfactory to buyers on the other side.

Big Receipts in West.

Primary receipts for the week continue heavy, being 4,820,000 bu for the week, compared to 3,070,000 bu a year ago. Clearances were moderate at 823,000 bu. Local receipts were 8 cars. The northwest had a big run, 383 cars, against 108 cars a year ago, and primary arrivals for the day were 786,000 bu, compared to 250,000 bu a year ago.

Buying of wheat was led by Lowitz, Armour, King-Farnum, Knight-McDougal, and Logan-Bryan. Selling was fairly general at the start, but the demand from shorts and commission houses checked the selling, and there was a disposition to even up trades over Sunday. Cables were up 1d to 1½d off. No special demand was reported on the other side. Argentine and Australian reports were favorable, the acreage in Australia being privately estimated about as large as the record area of last year.

Corn Rallies After Break.

Lowest prices for corn were made at the start, and later prices worked up about 1c from the low point, closing ⅝@¾c to ⅞c higher. Cash prices were steady to ½c lower, and there were sales of 525,000 bu including 150,000 bu to exporters. Crop reports were more favorable and there was a marked improvement in the weather conditions, but shorts started to cover and there was little pressure to sell, the advance being due more to light offerings than to any big buying.

Receipts were 127 cars and primary receipts were 741,000 bu, with 3,760,000 bu for the week, against 3,728,000 bu a year ago. Clearances were 332,000 bu. Cables were unchanged to ½d lower. Country offerings were smaller as the result of the break in values for futures.

Cash Oats Sales Large.

The cash demand for oats was fair and with the strength in other grains prices rallied. The close was ⅛@¼c to ½c higher. Shipping sales were 405,000 bu. Country sales were moderate, according to receivers, but there are no indications of any falling off in receipts, primary arrivals for the week being 3,850,000 bu, compared to 2,802,000 bu a year ago. Clearances were 305,000 bu. Jackson, Slaughter, Knight-McDougal, Arnot, and Armour were buyers of oats.

Hog Products Score Rally.

Packers were buyers of products yesterday, and shorts were forced to cover on an advancing market. Hog receipts were 15,000, with prices 5c off at the yards. Receipts Monday were estimated at 46,000, with 155,000 the coming week. The cash trade is fair, and the foreign demand is expected to continue good. Liverpool prices were unchanged for meats, 6d off for cash lard, and 1s off for July. Western receipts of hogs for the week were 565,000, against 600,000 the previous week and 497,000 a year ago.

Firm Market for Rye.

Rye was strong, with sales of No. 3 at 98c; No. 4, 95c; and sample grade, 87c. New No. 2 rye, August-September shipment, was 90c bid. Receipts were 5 cars.

Barley ruled strong. Malting was quoted 70@79c and sold 72@76c; feed was quotable 60@68c and screenings 45@55c, with sales of latter at 48@54c. Receipts, 22 cars.

Timothy seed was quiet; September, $7.25 bid and $7.50 asked; cash lots quoted $5.50@8.50. Cloverseed was steady, with cash lots quoted $8.00@14.00.

Duluth flax closed ¼@1c higher. Cash on track, $1.77; July, $1.77¾; September, $1.78½; and November, $1.77¾. Receipts, 4 cars. Minneapolis was 1c higher, with cash on track $1.74½@1.78½; receipts were 18 cars. Winnipeg closed ¾@⅞c higher; July, 1.56⅝c; and October, $1.60¼. Receipts, 20 cars.

NEWS AND GOSSIP OF BOARD OF TRADE

"Corn is not so far advanced as desirable at this date, but it is fully ten days earlier than last year," said John Inglis in a report to Logan-Bryan. "In southern sections of the southwest much of it is tasseling; in southern sections of the central states it stands knee to waist deep. About 10 per cent of the total area is late planted, standing only four to six inches. The late planted as a rule is weedy and lacks cultivation. About 90 per cent of the fields are clean, dry, and warmer weather needed. There is sufficient moisture everywhere to bring it to shooting period. Farm reserves are liberal, but as harvesting, haying, and the need of immediate cultivation are crowding farmers the movement likely to be light until August. Hay crop large. Through central states the quality is impaired by an excess of weeds. Pastures good; abundant forage over the entire country."

From dispatch from the Canadian Pacific railway at Montreal: "Regina, Sask., provincial government reports on crop situation show grain is in excellent condition practically all over province. Wheat is up to ten inches in some districts and oats are up to five inches. Prospects indicate good hay crop. Barley also is well up nearly all over. Flax conditions are equal to and in advance of last year in most places. Lethbridge, Alberta, report says prospects are bright throughout southern Alberta for a repetition of the record breaking crop of last year. Reports are coming in of remarkable growth of grain following heavy rains and recent warm weather. Wheat is ten inches high in most places and a few fields show even better."

Shorts were the principal buyers of wheat yesterday, but there was fair buying by commission houses, some traders taking wheat on the theory that prices were low enough for the present. The news did not suggest any change in conditions, the export demand still conspicuous by its absence, while the weather conditions showed general improvement. Kansas reports were favorable and harvesting will be in full swing in a few days in that state. Canadian reports were optimistic and North Dakota advices indicate the possibility of much larger yields than suggested early, recent conditions having been favorable. The rally in prices was regarded as natural generally after such a pronounced decline.

Cash wheat prices were steady, and in some instances a little firmer tone was noted. No. 2 hard was July price to 1½c over on track. No. 2 red was 2c over best wheat. Offerings were moderate, but receipts are fair. Outside markets were fairly steady. Northwest receipts continue large. Corn was steady to ½c off, and oats were unchanged to ¼c off. Cash sales were 525,000 bu corn and 405,000 bu oats. Export sales included 150,000 bu corn and 100,000 bu oats. Country sales of corn were smaller as the result of the break in prices, farmers showing no disposition to sell on the setbacks. Wheat sales were 10,000 bu.

Perrine & Co. had the following from Miami, Okla.: "Harvest is on in full blast under ideal conditions and will be finished this week. Oats harvest will commence next Monday. Quality of the new wheat and oats will be very fine and the yields may run 50 per cent more than we anticipated June 1. Wheat will be moving freely within ten days. Considerable corn has been laid by, most of it about four feet high, good color and ample moisture to run it for a month, which will put the corn in the earing period."

"The general cash position in products is a healthy one," said W. L. Gregson. "Higher prices for meats are freely predicted, and if they are realized the lard at the present discounts should prove to have all the merit its friends have so confidently hoped for.

"We look for wide fluctuations and a broadening interest in the product with lard gradually assuming the lead as the season advances."

New York dealers in Argentine corn said that the amount of business which would be put through would depend very largely on the action of the Argentine freight market. If that weakened so that corn could be laid down here from 6 to 8 cents a bushel under the western price, it would permit of a fairly wide distribution, but at 4 to 5 cents under the distribution was restricted largely to the port of arrival.

J. T. McLaughlin & Co. say of corn: "The demand for the actual corn is good and we believe a larger amount will be wanted than is available. Provision prices do not warrant any low prices on corn. The December corn is the future that looks to be the cheapest relatively."

Charles Sincere & Co. had samples of wheat from Frankfort, S. D., which are said to represent the average crop. The root growth showed it was "stubbled," and the blade is shriveled and denotes a short yield of poor quality.

New York wired there was no demand for corn or oats for export, but some business in Manitobas had been done, completing an order that has been in market for some time.

Thomson-McKinnon, Chicago, announce the opening of a summer office July 5, located at 111 Bridge street, Charlevoix, Mich., under the management of H. L. Winters.

Receipts inspected Saturday: Wheat, 48 cars; corn, 127 cars; oats, 119 cars; rye, 5 cars; barley, 22 cars. Hogs estimated for Monday, 46,000 head, and for all next week, 155,000 head.

John Barrett, who is in New York, wired that the only winter wheat state that would have a good crop of wheat was Nebraska.

Minneapolis stocks of wheat decreased 10,000 bu for one day.

METALS.

NEW YORK, June 24.—While some inquiries for copper have been received from Europe during the last day or two, no actual business seems to have resulted and very little demand has been reported from domestic sources. The large producers, who have been holding their quotations for electrolytic at 29@29½c for forward shipment, show no disposition to force sales in view of the Mexican crisis, but resellers are offering small lots at from 27@28c for nearby and forward delivery.

Possibilities of Rural Credits.

Discussion of rural credits usually is based on the assumption that when a farmer wants to borrow money an unreasonable rate of interest is exacted from him and hard conditions are imposed. The assumption is true in exceptional cases, but for the ordinary prosperous farmer living in a fertile region there are plenty of mortgage dealers ready to compete against each other in offering the best terms possible. The mortgage dealer must sell the loan to an investor at a price to yield the former a living profit. The average investor wants 6 per cent, but probably will accept 5½ or 5 if he cannot do better. Less than 5 he will not have. The result is the farmer pays 6 to 7 per cent, the extra 1 per cent going to cover the expense and a narrow margin of profit.

The business has been so thoroughly systematized that the expense and profit are now about at a minimum. Any reduction of either would bring deterioration in the output. The only sound way left to make a further reduction in cost to the farmer is to induce the investor to accept less than a 5 per cent minimum. This is possible in theory, but whether it can be done in practice is not so certain.

A good farm mortgage is recognized as being one of the most conservative of investments. It yields from ½ to 1½ per cent more than a gilt edged bond, principally because the bond can be converted into cash at a moment's notice, while the mortgage cannot. If some plan can be devised which will standardize and guarantee mortgages so that they can be converted into cash as readily as a bond, they may become salable on a lower income basis than at present. If that were done, the farmer would gain the difference.

There is no question that lower interest rates would be of advantage to farmers and therefore to everyone else, provided always that the rates were obtained by a sound method, so that they would stand on their own merits and not on artificial supports.

Midwest Refining.

K. F. P., Mt. Carmel, Ill.—The Midwest Refining company is said to be earning more now than last year, but the official information on the subject of present earnings is refused. The company reported $1,825,287 net earnings in 1915, which is slightly more than 10 per cent on the $18,000,000 of stock. The dividend rate was increased from 4 to 6 per cent a year last February.

Brief Answers.

J. K. B., Indianapolis, Ind.—The Commonwealth Electric first 5s are among the most conservative of public utility bonds. They are secured under the same mortgage as the Commonwealth Edison bonds and the interest is earned between three and four times.

F. W. S., Cambridge, Ill.—The Columbian National Life company has been in business fourteen years and has had a rapid growth. It has $1,000,000 capital, and on Dec. 31 last had $463,775 of surplus. It has earned and paid dividends of 7 per cent annually for some years past.

COFFEE AND SUGAR.

NEW YORK, June 24.—There was a further decline in the market for coffee futures here today. Offers were not as active as they were during the earlier stages of the selling movement, but there was renewed scattering liquidation and some selling by brokers with New Orleans connections, and after opening at a decline of 2@3 points active months sold about 3@5 points under last night's closing figures. September contracts sold off to 7.97c and December to 8.12c, or 90@92 points under the high records of last month. The close was a point or two up from the lowest at a net decline of 2@3 points. Sales, 17,000 bags. PRINCESS MOTOR STOCK
EARNING 40%
A MOST ATTRACTIVE OFFERING OF STOCK!

Princess Motor Car Corporation is turning out at the rate of Three Thousand Cars per annum at the present time.

The present earnings are equivalent to Forty per cent. on the outstanding capital.

The authorized capital is One Million Dollars, divided into 1,000,000 shares of the par value of One Dollar each. All common, no bonds, and no preferred stock.

A limited amount of the treasury stock is now offered for sale at par,

One Dollar per share

For the purpose of financing an increased production, to 10,000 cars per year. A large oversubscription is anticipated.

This increased production should establish earnings of at least 75% of the full authorized capital of the corporation.

The Princess Motor Car Co. has a fully equipped plant of fifty cars daily. No bonded or mortgaged indebtedness.

Clients who followed our advice on other motor shares have made tremendous profits. Buy Princess motor stock for a big advance.

A New Crop of Millionaires

Is springing up in Kentucky, where high grade oil has been struck at localities covering a wide area. Hundreds of rich producing wells are being drilled, fortunes are being made from day to day and intense excitement and activity are increasing daily. The KENOVA OIL CO.

Has under lease 27,000 acres of the choicest part of these new and rich oil fields. Drilling operations are being prosecuted vigorously. The first well is rapidly going down to the main oil sands. The shares of the company are among the most active and strongest of the New York Curb Market.

Within the past month or so Kenova Oil has advanced from 51c to 89c a share. The results of drilling operations should create for the stock a market value of $2 to $3 a share within the next thirty to sixty days. I rate it now as the greatest speculative purchase of the time.

Wire your orders before the stock reflects further drilling operations. Very large profits are clearly indicated. Detailed information free on request. Address all correspondence to

EXCESS RESERVE MAKES A GAIN IN NEW YORK BANKS

Holdings Reach $109,520,410—Cash Increases, but Deposits Contract.

The excess reserve of the New York banks had another lift yesterday, $15,-820,670. The item now stands at $109,-520,410, an increase of $53,670,070 since the low point was touched, June 3, $55,850,-340.

The expansion in the surplus was due in large part to an increase in cash. Deposits, however, showed a contraction of over $14,000,000. It is probable the imports of gold from Canada are largely responsible for the exhibit, since about $18,000,000 was brought in during the week. The figures:

Film Merger in Prospect.

Benjamin B. Hampton, who was instrumental in financing the Vitagraph Company of America and who has been named repeatedly in connection with a proposed moving picture merger, has resigned as vice president of the American Tobacco company to devote his entire time to the film business.

This change is thought to portend the merger of a number of film companies with the Vitagraph concern as a nucleus. Mr. Hampton will represent large interests which are invested heavily in the Vitagraph company. These interests, it is stated, include Thomas F. Ryan and P. S. Hill, president of the American Tobacco company.

Curb Generally Steady.

In the unlisted securities market Avery Company common continues firm at 80 bid, offered at 82; the preferred at 101 to 103. A better demand was in evidence for Bucyrus common at 12 bid, with light offerings at 13½. The preferred was in demand at 58 bid, offered at 61.

Butler Bros. was quoted 245 bid, 247 asked. Chalmers Motor common sold at 180, closing 172 bid, 178 asked. Fisk Tire and Rubber common declined from sales at 160; stock is offered at 155, with buyers at 145. Hart, Schaffner & Marx common continues steady at 78 bid; offered at 80; stock changed hands at 79.

Demand for Moline Plow.

Moline Plow preferred continues firm at 94 to 95. A good demand exists for Sulzberger & Sons preferred at 95, with no offerings under 96; stock is ex-dividend of 1¾ per cent.

United States Gypsum common was wanted at 40, with stock offered at 41½; the preferred is steady at 97¾ bid, 98¾ asked, ex-dividend. Continental Motor declined from 42 to 38; stock is wanted at 37. Packard Motor new stock is offered at 194, with buyers at 185. Reo Motor Car changed hands at 40, closing 40@41, while Reo Motor Truck declined to 36⅝, closing 36½ to 37. Page-Detroit was in good demand at 52, offered at 54.

The Sugar securities have been rather quiet. German-American Sugar was offered for sale freely at 22½, with buyers at 21. Holland-St. Louis common continues strong at 15 to 16½; Michigan Sugar common declined from 114 to 108½.

Great Lakes Neglected.

Great Lakes Dredge and Dock has been neglected with stock offered at 110. Kellogg Switchboard and Supply advanced to 285 on good buying, 285 was bid for stock at the close; the volume of trade during the week light for this security. By-Products Coke corporation was steady around 151@154. Goodyear Tire and Rubber common shows no decline in the present market, with light offerings.

Public Utilities.

Public Utility securities showed an unsettled tendency. Cities Service common advanced from 305 to sales as high as 323, closing in good demand at the latter figure. The preferred was unchanged at 86. Ohio Cities Gas sold from 61 to 58½, but reacted to 64 bid, offered at 66.

Northern States Power common was slightly easier, changing hands around 100. United Light and Railways common was in fair demand around 53½@54, the preferred was traded in at 76½, ex-dividend. Middle West Utilities common sold at 51, preferred 79; Republic Railway and Light common, 39; Standard Gas and Electric common 15½, preferred 41½.

Bank Share Quotations.

The bank stock market remains practically unchanged. Reported sales are as follows:

Continental and Commercial National, 260½, ex-dividend; Illinois Trust, 485; Central Trust company of Illinois, 201; Chicago Savings, 142.

NEWS OF THE FINANCIAL WORLD

The New York market closed in the best tone which characterized any session of the week. The metal shares—that is, copper and zinc—showed firm recoveries. Butte and Superior, after touching 65¼ on Friday, closed at 69¼. American Zinc from a close on Friday from 41⅞ finished the week at 43. Anaconda gained ½ point during the day, closing at 80. United States Steel was about steady, while Bethlehem was up 17 points for the session.

There has been deposited 67,244 shares of Perlman Rim stock out of the total capitalization of 100,000 shares with the Guaranty Trust company under the proposal made by the United Motors corporation to issue two shares of its stock in exchange for one share of Perlman Rim.

The Railway Steel Spring company will soon issue a statement showing 25 per cent earned on the stock in the current fiscal year soon to close. It is thought dividends will be resumed at an early date.

The public utilities commission of New Jersey has approved the application of the New York, Susquehanna and Western railroad of a trust lease and the issuance of 4½ per cent equipment trust certificates for $530,000.

There was deposited at New York assay office $2,500,000 gold bars received from Ottawa. This makes a total of $99,275,000 imported from Canada on the present movement.

Articles of incorporation have been filed at Albany, N. Y., by the Stutz Motor Company of America, Inc. The company has 75,000 shares of no par value and will begin business with $375,000 cash.

Profits of the International Mercantile Marine company are expected to result in $77,000,000 cash in hand by July 1, an amount sufficient to retire the bonded debt.

The $500,000 bond issue of the Baltimore, Cottonsville and Ellicott Mills Electric Railway company will be redeemed by the United Railway and Electric company on July 1.

The American Woolen company has received an order for about $1,500,000 of its product from the United States government.

Beginning of $ Credits.

In a small way the export of metals has been the means of introducing dollar exchange in Europe. At the beginning of the war sellers of metal drew checks in pounds, francs, or lire on the purchaser. These were sold in the New York market.

On account of the rapid fall in exchange, however, the producers of copper and spelter were unwilling to take the risk of exchange. About a year ago the American Smelting and Refining company suggested to foreign purchasers of metal that they open ninety days' sight credits in dollars with New York banks and bankers.

At first this recommendation, it is said was not favorably received, but recently dollar credits amounting to a good many millions have been opened for the account of French and Italian firms, with a prominent New York trust company and several international banking houses.

Most of the London banks so far have been unwilling to open dollar credits in New York.

Buckeye Pipe Line.

Market comment is to the effect that interest in the Standard Oil pipe line issues has fallen to such a low ebb that these stocks have failed to respond to the improvement in their position and prospects.

Buckeye Pipe Line is cited as a case in point, selling at 88 recently, the stock reached the lowest level at which it has been quoted since 1912. At this price the yield is slightly over 9 per cent on the basis of the present dividend rates.

Thus far in 1916 the Buckeye pipe shows an increase of 30 per cent in deliveries. For the first five months of 1915, the receipts were 7,667,639 barrels. For the corresponding period in 1916 the receipts were 9,973,204 barrels.

Why Steel Stays Down.

United States Steel common stock is selling lower than it was when earnings were running at the rate of less than $150,000,000 a year, as against at least $260,000,000 at this time. The common stock in 1909 sold up to 94⅞, while earnings for the year were $131,491,000.

It is figured in New York that but for foreign liquidation of something like 600,-000 shares, Steel common might be selling above par. The creation of new securities and the drift of speculation to motor and munition shares are two other reasons given for the failure of steel common to respond to extraordinary earnings.

In the next six months no falling off in earnings is expected. The corporation is sold up for the remainder of the year at prices which will enable it to obtain a larger margin of profit than in the current quarter.

Chicago Securities.

Prices on the Chicago stock exchange were irregular and generally lower. Stewart-Warner was off ½, Sears-Roebuck common 1¼, and Pneumatic Tool ½. Commonwealth Edison was firm at 143½.

In the bond department there was a fair volume of business without much change in prices. A sale of Chicago Elevated Railways 5s was made at 96.

Money and Exchange.

Money rates in Chicago steady at 3½@4 per cent on collateral, 3@4 per cent on commercial paper, and 4@4½ per cent over the counter. New York exchange sold at 15c and 5c discount. Chicago bank clearings were $53,095,645.

Clearings Gain Again.

Chicago bank clearings for the week ended June 24 were $373,745,813, an increase of $91,147,676, or 32.25 per cent, as compared with the corresponding week last year. This represents one of the biggest gains yet made over last year's results. The figures:

Investors' Section Distributed.

The Economist Publishing company has just issued its 1916 "Investors' Section," a 160 page digest of financial, commercial and business statistics and information. The publication is a reliable annual production and this year includes a section devoted to the railroad results during the last year. It is a local company and treats Chicago companies more in detail as a result.

Baltimore and Ohio Development.

The Baltimore and Ohio railroad received bids on Friday for the construction of the Long Fork railroad in northeastern Kentucky from a junction with the Chesapeake and Ohio in Floyd county in a southerly direction to its headquarters at Weeksbury, Knott county, a distance of twenty-six miles. The line will be single track, with five tunnels from 140 feet to 775 feet in length. Work will begin at once, as the line will reach a large area of the coal lands on which development has recently been started.

IN FOREIGN STOCK MARKET.

LONDON, June 24.—Business on the stock exchange was very slack, but the tone was generally satisfactory. The Mexican situation had no apparent effect on Central American or South American countries, but made business in American rails shrink. Gilt edge securities and colonial and foreign bonds were steady and shipping shares closed easy.

PRESSURE IS RENEWED.

New York, June 24.—With the Mexican situation still hanging in the balance, the week end session of the stock market varied little from its recent irregularity. Vulnerable specialties were again pressed for sale, though more moderately, but representative stocks held their own when not making actual gains.

Operations were obviously professional, and the general price improvement noted at the close resulted to a considerable extent from short covering. Rails were favorably affected. Bethlehem Steel, on relatively few transactions, made a gain of 17 points. Motors also rose materially, but Mexicans and coppers were variable. United States Industrial Alcohol was again the center of speculative activity, scoring an extreme decline of 3½ points, only part of which was regained.

Gold Exports Grow.

Further exports of gold from Canada brought the total amount up to about $80,000,000, exclusive of direct shipments from the Dominion to the Philadelphia mint, which swelled the total to almost $100,000,000. Foreign exchange markets were unchanged in the absence of more than nominal dealings. Trade reports as issued by leading authorities indicate an abatement of the rush that featured the business of the late winter and early spring, but leading jobbing centers continue active with wide distribution.

Another substantial increase of reserves was the most noteworthy feature of the bank statement, that item expanding almost $16,000,000 and bringing actual excess reserves up to about $110,000,000, agains $56,000,000 the first week of the month. Loans in that same period show a contraction of slightly more than $116,-000,000.

Today's bond market was narrow and without especial feature. United States bonds and the Panama issues were lower by ½@2 points on call during the week.

Make Money on Your Coal!

Buy now, during June. It is the real logical time to put in your coal. Prices are down, but they are advancing every month. Why wait—your order now means a big saving even on our low wholesale mine prices. Tecumseh Coal, the famous heat producing coal, is absolutely guaranteed under bond as to quality and weight.

TECUMSEH COAL

Every shipment runs over our huge Marcus Picking Table that sorts for size and removes all impurities. You get the finest coal that is mined and you save big money. Our mines are located near Vincennes, Ind.—close at hand. Let us quote you exact freight rates. The Tecumseh Coal Club Plan takes care of small users. Let us tell you how. Write us today.

During June Only $1.70 Per Ton

Millions in Profits Going to Motor Stockholders

¶ The enormous earnings being piled up by the country's automobile manufacturers have fully justified the increased market valuation of motor stocks.

¶ Moreover, the increasing growth of the industry should mean a still greater enhancement of motor-stock values, logically necessitated by the continued expansion of the business.

¶ The following are some of the automobile manufacturers who are participating in the present unparalleled prosperity:

Overland Chalmers
Chandler Chevrolet
Studebaker Saxon
Maxwell Peerless
Hupp Reo

MOTORING IN THE YUKON WILDS IS FULL OF THRILLS

Skidding Cliffs Bring Heart to Mouth—Trip "Movie" of Nature's Wonders.

BY FRANK G. CARPENTER.

[Copyright: 1916: By Frank G. Carpenter.]

WHITE HORSE, Yukon territory.—One hundred miles through the wilds of the Yukon in a high powered motor car!

Dashing through the virgin forest in a $5,000 automobile!

Climbing the mountain sides and flying around the curves at thirty miles an hour!

Skidding round the cliffs with your heart in your throat, your soul full of thrills, and your backbone chilled to the marrow!

These are some of the experiences I have just had with Herbert Wheeler, the general manager of the White Pass and Yukon route on the overland trail from White Horse to Dawson. The chauffeur was "Caterpillar" Ike and the time was from midday to midnight.

Short Cut to Gold Mines.

The overland trail begins at White Horse and it runs through the wilderness for a distance of 350 miles to the mouth of the Klondike. It is the short cut across country from here to the gold mines, and is more than 100 miles less than the way there by river. The road is used to carry mails, passengers, and freight during the cold winter months when everything in this region is locked tight by Jack Frost, and the thermometer at times falls to 70 degrees below zero.

The road has been cut right through the forest. It climbs over ranges of mountains, it winds its way through the valleys, and it crosses swamps, bogs, and sloughs of glacial mud. Here it is bedded on the rock, there it half floats on the quicksand, upheld by corduroy logs.

Crest of the Range.

In my ride over the road we went to the crest of the range beyond Little river and then returned to White Horse to go down the Yukon by steamer. Our road wound about like a corkscrew in many parts of its course. As Mr. Wheeler said, it was as though the surveyors had laid their lines along the trail of a rabbit and the rabbit was drunk.

The whole trip was a moving picture of the wonders of nature. Outside the roadway the country is the same as it was when Columbus discovered America; the same as when the Danes drifted down our coast, about 1000 A. D.—yes, I venture, the same as when old Cheops built his first pyramid on the banks of the Nile.

Trees Marvelous in Beauty.

Our first stop was at twenty-two miles from White Horse. It was at the Tahkeena roadhouse, on the Tahkeena river, where there is a famous Irish cook, Jimmy. The roadhouse is made of logs. It is heated with stoves made of gasoline tanks of 100 gallons capacity.

The tank lies on its side, resting on four legs made of gas pipe. A stovepipe is fitted into the top and a door is cut in one end. The result is an excellent heating arrangement, and one that is common in many parts of Alaska. We got a snack at the roadhouse and had an excellent dinner there upon our return.

We crossed the Tahkeena river on a ferry boat attached to a cable worked by the current; and then rode on for miles through a parklike country, spotted with groves of pines as high as a three story house, as straight as an arrow, and, branches and all, no bigger around than a nail keg. They maintained this diameter from the ground almost to their tops.

The trees here are like those of most parts of interior Alaska. They grow in the thin soil which is underlaid by strata of earth that have been frozen for thousands of years. The roots go down to the ice and then spread out over the ground. The soil is nowhere more than half a foot or so deep.

19 Kinds of Wild Flowers.

There were so many wild flowers that I attempted to count them in an open place where we stopped to put on a new tire. I had picked nineteen varieties before the job was completed. Among them were wild roses of bright red, buttercups as yellow as gold, and white flowers with petals like those of a forget-me-not.

The character of the country varied as we went onward.

Just beyond the Tahkeena river we rode through a valley walled with mountains from which the earth had been torn by a cloudburst a few years ago. The face of the hills was spotted with clay colored blotches, rising out of the green. It looked as if it had been blasted by leprosy or some mighty plague.

We crossed one little glacial river after another, and rode through valleys which are covered with ice in the winter, and become a souplike slough in the spring. A great part of the way was over what is known as glacial clay, a kind of earth that will have much to do with the railroad Uncle Sam is now building.

This clay is solid when dry, but when moist it assumes the consistency of shoemakers' wax and, like a quicksand, sucks in anything that goes over it. If a railroad track is built on it and not well protected by drainage, it may disappear during a long rainy season or where the water of a creek or river has seeped its way through.

The only salvation for a road of this kind is to keep it well drained. That is what will have to be done with the track of our new railway, and, wherever possible, the moss will be left on the frozen strata and the road built upon that.

Hog market opened 5c lower on fresh receipts of 13,000 head and a heavy stale supply, but buyers appeared anxious to accumulate reserves at the decline and values strengthened as the session progressed. Late sales were at better values than were obtainable late Friday. Tops sold at $9.90 and the bulk at $9.60@9.80. Shippers were moderate buyers, taking only about 1,000 head. Pigs held steady for the day.

Final prices made hogs 5c to 15c lower than a week ago, although the average price of all hogs here this week was advanced to $9.80, against $9.75 last week. Pigs were largely 10c higher than a week ago. Total receipts of hogs this week aggregated more than 155,000 head and were 34,000 head in excess of the previous week's arrivals. Shipments for six days showed only a slight increase.

Hog purchases for the day: Armour & Co., 4,000; Swift & Co., 1,800; Sulzberger & Sons, 1,500; Morris & Co., 1,000; Anglo-American, 1,400; Hammond, 900; Boyd-Lunham, 400; Roberts & Oake, 300; Western Packing, 1,400; Miller & Hart, 400; Independent Packing Co., 1,700; butchers, 800; Brennan Packing Co., 1,000; shippers, 1,000; total, 17,600; left over, 2,000.

CATTLE.

Beef steer values closed at the low point for the week, showing net losses of 40@75c from closing values a week ago. The plain lightweight steers showed the big end of the decline, selling at a disadvantage because of increased offerings and competition from Texas cattle received direct by packers. Cows and heifers closed 75c@$1.00 lower than a week ago, while canners and cutters suffered a loss of 25@65c. Calves held without material change. Total receipts of cattle increased about 3,000 head, while shipments increased less than 1,000. Expectations are for lighter receipts the coming week, and traders look for the market to recover if offerings are held down to less abundant proportions.

Cattle at seven western markets for the week, 148,900, against 138,300 the preceding week, 113,500 a year ago, and 110,700 two years ago. Total for 1916 to date, 3,486,000 against 3,087,000 the same period in 1915.

SHEEP.

Sheep closed strong to 10@15c higher than a week ago, while lambs were unchanged to 15@25c higher. Trade this week has been held within comparatively narrow bounds, with packers receiving a large proportion of the arrivals direct from outside points, and indifferent as to conditions here. Total receipts for the week were nearly 4,000 head short of those of the preceding week, while shipments showed a loss of little more than 1,000 head. Lambs topped the market at $10 and sheep at $8.15. The close found buyers in urgent need of lightweight sheep and prime quality lambs, supply of which has been insufficient the last few days. Heavy sheep and lambs of mediocre quality are not wanted.

AUTOMOBILE STOCKS

are making more money for the investor than any other stocks on the market. Had you invested a few hundred dollars at the beginning with Ford, Hupp, the Reo, Saxon, Chalmers, Paige-Detroit, Chandler, White or any of several others, you would have a tidy fortune today.

Today the automobile industry is established along permanent lines and today it is paying bigger profits than ever before in the history of the business. It is a solid fact, however, that the big money has been made by those who had the foresight to get in on the ground floor with a newly established company. It is very true that some large profits have been made on the Stock Exchange during the past few months, but it is equally true that much larger profits have been made by those who bought these stocks when they were first put out and the companies were being organized.

We are the largest exclusive dealers in automobile securities in the country. We do not handle any other stocks or bonds. We devote our entire time and attention to the automobile security market. For that reason we believe that we are in a better position to furnish facts and information and advice regarding automobile securities than any other brokerage or banking house in the United States.

Within the last few months Willys-Overland has advanced $130.00 per share. Reo stock has advanced over $30.00 per share. Chevrolet was selling for less than $100 a few months ago and is now over $200 per share, and if you had bought Paige-Detroit you would have doubled your money.

The above advice is worth while and can be verified through any Broker.

Regardless of the merit of other automobile securities, we today advise the purchase of "Emerson."

We urge all of our clients and readers to act promptly, for the price is on the eve of a big advance.

This new five-passenger touring car to sell at the low price of $395 is the result of Mr. R. C. Hupp's many years' experience.

During Mr. Hupp's long experience in the automobile world and in the course of the evolution of the automobile industry for the past fifteen years, during which period his fame has become international, he says, after carefully checking everything over, that this new creation is without question the most perfect in design, durability and line of any low priced automobile ever made.

It is well known that Mr. R. C. Hupp's approval and opinion of this new car is eminently worth while. He started with the Oldsmobile in 1902. At that time the car was sold at $650 when other automobiles were selling from $2,000 up. Mr. Hupp was graduated from the Olds Motor Works to the Ford Company in 1905. Through Mr. Hupp's knowledge and experience while making the lowest priced automobile in the world, with the Olds Motor Works, he became one of the factors with Henry Ford in the production of the first $500 Ford runabouts. In 1908 Mr. Hupp and associates organized the Hupp Motor Car Company, producing a car at $750, which at that time was lower in price than the car which the Ford Company was turning out, as the Ford Company had advanced the price of their cars to $975. Under Mr. Hupp's management the Hupp Company sales jumped from 590 cars the first year to 5,000 cars the second year, and an original investment of less than $10,000 grew to a cool million dollars by 1912, when Mr. Hupp disposed of his interest and retired from the company, owing to the fact that he did not agree with the policy of his associates in bringing out a higher priced car.

This same year Mr. Hupp organized the R. C. H. Corporation, manufacturing and selling a touring car that was lower in price than any other car made except the Ford, and the very first year produced 8,000 cars, and had contracts with dealers for 19,000 additional cars, making a total sale of 27,000 for the first year.

Mr. Hupp has also had some experience in manufacturing higher priced cars, but his hobby has always been, and it has been his aim and ambition, to make and sell the lowest priced car in the world. For fifteen years he has concentrated upon this one dominant idea, and at last has perfected a car so cheap to buy and so economical to operate that it can be owned and used by practically every family head in this country.

This new design, approved by Mr. Hupp, is the result of fifteen years' effort to make a low priced car and a car that can be operated at a low cost and that will stand up and give a greater service for the money than any other automobile made. The car itself will be as well built, good to look at and easy to ride in as its higher priced competitors. It will have a pure streamline body, with all late improvements, and will not only appeal to the public at large, but will prove a consistent, satisfactory method of transportation suitable for the man or woman in any walk of life. While the car will particularly appeal to those of limited means because of its low price, yet its graceful lines, ample power and economical expense of operation will create for the car a demand among every class.

An itemized estimate of the cost of manufacturing and marketing these cars, based upon a production of 30,000 cars per annum, beginning in 1917, indicates a net profit of $69 per car, after making a liberal allowance for the cost of manufacturing, advertising, selling, overhead expense, etc. After allowing the 7% dividend on the entire issue of Preferred Stock, it indicates a net profit of $1,860,000, or sufficient to pay dividends of 20% per annum on the Common Stock, besides setting aside $460,000 to surplus. These figures are based on an estimate carefully compiled by men who know the automobile business and successful pioneers in the industry.

This new car should average 20 to 27 miles or more to a gallon of gasoline, and at the present high price of gasoline this in itself is a decided argument in favor of the use of this car.

The profits in the automobile industry are too well known to require comment. The day of experiment has passed. Today the industry, the third largest in the United States, is on a substantial and highly profitable basis. The greatest profit is being made in the manufacture of low priced cars. The demand for the car that we propose to build is apparent to every one. The cost of manufacture has been carefully worked out and, after proper allowance has been made for the increased price of raw material and for any exigencies that may arise, there should remain a net profit of $60 per car, based upon an annual production of only 30,000 cars. That this profit can be and should be increased by the increased production is self-evident. That the sale of the Preferred Stock at par will insure a sufficient capital to enable this company to go on a profit-earning basis seems an assured fact. That the Common Stock will soon become more valuable than the Preferred seems inevitable.

The Company proposes to adopt the most modern business methods, paying cash as it goes, and pursuing a conservative, business-like administration. The most progressive methods of manufacturing and selling will be adopted.

We own and offer for sale a very limited block of the Common Pre-Organization Promotion Stock at $5.00 per share. The par value is $10.00, and the stock is fully paid and non-assessable. If you act promptly you can buy any number of shares from five (5) to five thousand (5,000) at $5.00 per share. Simply fill out the coupon below for the number of shares you want and mail it with your remittance by check, draft or money order. If you send currency be sure and register the letter.

Certificates of Stock issued in your name will go forward to you by registered mail. We believe that you will see this stock selling at twice this price within the next few weeks. Immediate action is necessary if you desire to obtain any of the stock at this very low figure.

REPRESENTATIVE CITIZENS BACK RACING REVIVAL

CUBS AND REDS DIVIDE PAIR OF WEIRD GAMES

Tinkers Win in 12th, 6-5; Then Lose by Jumbled Boots and Hits, 7-6.

BROWN IS BEATEN.

BY I. E. SANBORN.

Twenty-one innings of frantic, frightful baseball at Weeghman park yesterday failed to untie the knot for fifth place, because the Cubs and Reds broke even. The Cubs won the first half by a score of 6 to 5 after twelve innings of sloppy baseball. The Reds were victors in the second half, which was worse, by a score of 7 to 6.

The only good thing about the elongated exhibition was that it was exciting all the way and probably delighted the 10,000 bargain hunters who graced the occasion. It was very bad baseball, with a few scintillating exceptions, and contained almost everything that ever happened on a green diamond.

Tangle of Statistics.

Summarizing the mess, there were twenty-four runs, forty-three base hits, nineteen errors, eleven pitchers, seventeen bases on balls, twenty-two players in one game and twenty-eight in the other, besides a liberal sprinkling of skull plays. The foregoing features were about equally distributed between the teams, as the Arabic statistics show.

In spite of their own misdeeds the players had the adamantine nerve to kick on a decision by Ump Klem without which the second game might have lasted until dark. The kick came off when Flack tried to steal home in the seventh of the second game and landed safely, but Klem called Cy Williams out on strikes, retiring the side and wiping out what would have been the tying run.

No Blame for Klem.

From the aeroplane elevation of the press coop the height of balls and strikes cannot be guessed, but even if that third strike was low, as claimed, one can hardly blame Klem for being affected by the atmosphere by which he was surrounded.

Mordecai Brown attempted to come back in the middle of the exhibition by starting the second game, but Tinker had compassion and removed the veteran after costly boots by Zeider and McCarthy had spilled six runs on the plate in three innings.

The bum doings began in the third round of the first game, when errors by McCarthy and Flack combined with three Red singles to give Cincinnati two runs off Jim Vaughn, who started on the slab. When Clarke opened on Jim with a loud double in the fourth, Tinker sent Prendergast to the rescue and Mique finished.

Stage Alternate Rallies.

With the help of an error and a pass the Cubs got to Schneider for three runs in the fourth. Doubles by Williams and Schulte and an infield hit by Mulligan did the job. But the Reds landed on Prendergast for three runs in their fifth after two were out. Groh doubled, Herzog walked and that set the stage for Chase, who whaled a home run into the bleachers. Not to be outdone, the Cubs came back in their fifth and tied it up by means of Schulte's second two bagger and a home run by Saier, which cleared the wall by a couple of parasangs.

With that out of their systems both teams settled and played some baseball the rest of the way. The Reds had numerous opportunities to score, but Prendergast was airtight in the pinches and once broke up a squeeze play that would have won the game.

Cubs Lambast Schneider.

The Cubs drove Schneider off the slab with three hits in the sixth without scoring a run. Dale went on and shut the Tinx out without a hit until the twelfth. Then Williams and Schulte opened up with singles, making third and second, respectively, on the throw in. McCarthy popped out, then Saier was passed intentionally to bring up Fischer, who stepped into the heroic rôle with a wallop over Chase's head, scoring the winning run.

The second game was fierce. In the second inning a pass, a boot by Mulligan, and a two bagger scored two runs off Brown. The Cubs responded with four off Mitchell in their half. A batsman hit, two passes, an error, and Mann's two bagger with the bases full did the trick. In the third, four hits, mixed up with a Zeider muff and a wild pitch gave the Reds four runs and ended Brown's efforts.

Three Hurlers Finish Game.

Lavender, Seaton, and Packard pitched out the game in that order and the Reds scored one more run on a pass, a double, and a squeeze play in the sixth, when Seaton was performing.

Mitchell's wildness gave the Cubs a run in the fifth and he was relieved by Knetzer, who lasted only until one was out in the sixth. Toney finished and the Cubs scored once off him with the help of two errors and a pass.

NOTICE TO AMATEURS

Amateur baseball players, drawn by lot, will appear in the fourth of a series of tryouts under the auspices of "The Tribune" at old National league park on the west side this morning. All players are requested to report promptly at 9:30 o'clock. Sixty-eight youngsters have been named to appear, and from this list four to eight will be selected by the judges to appear for the semi-final contests.

BASEBALL AVERAGES

Batting averages of American and National league baseball players will be found on page 9 of the drama section.

Notes

Pittsburgh today.

Errors were so frequent the crowd got after the players, paying particular attention to Mulligan, who had a tough day at short.

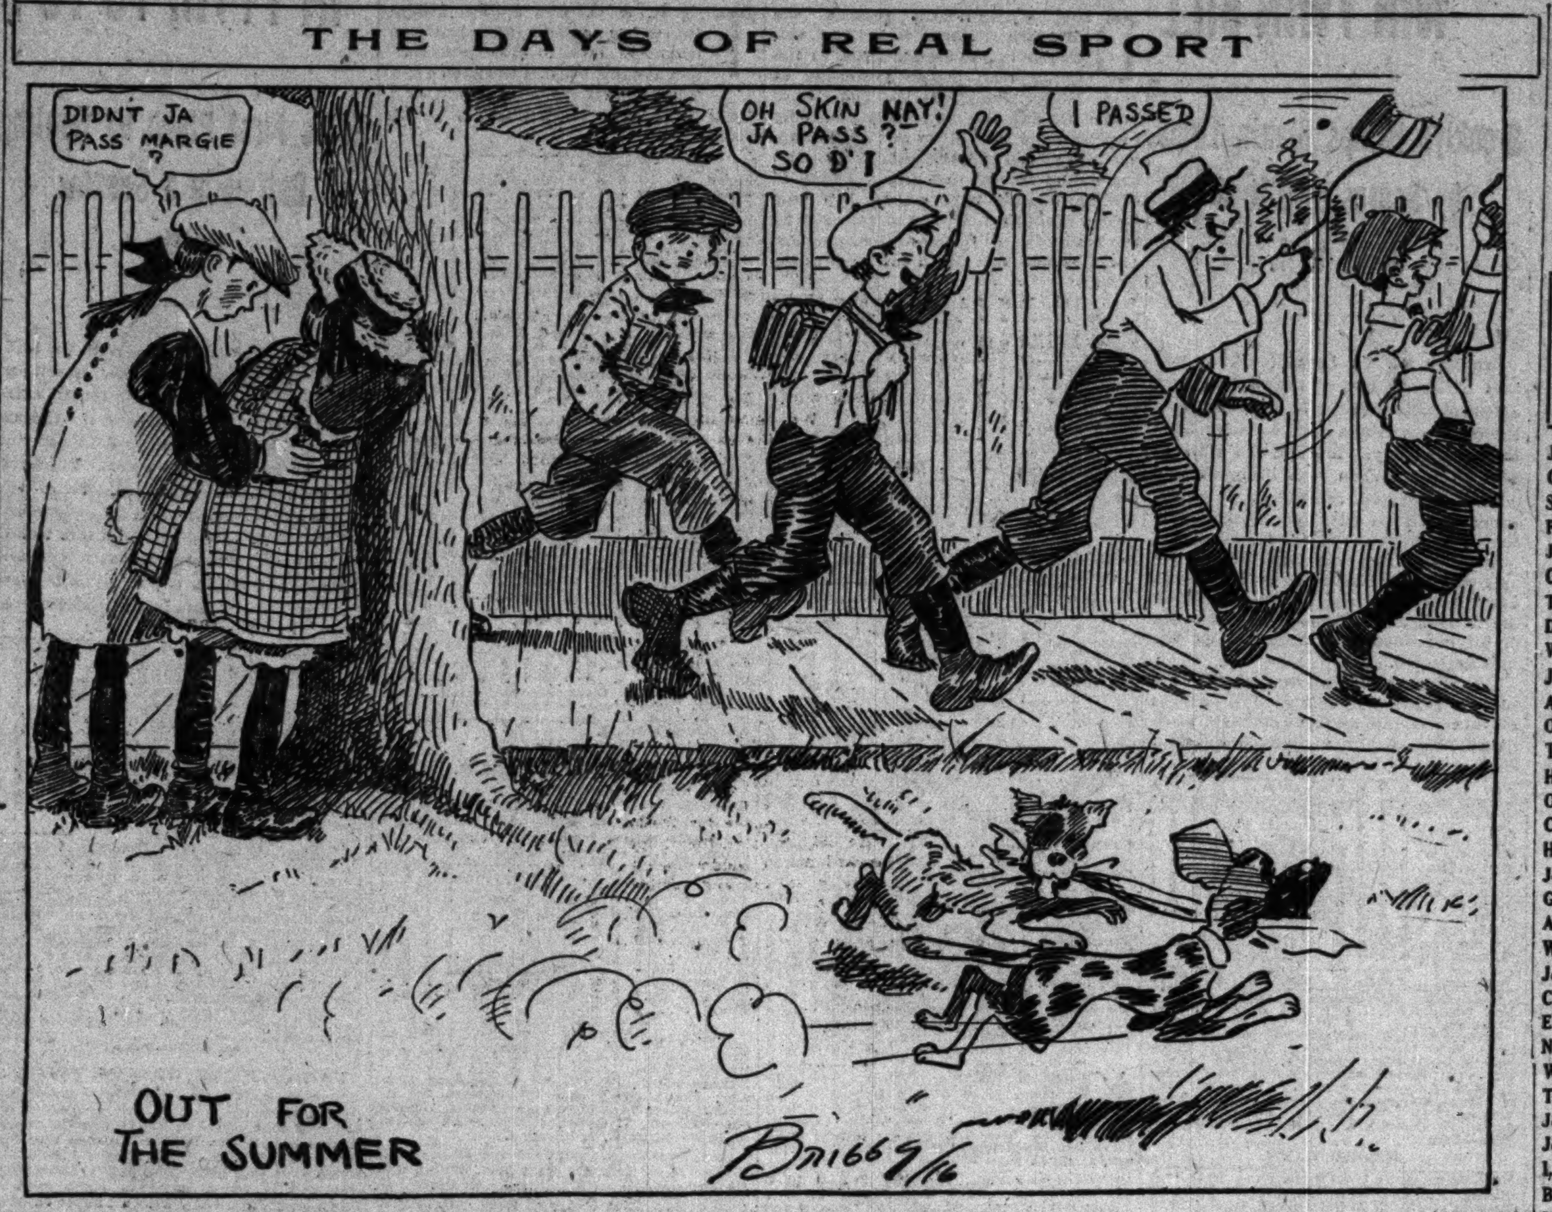
Some bugs threw cushions at Umpire Klem after he called Williams out on strikes in the seventh of the second game, but none of them came near the mark.

Jimmy Callahan will bring his Pirates here for a five game series, beginning today, and including a double header on Tuesday.

Groh and McCarthy collided in a close play at second in the third of the first game. For a minute it looked serious, but both athletes recovered and finished out the day's assignment.

Chase reappeared in center field for the Reds and celebrated by whaling out two singles, a home run, and a double in the first game, besides being robbed of a fifth hit by McCarthy, who made a one handed stab and forced a runner at second in the eighth inning. Chase did not get a hit in the second game and gave way to Killifer in the seventh.

THE DAYS OF REAL SPORT



DE PALMA WINS 150 MILE DERBY AT DES MOINES

Des Moines, Ia., June 24.—Twelve thousand people this afternoon saw Ralph De Palma win the annual Des Moines automobile derby at the local speedway. It was the second time he had carried off first money on the local track. At the races last year he distanced all competitors.

De Palma made the 150 miles in 1 hour 37 minutes and 14 seconds, at an average speed of 91.88 miles per hour. Henderson finished second, Rickenbacher, third, and Lewis, fourth.

De Palma and Rickenbacher Vie.

The race was a contest between Rickenbacher and De Palma throughout. At 75 miles the former passed De Palma, but was forced into third place in the last twenty miles by tire trouble, Henderson nosing him out of second place.

In the fifty mile free for all, Rickenbacher, De Palma, Cooper, O'Donnell, and Lewis finished in the order named. The winner's time was 31 minutes 47 seconds; average, 94.38 miles per hour.

Cars Collide; Drivers Escape.

The only accident which marred the race came in the fifty mile event, just before the fiftieth lap, when a rear wheel on D'Alene's car collapsed, throwing the machine across the track and causing it to collide with the car driven by Milton, who was closely following D'Alene.

Neither driver was seriously injured, although the cars were put out of commission.

KOCKLER-LODAL BIKE PAIR TAKES TWENTY MILE RACE.

Ernest Kockler and Olaf Lodal pedalled their way to victory in a twenty mile bicycle team race at Riverview last night. Their time was 47:00 1-5, the sprint system of the Berlin finish in the last five miles speeding up the field. Two teams tied for third.

Roland Cioni won the mile and two mile roller races held in connection with the bike program. Summaries:

Mile novice—Won by Arnold Meyer, German-American A. C.; Mike Damios, Italo-American A. C., second; Carl Selback, Sleipner A. C., third. Time, 2:19.

Three mile invitation—Won by Joe Arens, Logan Square Cycle club; Carl Stockholm, un., second; Fred Vinch, Belgian-American A. C., third. Time, 7:13.

Half mile handicap—Won by William Kell, German-American A. C.; Carl Minetti, German-American A. C., second; E. Davini, Italo-American A. C., third. Time, :58.

Two mile handicap—Won by E. Salem, Belgian-American A. C.; Nick Becker, German-American A. C., second; Phil Klaes, Belgian-American A. C., third. Time, 4:27 4-5.

Twenty mile team race—Won by E. Kockler and O. Lodal, Mystic A. C.; C. Minetti and Willie Kell, German-American A. C., second; Joe Arens and Peter Himschoot, Logan Square C. C., and E. Davini and Peter Guidotti, Italo-American A. C., tied for third. Time, 47:00 1-5. [Decided by Berlin finish.]

ROLLER RACES.

Mile professional—Won by Roland Croni; Art Eglington, second; Albert Krueger, third. Time, 2:15 4-5.

Two mile professional—Won by R. Croni, A. Eglington, second; C. Watts, third. Time, 5:10.

LANTIERI, SPORT PROMOTER, JOINS COLORS IN ITALY.

Carlo Lantieri, the Italian sporting promoter who has been connected with all three six day bike races here since the cycle revival three years ago, has joined the colors in Italy. As an only son Lantieri was exempt from service when his country entered the European war. Before coming to Chicago Carlo was sporting editor of an Italian publication in New York city, and previous to that he had charge of the Italian teams at the Olympic games in London and in Stockholm.

By RING W. LARDNER

THE DIARY OF A SIREN.

JUNE 19.

THE Cub nine are home again and Lennie with them and this evening we will be together for the first time in three weeks. I have determined to not to tell him anything about my friendship for Lou Tanner which is now a thing of the past. Lou was up to see me last night and it was then I told him that our acquaintance must come to an end owing to the return of Lennie and it would not be fair to keep company with one man when one's betrothed was in the same town.

Lou took my decision bravely and even forced a smile when I told him all was over between us, but the smile was so pitiful that it affected me more than tears would of done. At parting he said, "Don't you think you could give me one kiss as this is the last time." "Would it lighten your heart if I did?" I asked him. "Sure," was his reply, and he kissed me not once but several times, though I only returned the caress once or at the most, twice. "If anything happens to make you change your mind, you've got my phone number," he said, and with that he left me, still trying bravely to smile, though his heart was aching.

I called up Lennie as soon as I got down to the office today. He said at first that he had an engagement for tonight, but I told him I had something of importance to tell him and he said he would come for a little while. What I have to tell him is about a furnished flat which I know is going to be for rent in October, as the couple that leased it are going to move to New York City.

All is over between Lennie and I. When I saw him last night I knew that nothing was left in my heart for him but sincere friendship and pity. Of love, nothing remained. He came about eight o'clock and we exchanged kisses, but there was no warmth in the kiss I gave him.

"Have you missed me?" he asked.

"Yes," I replied, though my conscience told me that I had not missed him as a girl should miss her fiancee. "And did you have a good time on your trip in the east?"

We talked common places like that for a time, but I saw it could not continue. So I broached the subject of the furnished flat.

"It would be just the thing for us, Lennie," I said.

"What do you mean us?" he said. "I have not got money or time to think about furnished flats."

"No," I replied, "you have not time to think of anything but baseball. You have not had time to think of buying my engagement ring. You have done nothing for me since we became engaged that was any expense to you."

I was sorry as soon as I said those words and I would of apologized only for the way in which he took my remarks.

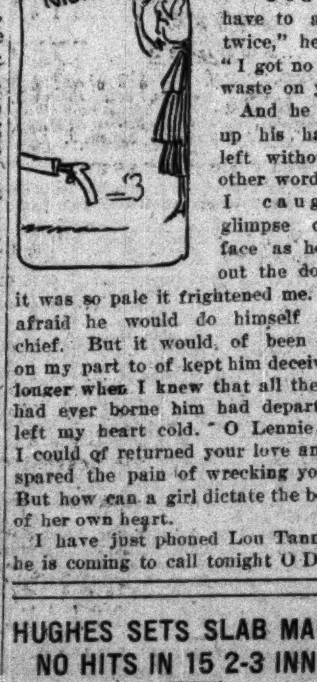
"The engagement between you and I was all one sided," he said. "When I get engaged to be married I want something to say about who I shall become engaged to."

"Lennie," I said, "you had better take back those words before it is too late"

"I'll take back nothing," he replied.

At which I lost control of myself.

"Mr. Gates," I said my voice trembling," I will have to ask you to leave this house."



"You won't have to ask me twice," he said. "I got no time to waste on you."

And he picked up his hat and left without another word. But I caught a glimpse of his face as he went out the door and it was so pale it frightened me. I was afraid he would do himself a mischief. But it would, of been crueler on my part to of kept him deceived any longer when I knew that all the love I had ever borne him had departed and left my heart cold. O Lennie I wish I could of returned your love and been spared the pain of wrecking your life. But how can a girl dictate the beatings of her own heart.

I have just phoned Lou Tanner and he is coming to call tonight O Diary.

"TRIB" AMATEUR IS CAPTAIN.

Letters were awarded yesterday to members of the Lane junior college ball team, which won the Chicago district collegiate championship. W. Seyferlich, chosen for the semi-finals in THE TRIBUNE's amateur baseball tournament, was elected captain for next year. Those receiving letters were Wyatt, Fischer, Brown, Seyferlich, Smith, Decker, Hollison, Erickson, Sumner, Rollman, and Boyle.

RECORD BROKEN AS FRIAR ROCK TAKES CLASSIC

New York, June 24.—By winning the Brooklyn handicap at a mile and a furlong in 1:50 today, August Belmont's Friar Rock, by Rock Sand-Fairy Gold, broke the Aqueduct race track record for the distance and proved himself the best 3 year old colt of the year. Having previously won the Belmont stakes and the classic Suburban, Friar Rock is the first horse of his age to have the credit of winning the three big handicaps.

When he won the Suburban four weeks ago the Belmont colt carried only 99 pounds, but today his impost was nine pounds. His jockey, Haynes, used excellent judgment in the handling of his mount from start to finish.

Whitney's Pennant Second.

Harry Payne Whitney's 5 year old horse Pennant, ridden by Notter, was second, Slumber II. was third, with Short Grass, an imported horse, fourth; Roamer, the favorite, fifth; Achievement, sixth; Churchill, seventh, and Sand Marsh, which made the early pace, last. Borrow and Old Koenig were scratched.

Less than a minute was wasted in getting the field off to a good start. Sand Marsh was in front for seven furlongs, with Pennant always well up under a nice, steadying pull until the top of the stretch was reached. There Sand Marsh had enough. The pace was sizzling, as the leader went to the half in :47, to the five-eighths pole in :59, and the three-quarters in 1:11.

Friar Rock was outrun in the early stage, but swung to the outside a quarter of a mile from the finish. Coming on with a great rush, he caught Pennant in the final furlong and won by a length and a half, going away. The time for the mile was 1:37 2-5 and the record of 1:50 flat is three-fifths of a second faster than the old track record, made by Tartar, which won this event last year.

Roamer Anchored by Weight.

Slumber II., which finished third, was never far from the pace and hung on with good courage in the final drive. Short Grass was badly outrun to the stretch, where he made his usual brilliant run, but a bit too late to get into the money. Roamer, the favorite, was under restraint all thorugh the back stretch. Summaries:

First race, 6 furlongs—Top of the Morning, 110 [Lykes], 13 to 10, 7 to 10, 1 to 3, won; Presumption, 114 [Mink], 10 to 1, 4 to 1, 8 to 5, second; Broomvale, 107 [Shilling], 15 to 1, 6 to 1, 3 to 1, third. Time, 1:14 2-5. Martasha, Charmeuse, Grisell, Buck Shot, Ting-A-Ling, True As Stars, Fair Weather, and Grasp also ran.

Second race, steeplechase, 2 miles—Dixon Park, 143 [H. Williams], 5 to 1, 2 to 1, even, won; Abdon, 140 [Cantwell], 6 to 1, 2 to 1, even, second; El Bart, 143 [J. Henderson], 9 to 5, 4 to 5, 2 to 5, third. Time, 4:26. Mo, Zellwood, Reprentant, Royal Archdale, Rusila, Serento, and Racebrook also ran.

Third race, 2 year olds, 5 furlongs—Tumbler, 122 [T. McTaggart], 1 to 4, out, won; Hollister, 107 [Shilling], 15 to 1, 4 to 1, even, second; Wood Trap, 112 [Haynes], 15 to 1, 4 to 1, even, third. Time, 1:00 3-5. Yellowstone, Basil, and Ticket also ran.

Fourth race, Brooklyn handicap, 3 year olds and up, 1⅛ miles—Friar Rock, 108 (Haynes), 5 to 1, 2 to 1, 4 to 5, won; Pennant, 123 (Notter), 7 to 1, 5 to 2, 7 to 5, second; Slumber II., 111 (T. McTaggart), 8 to 1, 3 to 1, 8 to 5, third. Time, 1:50. Roamer, Short Grass, Sand Marsh, Achievement, and Churchill also ran.

Fifth race, 1 mile—Kilkenny Boy, 116 [Loftus], 8 to 5, 4, 5, 2 to 5, won; Saratoga, 115 [Keissy], 15 to 1, 6 to 1, 3 to 1, second; Woodward, 107 [Taplin], 7 to 2, 6 to 5, 3 to 5, third. Time, 1:40. Virile, Springmass, Little Nearer, Bonnie Tess, Sasin, Brooke, Transit, and Sam McMeekin also ran.

Sixth race, 2 year olds, 5 furlongs—Passing Fancy, 110 [Garner], 7 to 2, 6 to 5, 1 to 2, won; Chatterbox, 102 [Ball], 6 to 5, 2 to 5, 1 to 6, second; Rebel, 105 [Washear], 20 to 1, 7 to 1, 3 to 1, third. Time, 1:01 2-5. Melting Moments, Ed Roche, None Such, Almee T., and Nancy Fair also ran.

HUGHES SETS SLAB MARK; NO HITS IN 15 2-3 INNINGS.

Philadelphia, Pa., June 24.—Tom Hughes of the Boston Nationals is said to have made a new record for consecutive hitless innings here today when he went into the Philadelphia game as a relief pitcher. About two weeks ago he pitched two-thirds of an inning against Cincinnati without yielding a hit. Later he pitched a no-hit game against Pittsburgh, and after that twirled 2 1-3 innings against New York as a relief pitcher without permitting a hit. Today he held the Phillies for 3 2-3 innings before a hit was made off him, giving him a record of 15 2-3 consecutive innings without allowing a hit. The previous record is said to have been held by Harry Hedgepeth of Petersburg, in the Virginia league, who pitched fourteen hitless innings in 1914.

WAR MAY DISRUPT LEAGUE.

Evansville, Ind., June 24.—[Special.]—The Kitty Baseball league is threatened with disruption because many of the players are members of the Kentucky and Tennessee National guard and have answered their country's call.

Standing of Guarantors Assures Payment of Hawthorne Purses.

TEST AT GATE TO COME.

BY HARVEY T. WOODRUFF.

Sponsors for the Illinois Jockey club, who have announced a thirteen day meeting to begin at the Hawthorne track July 15, with a "revival" of the American Derby, yesterday made good their promise of a list of representative Chicagoans as guarantors of a fund to revive horseracing in Illinois without betting.

The names of the sportsmen who have lent the prestige of their names, as well as their money, to the effort to bring back the former thrills of thoroughbred speed tests are so representative, embracing practically every avenue of the city's commercial life, that the coming meeting will become practically a quasi-civic affair.

Make Good on Promise.

In these columns several weeks ago an outline of the plan to be followed at Hawthorne was given from a confidential source. At that time the writer's informant asserted the class of men who thought Chicago entitled to a limited period of sport would prove a surprise when announced officially. It did. The names appear in an adjoining column.

Aside from the fact that the list, as announced by Secretary Eugene V. Beifeld, assures the financial stability of the meeting and is an insurance to horsemen that stake and purse money will be paid, the prominence of the men who voluntarily stand forth as sportsmen is a guarantee that the meeting will be conducted just as advertised—without open betting so far as lies within the power of officials to prevent it. That fact alone should quiet those who have sought to attack the contemplated racing—at least until they have seen whether any of the promises are violated.

Attendance Test to Come.

With all doubt removed as to the meeting and the payment of purses, the attendance test will come after the opening day. It may be assumed that an immense crowd will throng the Hawthorne stand and infield for the race of crack 3 year olds over the mile and one-quarter route. The event will draw, if only as a spectacle. Whether Mr. Public, who likes to back his opinion, will be content to lay only friendly wagers with his companions on succeeding days is where the question will be answered whether Chicago will support betless racing.

Chicago's racegoers answered that question negatively in 1904, when the great Washington Park track was forced to close its gates a few days after the running of the last American Derby, which was won by the eastern colt Highball. Perhaps human nature has changed. Perhaps the insistent wooer of chance will find an accommodating handbook maker within the loop before he journeys to the oval.

May Lead to Racing Bill.

Whatever the result, no fault can be found with the generous intentions of those seeking to bring back racing on a high plane. Those familiar with turf affairs always have thought racing could be conducted in Chicago for a limited period with the right kind of backing and the right kind of prestige behind it. It seems to have gained both. If the meeting is conducted properly, as it undoubtedly will be with the officials secured, it will be a powerful argument in favor of a bill for a state racing commission.

Horse racing in itself is one of the greatest sports. Those who have profited by it have been its worst enemies. The men who are standing guarantors for the present fund do not look for financial profit. If there is a surplus or they get anything back, well and good. If not, they simply have made a contribution to Chicago as a summer resort and as an attraction for visitors.

Two Other Stake Features.

During the inaugural meeting, July 15 to 29, there will be three stakes, for which entries close July 1, with a promise of about 400 horses. Six races a day is the schedule. The American Derby will be revived with a purse of $10,000.

On a date to be set later there will be the Chicago Merchants' handicap for 3 year olds and upwards at 6 furlongs, with an added purse of $1,200. The club also has carded the Illinois Jockey club gold cup handicap of a mile and a sixteenth for 3 year olds and upwards, with $2,000 added.

Capt. Thomas J. Clay of Lexington, Ky., has been named presiding judge and James F. Milton starter. Before Martin Nathanson, racing secretary, departed for Cincinnati last night to secure additional entries, he declared that during his stay in Montreal he had received promises of seventy-five horses to be shipped to Chicago. Most of these will come after the Fort Erie meeting. There is every promise of a large number of horses from the Kentucky tracks which close July 11.

PRISCILLA TAKES SECOND LEG OF YACHT CLUB RACE

St. Joseph, Mich., June 24.—[Special.]—Priscilla, Commodore and Admiral Harry M. Higinbotham's yawl, upset the dope today and won the second leg of the Chicago Yacht club's tristate race in spite of the fact that it was severely handicapped under the universal rules. Its time was 5:16:30 for the thirty-odd miles from Michigan City to this port. This was more than fifteen minutes better than the time of Intrepid, the Snite-Barcal cruiser, which is the favorite in the race.

Intrepid is still two points ahead of Priscilla and the Higinbotham boat will win the big race today only if three other craft can beat Intrepid.

Intrepid Expected to Win.

There is not much chance of two boats besides Priscilla beating Intrepid into Chicago on the last leg of the race, which will be held tomorrow.

Priscilla traveled a good deal faster than in any of its preceding contests. Commodore Higinbotham must be getting wise to the handling of the craft, for the big yawl sailed much better today than a week ago, when the going was similar.

Weather Favorable for Speed.

Dorello was third and Capsicum fourth. Ogden T. McClurg's XXIX missed the master hand of the Lincoln Park commodore, with the result that it finished sixth, several minutes behind Arcadia. Truant finished last.

The weather was fine for fair weather sailors. The wind was out of the south and the sea was smooth. Every craft carried all its canvas on the port tack and even the small craft could serve real meals to the more or less hard working crews. Summaries:

Start, 8:30 a. m.

Priscilla	1:46:30	5:16:30	11
Intrepid	2:37:50	5:22:13	13

CHICAGO MOTORBOAT CLUB HOLDS RACE TO WAUKEGAN.

Waukegan, Ill., June 24.—[Special.]—The Chicago Motorboat club held its annual run to Waukegan today. Facing a stiff wind from the northwest and a choppy sea, Blanch C. covered the 32.25 mile course in what was considered very fair time, finishing only 8 seconds ahead of Bark.

At the harbor several hundred Waukeganites greeted the crews as they landed and later joined in a reception in the pavilion overlooking the harbor.

The first five boats in received trophies donated by the Commercial club. The government boat Tuscarora acted as patrol. The motorboats will race back to Chicago tomorrow.

AMATEUR CHAMPS BEATEN.

Toledo, O., June 24.—Pitcher Allan Collamore, discarded by Cleveland and later this season by Toledo of the American association, defeated the White Autos of Cleveland, world's amateur champions, in the game with the Rail Lights, a semi-professional team, 8 to 3.

SOX TRIUMPH ON SOU'PAW STUFF; NIP BROWNS, 5-4

Rose Rout Plank and Koob in Deciding Clash of Series; Cicotte Saves Game.

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

St. Louis, Mo., June 24.—[Special.]—Fielder Jones and all the other members of the St. Louis Browns were foiled in their conspiracy to southpaw the White Sox to death because Comiskey's men arose in wrath today and raked in the final game of the series, thus making three victories out of five games. The score was 5 to 4.

It was a hard and close fight over most of the route, as the Browns persisted in hammering the ball at a terrific pace. They made ten hits, five of which were doubles and one a triple, and if they had made the best use of their blows the Sox would be trailing home from here quite dejected. But then nobody exects the Browns to be smart.

Sox Rout Eddie Plank.

Old Eddie Plank attempted to hurl the Chicagoans to defeat again, but as in the first game the Sox lammed him so hard he had to retire a much beaten man. He lasted until the fifth, when the Sox battered him without mercy, and he was yanked.

Young Koob, who licked us the other day, was trotted out. The Sox did just enough damage to the second southpaw to complete the victory. Koob retired in favor of a pinch hitter in the seventh, and Dave Davenport, a right hander, went to the slab. From then on the Sox were tame.

It was young Claude Williams who opposed Plank, Koob, et al., but this time Claude didn't last. He might have pulled through all right, but he got into a distressing place in the eighth, and Eddie Cicotte was summoned. Eddie saved the game, but had to toil, and he was backed with sterling support to do it, for the Browns seemed to land as squarely on his knuckle balls as they had on Williams' curves.

Jones Calls Out an Army.

In desperation Fielder Jones called out all his militia in the closing rounds of the game, trying to start a rampage. If he had gone much farther he would have had to ask for volunteers from the grandstand. There seemed to be plenty of them in the stand, too; at least there were a lot of fellows telling the St. Louis players in plain language how the game ought to be played.

It looked as if the fans were right, too, especially on one occasion when the Sox got a run they didn't deserve at all. Eddie Collins was on second base with two out when John Collins popped one into the air. The ball was coming down close to the slab and Catcher Severeid, First Baseman Borton, and Second Baseman Pratt all went after it. The pitcher modestly backed out of the argument. The only trouble was that after each one had hollered that he had the ball each stepped back and passed up the chance to the other guy.

Fluke Lets Collins Score.

The ball fell to the ground and then they all stood looking at each other. No one was covering the home plate and Eddie Collins jogged in almost the entire distance from third. The fellows in the grandstand roared and it wouldn't have surprised us to see one of them leap out and run and cover the plate. The Browns did some other things quite characteristic of St. Louis baseball, but that blunder stood out above all others.

The Sox tallied once in the fourth on hits by E. Collins and Fournier, with Jackson's sacrifice between the blows. In the last half the Browns got two on Borton's single, Terry's error, and Pratt's double. If Terry hadn't made the error they wouldn't have scored.

Five Hits Net Three Runs.

In the fifth the Sox got five hits, one being the freak pop fly and one a roller by Fournier which hit J. Collins as the latter was going to second. That mess netted three runs. The other was made in the sixth on Schalk's single, Terry being hit by a pitched ball, a double steal, and Felsch's sacrifice fly. A base on balls, Pratt's double, and Marsan's single gave St. Louis its other pair in the eighth.

Married Men, 9; Single Men, 5.

The Enterprise Optical Manufacturing company married men team defeated the single men at Grant park yesterday, 9 to 5.

St. Louis, Mo., June 24.—[Special.]—Home tomorrow for a battle with Cleveland.

Derrill Pratt was a whale of a sticker all through the game. A triple and two doubles in four times up was his record.

If Cleveland should send a right handed pitcher to the slab tomorrow the Sox may get licked. They have forgotten how to hit right handers.

It is not unlikely that Jim Scott will hurl against the Indians, though Red Faber, who has been at home, may have recovered from his illness and be fit.

George Sisler, the hero of St. Louis, got into the fray again with his wounded heel, hitting for Lavan in the eighth and playing right field for the balance of the game. He hit into a double play, but gave the ball a solid crack.

Rowland's men turned two sparkling plays which prevented the Browns getting a run in the second. With one out Pratt tripled and the Chicago infielders had to come in. Marsans hit a low short fly to left, too short for Jackson to get, but Terry raced back and made a wonderful catch. Pratt was half way home, thinking the catch impossible, and had to beat it back to third. Lavan followed that with a smart grounder towards right field which seemed a sure hit, but Eddie Collins dashed to his left and stabbed the ball with one hand.

RECORD CROWD SEES DODGERS WIN TWIN BILL

Brooklyn Bumps Giants Twice by Scores of 6 to 4 and 5 to 4.

Brooklyn, N. Y., June 24.—What was said to be the largest crowd that ever attended a ball game in Brooklyn saw the Superbas take a double header from the Giants today, 6 to 4 and 5 to 4. Every seat in the stands was occupied and several thousand spectators were accommodated on portable bleachers in the outfield.

Anderson in the first game was hit for two singles and a triple in the fourth and knocked off the slab in the fifth. Mathewson and Schupp were not much of an improvement. Coombs kept the hits scattered.

The Superbas led all the way in the second game. Rucker's slow curves fooled the Giants until the seventh, when Smith relieved him and saved the day. Scores:

CLEVELAND WINS FIGHT FOR LEAD IN 11TH, 10 TO 8

Holds First Place by Beating Detroit in a Seesaw Battle.

Detroit, Mich., June 24.—With the leadership of the league at stake, Detroit and Cleveland engaged in their fourth extra inning duel of the season and the Indians won in the eleventh, 10 to 8. Each club won two games of the series. The game was ragged, but exciting. Twice the Tigers tied the score and once Cleveland did the same thing. The visitors won in the eleventh when Speaker walked and scored on Gandil's triple. Wambsganss followed with a single and Gandil went home. Score:

YANKS BEAT GRIFFS TWICE.

New York, June 24.—New York climbed into second place by again defeating Washington twice, 2 to 1 and 4 to 3. It was the fourth double header won by the Yankees this season. In the first game Caldwell held the Senators to four hits. Washington had a three run lead in the second, but home runs by Baker and Pipp, each with a runner on base, proved their undoing. Scores:

RED SOX WIN TWO.

Boston, Mass., June 24.—Boston's Red Sox took a double header from Philadelphia, 3 to 2 and 7 to 3. Hooper stole home in the first inning of the opener. His single was the only hit off Nabors up to the ninth, when singles by Hooper and Janvrin, errors by Nabors and Murphy, a wild pitch and a fly to Schang let in the needed two runs. Boston amassed four runs in the fourth inning of the second on errors, three singles, a base on balls, and a wild pitch. Score:

HERZL SCHOOL WINS "TRIBUNE" MEET FOR BOYS

Scores 45 Points in Games at Grant Park—Koca Individual Star.

TABLE OF POINTS

Theadore Herzl	45	Daniel R. Cameron	5
William C. Goudy	27	Julia Ward Howe	5
Graeme Stewart	24	Jacob Riis	4
Eugene Field	8	John C. Dore	2
Samuel Morse	7	John McLaren	1
Hans Andersen	7

BY WALTER H. ECKERSALL.

Scoring points in six of the seven events, athletes representing Theadore Herzl school yesterday won the first annual track and field meet for boys in sixth, seventh, and eighth grades in Grant park with 45 points. The meet was held under the auspices of the Amateur Athletic federation. William C. Goudy was second with 27 points and Graeme Stewart third with 24.

In order to help make the meet a success and encourage the boys to greater efforts, THE TRIBUNE donated the prizes for the future greats. Gold buttons were given the winners, silver buttons to those who scored second honors, and bronze emblems to the third position winners. In addition, those who finished fourth, fifth, and sixth were given ribbons. The prizes made a big hit with the kids, and some of the proud parents who were on hand praised THE TRIBUNE for its effort to encourage a worthy cause.

Koca Is Individual Star.

To Leonard Koca of the winning team went the honor of scoring the greatest number of points. This sterling young athlete contributed sixteen points to his team's total. He won first place in the fifty and 100 yard dashes and was third in the running broad jump. He footed the fifty yard dash in :06 1-5, good time for a youngster, and stepped the century in :12.

All the events were featured by keen and close competition. The best race of the day was in the half mile, which nearly resulted in a dead heat. After Nick Petros of the Dore school had set the pace for the first lap, he began to tire, and Paul Ferbend of Howe took up the pace. Ferbend ran strong and soon had a ten yard advantage.

When the field rounded the last turn to come into the stretch Fred Schroeder of Goudy started a sprint which gradually cut down Ferbend's lead. Twenty yards from the finish they raced stride for stride, each putting all the energy in his makeup to breast the tape first. Both were tired and as they neared the tape both began to wobble. In a last effort Schroeder threw himself at the tape and won the judges' verdict by the narrowest kind of a margin. The time was 2:27.

Brinkman Pulls Tendon.

Walter Brinkman of the Samuel Morse school was easily the class in the three standing jumps. He won the event with a mark of 26 feet 10 inches, over two feet further than his nearest competitor. His efforts in this event had its results in the 50 yard dash, when he pulled a tendon and was compelled to withdraw from further competition. The injury is not serious, but Brinkman will be unable to run for a few weeks.

Koca was easily the fastest sprinter of the large field. He won both dashes easily and looks like a promising athlete. Harold Stine of Goudy took the running broad jump with a leap of 16 feet 4 inches, and the Herzl school first team captured the 1,100 yard relay by thirty yards from Stewart, which was an equal distance in advance of the Herzl second team. Only three teams entered. Each runner had to travel a furlong.

Of the nineteen schools entered, eleven broke into the point colmun. Over 200 athletes took part. The first six places in each event, with the exception of the relay, counted for points. In the relay five points were given the winning quintet, three for second, and one for third. An ideal day drew fully 2,500 spectators. Summaries:

NOTES FOR SOCCER PLAYERS.

The committee in charge of the soccer team which will play the Canadian team at Comiskey park on July 22 for the benefit of the Canadian Red Cross fund, has selected the following players: Holmes, goal; Blockley and Brumley, backs; J. H. Cartwright, Jones, and Taylor, half backs; Faleti, Mackie, Gowans, Cartwright, and Vidano, forwards.

The McDuff club has arranged two games for the benefit of W. Brown, who has broken a collarbone this season. At 2:15 the International Harvesters will play the All-Scotlands. In the second game the Maroons will play the Blues, the teams being picked from the star players of the local clubs.

LANDERS SHATTERS HOP, STEP, JUMP MARK AT FIELD DAY MEET

BY JACK PROCTOR.

Many prominent athletes took part in the annual field day for the benefit of the House of the Good Shepherd yesterday at Comiskey park, where a crowd of 4,000 persons saw a program of track, wrestling, and baseball. Officials in charge of the meet stated that it was one of the most successful field days ever given for the north side institution.

Sherman Landers, the Oregon High school boy who made the great showing in Stagg's interscholastic meet two weeks ago, broke the prep hop, step and jump record by two feet five inches with a jump of forty-four feet five inches.

Five other track events were staged by the C. A. A. athletes. The medley team, composed of Jo Loomis, Herman Owening, Dan Brown and Earl Eby, won the race when the latter ran away from his opponents in the last lap. Eby also showed a great stride in the 600 yard race, which he won handily from Brown and Irons in 1:25.

Century Dash to Ward.

The 100 yard dash went to Andrew Ward in :10 1-5, with Jo Loomis, the national champion, and Sherman Landers at his heels. George Moore, champion sack racer, ran from scratch and won the event of sixty yards in :08.

The Palmer Park and Calumet Parks of the Municipal Soccer Football league staged a contest, which was won by the former, 1 to 0, after a hard fight.

Paul Martinson won two straight falls from Herman Koch in the feature wrestling match, taking the first fall in 4:22 with a half-nelson and crotch hold and the second in 3:49 with the same hold. Humid Kella Pasha and Jack Dribbs staged a comedy match. Ed Walsh of the Sox and William J. (Doc) Cronin acted as referees.

The golf driving contest ended in a tie, Leroy Hackett and J. P. Harding taking the honors in this event, while Miss Elizabeth Jaglowski won the baseball throwing contest with 163 feet 6 inches.

Giants Beat Premiers.

Artie Hofman's Premier team was defeated by the American Giants in the baseball game, 6 to 2. Bob Wicker, the former Cub slabman, was on the rubber for Hofman's club, and was given ragged support. Score:

AD MEN TO STAGE BENEFIT AT SOX PARK ON JULY 15.

Chicago advertising men will stage their thirteenth annual ball game for the benefit of the Off the Street club at Comiskey park on Saturday, July 15. The team representing the Advertising association of Chicago will tackle the St. Louis Advertising club's nine. Three games have already been staged between these rivals—each won one, and the third resulted in a tie. Music will be furnished by the brass band of forty pieces from the Off the Street club, and the Chicago Ad choir will sing. Two hundred children from the Off the Street club will compete in various games and stunts.

Reopen Meet Entries.

Owing to the junior championship being held on the same day at Joliet and the absence of the soldier athletes, the A. A. U. handicap events of the Scottish Societies at Riverview park July 4 failed to fill and have been reopened to close tomorrow with Magnus Flaws, Pontiac building.

INQUISITIVE FANS

Pekin, Ill.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—What is the proper manner in which to score the following play: With a runner on second and none out the batter bunts the ball down the third base line. The pitcher makes a clean pickup and throws to third, but the runner arrives from second ahead of the ball and the batter reaches first safely. E. BECKER.

If, in the opinion of the scorer, the batsman could have been retired at first it is a fielder's choice and a sacrifice hit. If it would have been impossible to throw out the batsman it is a hit.

Chicago.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Please state the basis for the classification of professional baseball leagues. My impression is that the population of the cities comprising the circuits is the basis. If so, the American association, International league, Southern association, and Pacific Coast league should take the same classification. Is this true? A. D. FOYER.

Partly true. Aggregate population of the cites included in a circuit is supposed to regulate classification. But the American association, International league, and Pacific Coast league are given class AA rating, although the Pacifice Coast league is not entitled to it. The Southern association is in class A, one grade lower than the other three mentioned.

Jack Morris, Chicago.—Do not know, as there is no rule, and it is up to the secretary of the National league to decide according to his opinion of the case.

Raymond Bryan, Chicago.—Weaver was drafted from the York [Pa.] club and farmed out to the San Francisco club, from which he was recalled to the White Sox in the spring of 1912.

J. M., Chicago.—Depends altogether on which side the throw comes from, the pitcher or catcher.

Marshalltown, Ia.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Base runner steals second and is tagged hard by fielder. Runner leaves base to attack fielder, who puts ball on him and runner is declared out by umpire. Is the umpire right or wrong? CENTRAL ASSOCIATION.

Right.

West Bend, Wis.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—[1] Batter hits a ball that hits in front of home base and bounces back and hits batter while still in the batter's box. Is this a fair ball and what rule covers this play? [2] A batter hits a ball that is too fast for any infielder to handle, but shortstop knocks it down but does not recover in time to get runner at first. Is it a hit or an error? [3] Batter hits ball to third baseman, who throws high to first. The first baseman jumps a little too soon and does not catch the ball. Who is charged with an error? B. A. G.

1. No. It is a foul because it first touched a player on foul ground. See rule 45. 2. A hit. 3. The third baseman.

A. I. F., Kewanee, Ill—Ground rules always must be interpreted by the umpire, unless agreed on so as to cover all cases in advance. "One base on an overthrow" may mean several things and is no kind of a ground rule.

F. J. Taylor, Chicago.—Opinions differ and this department deals only with matters of fact.

HANKLE OF WILSON "Y" TAKES FIVE MILE RACE.

Finishing with a burst of speed in the last half mile, George W. Hankle of the Wilson Avenue Y. M. C. A. yesterday won the five mile run promoted by the Booster club. The event was held over the boulevards around Eckart park. The winner covered the distance in 28:10. W. Dubacz of Pulaski park was second and O. Wegener of Armour square, third. Other medal winners and the order in which they finished were: W. Clausen, Ogden park; J. Lesniewicz, Polish American A. C.; E. Hawley, Palmer A. C.; W. Forrdresler, Armour square; P. Brown, unattached; J. Heilingoetter, Eckart park; C. Landler, Universal A. C., and R. Oswald, Universal A. C.

SCOTS MEET DRAWS STARS.

The best athletes in Chicago and nearby towns will take part in the track and field events to be held in connection with the Scots picnic at Kolze's Electric park on July 4. In addition to the eight standard events there will be races for men, women, and children, tug of war, soccer football, and other matches. Entries close tomorrow with Robert Black, 2719 Jackson boulevard.

ROOSEVELT CAN'T SEE FIGHT

New York, June 24.—Frank Moran invited Col. Roosevelt to be his guest nex Thursday night when he fights Jack Dillon. Because of other engagements the colonel has been forced to send his regrets. When Col. Roosevelt was president Moran was quartermaster of the Mayflower, the executive yacht.

FOR PLAYERS OF WHIST

by A. R. Metcalfe

OVER bidding is not necessarily the same as high bidding. A bid of six or even seven is more conservative, in some cases, than many bids of two or three. The deal which follows was played by four prominent members of the Evanston club:

The hands:

S—A, Q, 10, 9, 8, 4, 2.
H—5.
C—A, J, 10, 7, 3.
D—J.

W	N / S	E
S—J. H—A, Q, 9, 8, 4. C—None. D—K, Q, 8, 6, 4.		S—None. H—10, 7, 6, 3. C—Q, 9, 6, 4. D—A, 10, 9, 7, 5.

S—K, 7, 6, 5, 3.
H—K, J.
C—K, 8, 5, 2.
D—3, 2.

West dealt and bid two hearts, and the final bid was seven hearts doubled, N. and S. having gone to six spades. North had the opening lead. The opening lead was the ace of clubs which West of course, trumped. West then led the jack of spades and trumped in dummy, finessed the trump and the rest was easy

ANSWERS TO QUERIES.

One of the deals observed during the last week:

On the rubber game, with no score, dealer bid one no-trump and the others passed. The five of hearts was led and dummy put down the following cards: Spades, K-7-2; hearts, J-9-8; clubs, Q-6; diamonds, K-Q-J-8-6. Pone held: Spades, 10-4-3; hearts, K-Q-3-2; clubs, J-5-2; diamonds, A-9-3.

The eight of hearts was played from dummy, pone played the trey, and declarer won with the singleton ace. The declarer made two odd tricks on the deal, but would have scored five odd and rubber had pone played the queen of hearts at trick one. The play made a final difference of over 600 points. At trick one pone noted that the declarer must hold either the ace and four of hearts or the ace alone, and in neither case could he lose by refusing to cover the eight of hearts played from dummy.

Lake Forest, Ill.—[To the Editor.]—Dealer held the following cards: Diamonds, A-10-7-5-2; hearts, Q-10-6-4-3; spades, 8-3-2. Dealer bid one diamond; the opponents made no bid in that deal. Partner bid one no-trump; dealer bid two hearts; partner bid two no-trump. What should dealer now do? M. C.

Ans.—Think dealer should quit; he has advertised ten or more red cards with very little help for a no-trump declaration, and if partner still wanted to play no-trump, would consider that the latter held an exceptionally strong hand.

SUMMER SPORTS SET NEW RECORD AT U. OF CHICAGO

Registration for Athletes the Largest in History—Come from All Sections.

BY MAROON.

"Chicago, the summer resort."

Pat Page would add a couple of words to that catch phrase and make it "University of Chicago, the summer resort." Registration for summer athletic work at the University of Chicago, which has been growing each year, has reached a new record this term.

High school teachers, university "profs," ex-stars of the athletic field, tired business men and present day athletes—men of all ages, shapes and varieties, garnered from every corner of the country—are out on Stagg field morning and afternoon, spending their vacations in oiling up rusty heart action and hardening muscles. Especially from the south are there many "students" who come to the Midway campus to register for one "pipe" course of study and about four courses in physical culture.

Amusing Class in Football.

One of the most amusing classes is that in football coaching. The course includes both theory and practice. The old timers eat up the theory all right, but when it comes to falling on the ball and scrimmage, they do not fare so well. Page is merciless, and no day goes by but what five or ten bald headed rather stout gentlemen get off in a corner and hold an indignation meeting. One of the unexpected registrants for the football course is Hugo Bezdek, who played full back for the Maroons several years ago.

Besides football, there is track and baseball work and the indoor gymnastics and swimming. Worthington and Spears, eastern track stars, are among an aggregation of about thirty crack men who are working out for the junior and senior championships. Binga Dismond, Roy Campbell, Percy Graham, and Clarence Fisher are getting in trim to hold up the Maroon banner in the eastern meets.

Old Men Back for Baseball.

The summer baseball squad, with many of the old men back and quite a few new ones, will play a series of games. On the squad are Chang, Marum, Cahn, Rudolph, Curtis, Smith, Catron, Griffin, Maxwell, Swanson, and Larkin.

INTERURBAN SHOOT TODAY.

Crack shots from Indiana, Iowa, Wisconsin, and Illinois will take part in the monthly shoot of the Interurban League of Gun clubs at the Chicago Gun club traps today. Scores of the five highest shooters for each club will count as a team total. Each contestant will fire at 100 birds from sixteen yards. There also will be practice events in the morning, the first starting at 10:30 o'clock.

MISS LOUISE FERGUS TAKES W. W. G. A. MEET

Scores Greatest Triumph of Career by Beating Miss Painter, 2 Up.

BATTLE ALL THE WAY.

BY J. G. DAVIS.

Miss Louise Fergus of the Glen View club accomplished one of the best performances of her career by winning the W. W. G. A. tournament of the South Shore Country club, the first big event of the local season.

Playing the same brand of consistent golf that marked her work in the earlier rounds, she defeated Miss Caroline Painter of Midlothian, 2 up, in the deciding contest yesterday morning. The match was close all the way; Miss Fergus was 1 up at the fifth hole and had a similar lead at the turn. Bunker troubles due to a bad brassie shot caused the north side player to lose the tenth hole, Miss Painter winning, 5—6.

Missed Putt Ends Match.

Three putts cost Miss Painter the next two holes, but on the thirteenth green she laid her opponent a stymie which Miss Fergus failed to negotiate. Each took one of the next two holes, and as the sixteenth and seventeenth were halved, Miss Fergus was dormie 1. She was just off the green on her tee shot for the home hole and won, 3—4, Miss Painter missing a ten foot putt for a life saving half. The cards:

Miss Fergus—Out...5 4 6 3 6 6 4 5 4—43
Miss Painter—Out...6 3 5 4 7 6 5 5 3—44
Miss Fergus—In.....6 3 6 5 5 6 3 4 3—41—84
Miss Painter—In.....5 4 7 4 6 5 3 4 4—42—86

Summary of play in the other flights:

Second flight—Mrs. F. E. Wilhelm, Onwentsia, defeated Miss R. Gellfuss, Cincinnati, 7 and 6.

Third flight—Mrs. Warren McArthur, Flossmore, defeated Miss E. Harless, South Shore, 3 and 1.

Fourth flight—Mrs. Howard Linn, Chicago, defeated Miss R. Hogan, Edgewater, 6 and 5.

Westward Ho.

E. L. Hartig won the handicap against bogey at Westward Ho with a card of 89—18—71, finishing 6 up. Qualifying scores for the Tom Morris trophy were as follows: E. L. Hartig, 89—18—71; R. G. Hoskins, 92—21—71; O. Reid, 97—25—72; J. Hughes, 92—18—74; C. D. Richards, 99—24—75; A. A. Basse, 96—20—76; C. Martin, 101—25—76; E. F. Kennedy, 100—22—78; D. J. O'Connor, 99—21—78; H. A. Gingery, 104—24—80; J. E. Roberts, 105—24—81; T. T. Cavanaugh, 108—27—81; F. T. Sullivan, 99—18—81; W. F. Hayes, 107—25—82; H. D. Foster, 97—15—82; T. McQueen, 95—13—82.

Ridgemoor.

Rolle Rolfe, a 15 year old player, shot a round of 79 at the Ridgemoor course yesterday. In the semi-finals for the Hagen trophy J. M. Quinlan defeated R. Piper, 4 and 2. Qualifying scores for the Franklin trophy were as follows: A. C. Fordham, 108—30—78; L. E. Rein, 97—24—73; M. J. Fletcher, 97—22—75; F. Mayo, 93—18—75; W. G. Wise, 99—23—76; H. G. Zander, 109—33—76; J. W. Robb, 98—22—76; S. Ropp, 95—18—77; H. E. Strassheim, 91—14—77; J. B. Day, 104—27—77; A. Semrad, 102—26—77; C. W. Hageman, 94—16—78; F. J. L. Kolb, 104—26—78; R. B. Stevenson, 100—22—78; J. A. Simpson, 94—14—80; F. E. Smith, 106—26—80; A. W. Johnston, 104—24—80.

Windsor.

L. L. Cossitt had low net score of 77 in the qualifying round for the J. F. Ruffner trophy at Windsor. His well played round of 83 was the best gross mark. Qualifying scores were: L. L. Cossitt, 83—6—77; R. C. Wilson, 86—6—80; C. H. Keller, 93—13—80; J. L. O'Neil, 102—20—82; C. H. Luse, 95—13—82; W. S. Lancton, 85—3—82; J. S. Downer, 88—6—82; L. L. Smith, 92—10—82; J. Fryer, 99—16—83; K. N. Tinkle, 97—14—83; J. L. Dunkley, 91—8—83; S. S. Jackson, 86—2—84; J. L. Sheehy, 96—12—84; H. Diefenderfer, 96—6—90; J. Rich, 102—17—85; W. G. Warren, 91—6—85.

Oak Park.

Carl Howe had low net in the handicap at Oak Park with 94—18—76. Paul Blatchford was second with 100—20—80. A number of teams competed in the four ball event, which was won by a quartet of the old guard with a total of 347. The players were: T. H. Jones, 99—9—90; C. L. Peniston, 91—6—85; F. M. Swirles, 93—6—87; G. T. Hodges, 93—8—85.

Evanston.

In the final match in the monthly class handicap at Evanston C. E. Fargo defeated George Packard, 3 and 2, in class A. J. Orchard won in class B from O. M. Cooley, 1 up. In class C, D. Jamieson defeated E. W. Hunt, 4 and 3. Frank Carpenter won the special prize for the best gross score at holes two, four, six, fifteen, and seventeen. His total was 16.

Skokie.

Skokie players competed in a four ball handicap, which was won by W. V. Sclinur, W. E. Burch, M. C. Shope and F. W. Preston, who registered 79—10—69. In the play for second place two other foursomes tied with identical cards of 81—9—72.

Edgewater.

The main event at Edgewater was a four ball handicap. C. H. Collins and C. M. Rogers won first place with a total of 183—31—152. S. J. Thurber and P. J. Graydon, who had 199—36—162, tied with H. H. Dietrich and E. A. Kirkland, who had 191—29—162.

In the semi-final round of the flight tournament, C. T. Hays defeated R. A. Griefen, 2 and 1, in the second flight, and F. L. Tousey disposed of E. W. Hughes, 1 up, in twenty holes.

Maywood.

E. W. Delling won the handicap against par at Maywood with a gross of 101 and an allowance of 22, which left him 2 down. W. C. Gibson and F. E. White tied for second with 3 down. B. F. Davis won low gross with 81. The finals for the Golf Shop cup will be decided between P. Burnett and K. Pedersen. Burnett defeated E. A. Baughman, 2 up, while Pedersen won from N. F. Faunce by default.

Edgewood.

In the final match for the Golf Shop trophy at Edgewood, W. S. Fuller defeated A. Peterson, 3 and 2. H. H. Mitchell won the Wessman trophy, defeating W. Hastings, 4 and 3, while the Eustis trophy went to Frank De Witt, who won from H. B. Hollings, 2 and 1. In the handicap for the W. E. Keeler prize, H. C. Stewart was first with 100—26—74. H. C. Stewart, 100—26—74; J. N. Tilton, 92—14—78; H. B. Hollings, 93—12—81; J. Knowlson, 95—15—80, qualified in the final trial for the J. E. Smith trophy. Those who qualified for the house committee cup were W. S. Fuller, A. V. Peterson, W. S. Hastings, and H. B. Hollings.

Exmoor.

Exmoor golfers were out in force for the class handicap, which included a putting event. All putts made from inside a circle on the green counted. T. C. Butz, 88—10—78, won in class A, having 32 putts. In class B, W. L. Wells [Old Opie Dilldock] had 94—16—78, taking 31 putts. B. Page won in class C with 97—20—77, taking 36 putts. C. F. Drake, who has 30 putts, won in class D with a card of 105—27—78.

North Shore.

The feature match at the North Shore Golf club came in the semi-finals for the Directors' cup, in which Angell triumphed over Heller, 4 and 2. Brown and Marshall ended all square in the other game. Three players tied at 71 in the handicap for the O. W. Schmidt trophy. These were "St" Perkins, 92—21—71; R. W. Woodward, 92—21—71; W. Angell, 87—16—71. Angell and Boyce tied at 80 in the blind bogey event, George Haas being second with 82.

Park Ridge.

H. L. Johnson won the Saturday cup at Park Ridge donated by W. W. Durham. He finished 3 down. In the semi-finals for the Publicity committee trophy for classes A and B, Sprague defeated Bucheit, 4 and 3, and Springer defeated Black, 3 and 1. In the Secretary's trophy event, Summerhays defeated Gunn, 2 and 1, and Hamburgher defeated Casavant, 2 and 1.

Midlothian.

Midlothian looked like a deserted village when the field of contestants was compared to that which participated in the final round of the Chicago District Golf association on Friday. A two ball sweepstakes was the only competition. R. Fitzgerald won with a card of 88—14—74. C. C. Ingraham, 86—8—78, shot low gross and was second in the net column. Other leading scores: L. W. Pitcher, 99—19—80; W. B. Biddle, 99—19—80; E. F. Bryant, 98—18—80; H. P. Walden, 103—18—81; W. B. Edgar, 100—19—81; E. P. Rowen, 113—32—81; W. C. Stone, 103—22—81; O. P. Powell, 106—24—82.

Chicago.

The Saturday cup at the Chicago Golf club was won by C. H. Markham, who notched a score of 100—20—80. K. L. Ames, 83—2—81, and Mason Phelps [scratch] tied for second.

Elmhurst.

In the second round for the Directors' cup at Elmhurst A. Hammerschmidt defeated C. J. Albert, 3 and 2; F. L. Hankey defeated W. B. Pearn, 2 and 1; J. M. Haines defeated R. Pentecost, 6 and 4, and A. S. Raeder defeated B. O. Lantz, 2 up.

Onwentsia.

Onwentsia members played in an eighteen hole medal handicap. J. O. Hinkley won first prize with 91—16—75. W. E. Clow Jr. shot low gross, 80, and with his handicap of 4 deducted had second low net, 76. Other leading scores: A. De Koven Bowen, 84—5—79; Stanley Keith, 87—6—81; W. R. Kirk, 88—4—84; Theodore Pomeroy, 93—5—88.

La Grange.

As between an occasional circus and steady golf the average caddy will vote for the circus. This was the consensus of opinion among members of the La Grange club when it was found that most of the caddies had gone to the "village show" as guests of Mrs. L. C. Bassford and Mr. A. A. Henry. Enough substitutes, however, were found to tote the clubs, and the last eighteen holes of the thirty-six hole round for the 1914 Membership Committee cup were completed. With a card of 174—20—154, J. N. Tilton had the double distinction of low gross and low net scores and took the trophy. Tilton's nearest competitor was J. S. Perry, who shot 204—44—164. Other leading scores were: H. E. Spear, 178—12—166; H. C. Dewey, 178—12—166; W. J. Parker, 200—32—168; M. L. Joslyn, 190—22—168; L. G. Elliott, 199—26—173; B. H. Wilson, 227—50—177. A. R. Johnston won the ball sweepstakes.

Beverly.

E. H. Guertin pitched and putted his way to victory in the 18 hole handicap competition at Beverly, getting a card of 82—16—66 for low net honors. C. G. Littell registered low gross with 79—12—67. J. A. Middleton Jr., 83—15—68, was third, while J. E. Hitt and W. L. Hendricks tied for fourth position, with cards of 93—24—69. It may take a jury hearing to determine the winners of the prizes offered for the lowest net scores on the odd and even holes. In the former division C. G. Littell, H. R. Shellenberger, E. H. Guertin, and W. C. Oxman were tied with scores of 38 each, while in the latter W. D. Truesdale and H. H. Van Meter were deadlocked with 27s. Matches for the Sports and Pastimes and Garden trophies resulted as follows:

Sports and Pastimes trophy—M. A. Donohue defeated R. S. Lindstrom, 3 and 2; A. L. Winters defeated C. B. Sexton, 6 and 4; C. G. Littell defeated W. D. Truesdale, 2 up; S. K Milligan won by default from F. C. Batchelder; J. A. Rankin defeated Charles J. Mix Jr., 2 up.

Garden trophy—J. A. F. Krause defeated A. H. Haigh, 2 and 1; J. A. Mudd Jr. defeated Dr. B. A. Duffy, 3 and 2; A. G. Fitch defeated S. T. Carter, 5 and 4.

Westmoreland.

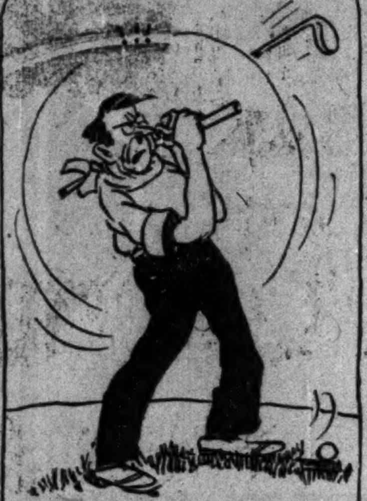
At Westmoreland J. N. Weiter won the final match for the Argyle cup, defeating L. D. Taylor, 3 and 2.

In the class handicap, W. C. Wilson won honors in class A with 90—12—78. In class B a tie resulted between J. D. Montgomery and H. B. Oakley. The former returned a score of 93—14—79, while Oakley had 94—15—79. Class C honors went to E. J. Nichols with a total of 94—25—69.

Results in the first match round for the Aberdeen cup follow: R. V. Hurd won from J. M. Boggs by default; W. P. Kent and W. C. Wilson, even; J. N. Weiter and C. C. Reynolds, even; W. B. Huey defeated H. J. Sloan, 5 and 4; E. S. Fitch defeated R. W. Campbell, 2 and 1. G. W. Springer defeated W. L. Jackson, 5 and 4. T. C. Moulding defeated C. A. Bush, 3 and 2. F. B. Farnsworth defeated C. W. Park, 4 and 3.

BEATING WATER HAZARD

Flossmoor Member Becomes an Inventor and Club Professional Profits.



JOHN E. CORNELL of the Flossmoor club of Chicago has joined the ranks of golf inventors. The short water hole at the course always looked as wide as Lake Michigan to him, so he fashioned a brass tee to prevent the aqueous fate which so frequently befell his "bounding billies." The tee, which had a flat base, was wedge shaped on the top side, with a small indent on the top to hold the ball.

As long as the club hit the brass incline it skied the ball precisely as the inventor intended. Mr. Cornell discovered he had too much loft, so elevated the front of the tee by putting a little sand under it.

That night Professional Harry Collis found three broken wooden clubs in his shop awaiting repairs. Mr. Cornell, who is not quite as accurate as Warren Wood, had landed on the front end of his invention with disastrous results. Now he uses the brass tee only for the water. Collis hopes he will patent the idea and get all the Flossmoor members to use it.

PAIRINGS ANNOUNCED IN TOURNAMENT FOR GOLF CHAMPIONSHIP

New York, June 24.—In announcing the pairings for the national open golf championship tournament, which is to begin next Tuesday at Minnekahda club, Minneapolis, Secretary Howard F. Whitney of the United States Golf association stated today that the field of ninety-two entrants will be equally divided. The first division, consisting of twenty-three pairs, will play a thirty-six hole medal play qualifying round on Tuesday, June 27, and the other half of the field will compete on Wednesday. The thirty-two best scores each will qualify to play seventy-two holes for the championship on Thursday and Friday.

Among the former holders of the title in the professional ranks who will again compete this year are Alec Ross, J. J. McDermott, Walter C. Hagen, Frederick McLeod, and George Sargent, and Tom McNamara, the runner up last year as well as on the two previous occasions, and M. J. Brady and George C. Simpson, who were beaten after a triple tie for the honor by McDermott when he won the championship on the Wheaton (Ill.) links in 1911.

Charles (Chick) Evans Jr., the young Chicago player who finished second to Hagen at the Midlothian Country club, Blue Island, Ill., two years ago, is the most prominent among the sixteen amateurs who aspire to championship honors this year.

WATSON HEADS GOLFERS IN NATIONAL AD MEET.

Hot Springs, Va., June 24.—[Special.]—Ending the annual summer tournament of the American Golf Association of Advertising Interests at Hot Springs today was given up to general handicaps for men and women in classes A, B, and C. Winners in these events were:

Class A—A. J. Watson, Dunwoodie, low gross, 88; S. K. Evans, New York, low net, with 83—10—73; R. L. Whitton, Chicago, low score, 82.

Class B—R. C. Holiss, low gross, 87; D. S. White, Atlantic City, low net, with 92—19—73.

Class C—J. A. Forster, Hackensack, low gross, 119; W. A. Thompson, New York, low net, with 129—45—84.

In the woman's handicap Mrs. W. A. Crocker, Boston, won first net, bringing in a card of 55—11—44. Mrs. H. R. Mallisen, New York, won second net with a score of 69—24—45.

Others scoring were:

Mrs. W. S. Bird, New York, 46—0—46; Mrs. J. Abeel, Hackensack, 58—12—46; Mrs. W. B. Lasher, Bridgeport, 58—18—40.

At the annual business meeting of the association last night new officers elected were:

President, Erman J. Ridgway, New York; first vice president, W. L. Crocker, Boston; second vice president, Lafayette Young Jr., Des Moines, Ia.; secretary and treasurer, W. C. McMillan, New York.

MASONIC GOLFERS TO PLAY FOR PRIZES ON WEDNESDAY.

The Mystic Golf association will stage its first annual tournament on Wednesday at the Harlem golf course. The principal trophy is the Ashlar cup, which will go to the team bringing in the lowest score. It becomes the property of the player winning it three times. There will be six four man team prizes and twenty three individual prizes, which is quite a splurge for the new association. The President's cup, presented by Judge Sabath, will go to the player having the lowest gross score for thirty-six holes. All professionals and W. J. Foulis Jr. of the Wheaton Golf club will shoot from scratch. The handicaps range from zero to 20. The first team will tee off at 8 o'clock, rain or shine.

LANSING W. PERKINS, BILLIARD TUTOR, DIES

L.W. Perkins

LANSING W. PERKINS, the veteran billiard player, died yesterday at a local hospital from a complication of diseases. Although never a player of stellar rank, he was rated as one of the greatest teachers this country has produced. His first success along these lines came with Calvin Demarest, who won both the national amateur and the world' 18-2 championships. After Demarest decided he needed no more instruction Perkins took young Welker Cochran under his wing and much of the success attained by the Iowa boy was due to his coaching. Perkins, who was 66 years old, was connected with billiards for over half a century. Forty-three years ago he competed in the first straight rail tournament for the championship of the Pacific coast, held at San Francisco. For a number of years the professor has made Chicago his home, acting in the capacity of instructor at Mussey's rooms. He had no relatives in Chicago, and his body was shipped yesterday to Beloit, Wis., where a sister resides. Burial will be in the family lot there.

ON OTHER COURSES

Flossmoor.

Several close contests featured the first match round for the Veterans' trophy at Flossmoor, A. J. Mason, A. B. Cody, and R. Polson eliminating their opponents by the narrow margins of 1 up. Sixteen players qualified for the Dwight B. Cheever cup, with T. J. Watkins, 91—16—75, having low net score, and R. J. Daly, 85—5—80, low gross. A special prize was offered for classes A, C, and D grouped in an eighteen hole medal handicap competition. A. J. Allan captured the emblem with a card of 94—18—76. T. J. Watkins also won the eighteen hole handicap versus par, by finishing 1 up. The results:

Veterans' trophy, first round—R. O. Law defeated W. H. Lockwood, 3 and 2; W. S. Horton defeated W. B. Henion, 4 and 2; E. B. Tolman defeated E. H. Smith, 2 up; A. J. Mason defeated A. S. F. W. Roche, 92—19—73, won the [illegible] sweepstakes, [illegible] 91—16—75, and C. S. Pillsbury, 87—12—75, being next.

TROT FOR ALGIER U.; STEPS MILE IN 2:17

Algier U., the property of Ed Sheen, and driven by Dave Leary, gave a display of speed in the second heat of the free-for all trot, by stepping to the quarter in :32½, and the half in 1:06, at the west side matinee yesterday. He finished by himself in 2:17.

Phrase Highwood won the free-for-all pace, but lost the first heat to Earl A, 2:09½. The latter was going rough or he would probably have beaten the son of Highwood. The 2:30 mixed race was a battle between Alma Girl and Anna Hal, Anna won the first heat because Alma Girl got into a pocket, but took the next two.

W. J. Cameron's crack youngster, Medallion, scored in the 2:49 mixed race. Nelly King, owned and bred by John A. King, the veteran horseman and banker, made her initial appearance and accounted for the colt trot after losing the first heat. Summaries:

RAIN AT CLEVELAND HALTS NATIONAL TENNIS TOURNEY.

Cleveland, O., June 24.—A heavy downfall of rain put a stop to the first round matches in the seventh annual national clay court tennis tournament today at the Lakewood Tennis club after the majority of the contestants had completed one set. The contestants were mostly local players. George M. Church, R. Norris Williams, Willis E. Davis, Miss Molla Bjurstedt, Miss Florence Ballin, Mrs. Harry Bickle, and scores of other out of town stars will appear Monday morning when the tournament is resumed. Champions of sixteen states are entered in the tournament. Williams will defend his national singles title in a challenge round. Church and Mathey, doubles champions, also will meet the tournament winners.

PACIFIC NET TITLE GOES TO JOHNSTON; BEATS PAL GRIFFIN

Del Monte, Cal., June 24.—William M. Johnston, national tennis champion, won the Pacific states championship today after a thrilling struggle with Clarence Griffin, joint holder with Johnston of the national doubles title. The scores were 9—7, 6—4, 5—7, 9—7.

With the exception of the second, every set went to deuce, both men using all the skill at their command in an exhibition of tennis that kept the big gallery on tiptoe throughout the contest.

The national champion had annexed two sets before Griffin could stem the tide of defeat. The third set was nip and tuck until the score stood 5 all, when Griffin, rallying superbly, won the next two games and set. The fourth and concluding set found Griffin striving desperately to even up, but with the score at 7-all the champion drew away.

Griffin and Johnston won the doubles title by defeating J. C. Rohlfs of Berkeley and Bowie Detrick of the University of California in straight sets, 6-2, 6-2, 8-6.

In the semi-finals of junior doubles Elmer Griffin and Wallace Bates of San Francisco defeated W. Bonnaheim and M. Fottrell, 6-3, 6-4. Miss Helen Baker of San Francisco won the women's singles championship by defeating Miss Marjorie Thorn in the final, 8-6, 6-4.

REACH ADVANCED ROUNDS IN C. H. I. NET TOURNEY.

Play progressed to the semi-finals in doubles and reached the third round in singles in the eighth annual junior tennis tournament held by Chicago Hebrew institute yesterday. Agay won the feature match by defeating Littman, a University of Chicago freshman player, 6—2, 10—8. Agay was later defeated. Summaries:

Singles, preliminary round—Perlman defeated Rosen, 6—0, 6—4; Anderson defeated Krouse, 6—2, 6—4; Buckbinder defeated Gilmore, 6—1, 5—7, 6—4.

First round—Nathan defeated Cooper, 6—3, 6—3; Wasserman defeated Giller, 6—1, 6—3; Adler won from De Swartz by default; Perlman defeated Forster, 0—6, 6—2, 6—2; Wexler defeated Rosenthal, 6—1, 6—0; Haskell defeated Dunry, 6—1, 6—1; Agay defeated Littman, 6—2, 10—8; Anderson defeated Buckbinder, 6—1, 6—3.

Doubles, first round—Buckbinder and Agay won from Giller and Rosenthal by default; Adler and Forster defeated Berman and Rosen, 6—3, 6—2; Haskell and Perlman defeated Blano and Ulman, 8—6, 7—5; Nath and Littman defeated Gilmore and Anderson, 6—1, 6—1.

Second round—Adler and Forster defeated Buckbinder and Agay, 6—2, 6—4.

Semi-finals and finals will be played today.

SEARS TENNIS TEAM WINS.

The Sears-Roebuck tennis team beat Western Electric players on the latters' courts, five matches to four. City Champion Walter Hayes, standby of the mail order net men, missed the play to take part in the Chicago championships, but his loss was atoned for by the competition of Alex. Squair, former western titleholder, who won easily in singles and figured in a doubles victory. The Electric players won two matches which went the limit of three sets. Summaries:

Singles—Squair, Sears-Roebuck, defeated Williams, Electrics, 6—1, 6—1; Pritikin, Sears-Roebuck, defeated Smith, Electrics, 6—2, 6—0; Marceau, Sears-Roebuck, defeated Wheeler, Electrics, 7—5, 6—3; Dale, Electrics, defeated Zilligan, Sears-Roebuck, 6—4, 6—2; Cook, Electrics, defeated Nichols, Sears-Roebuck, 7—5, 3—6, 6—3; Biggar, Electrics, defeated Hubbell, Sears-Roebuck, 6—0, 6—2.

Doubles—Cook and Biggar, Electrics, defeated Zilligan and Nichols, Sears-Roebuck, 6—2, 2—6, 6—3; Squair and Hubbell, Sears-Roebuck, defeated Smith and Williams, Electrics, 6—4, 6—2; Marceau and Pritikin, Sears-Roebuck, defeated Dale and Wheeler, Electrics, 6—4, 6—1.

Lacrosse Practice Game Today.

The Chicago lacrosse club will hold a practice game at 9 o'clock this morning at thee north end of Grant park. Manager Donnelley reports he has a star in O'Brien, a former Montreal player. Donnelley expects to have one of the best teams that has represented Chicago to meet the Toronto team at Comiskey park on July 22 for the benefit of the Canadian Red Cross fund.

HEATH BYFORD REACHES FINAL IN NET TOURNEY

State Champion Beats Lindauer in Three Sets—City Title Match Today.

BY KEENE GARDINER.

State Tennis Champion Heath Byford playing in his best form, entered the finals of the city championship by defeating Al Lindauer in three straight sets at the Wanderers' club yesterday. The other semi-final match, between City Champion Walter T. Hayes and M. G. Ketchum, former California player, will be played at 11 o'clock this morning and the winner will meet Byford for the 1916 title at 2 o'clock this afternoon. Hayes is favorite for Byford's opponent.

Finals will be played in women's singles and doubles, and men's doubles today, and the men's consolation championships in both singles and doubles probably will be finished, closing the tournament.

Miss Neely in Final.

Miss Carrie B. Neely, present state and western champion, eliminated Mrs. Malcolm MacNeill Jr., 1915 city title holder, in the semi-finals of women's singles, and is picked to annex the title over Miss Amanda Falker, a young player who won the other semi-final match after a hard fight against Mrs. Walter Ellis.

Walter Hayes and Ralph Burdick, city doubles champions, had easy sailing, entering the finals by taking three love sets in a row from Roger Carver and Pat Segal of Hyde Park High school. Hayes and Burdick are playing their second tournament season together, and nothing like their team work has been displayed at any time during the present tournament. They will meet a fast pair in the finals in Al Green Jr. and M. G. Ketchum, but the chances of the latter combination are figured about nil.

Woman Champions Win Easily.

In women's doubles Miss Neely and Mrs. MacNeill are paired, cornering the best talent of the feminine players. Miss Neely and Mrs. MacNeill will meet Miss Dorothy Higbee, a 17 year old University High school player, and Miss Falker in the semi-finals. The other match will bring together Miss Marian Leighton and Miss Lillian Litt, Hyde Park high school girls, and Miss Hildegard Ware and Miss Prindeville.

Byford's match against Lindauer attracted a big gallery. This year's conference college champion was expected to force Byford to a long drawn out match. The Big Nine champ was unable to make his strokes count in the first set, which went to Byford in a love set. Lindauer tightened in the second frame, staging a desperate rally after the state titleholder had run up a lead.

Byford Plays Careful Game.

The college player tried all sorts of shots, while Byford stuck to his careful tactics, and Lindauer twice evened the score at deuce in games. He never was able to seize the lead, however, and Byford's consistent play finally won the set, 8—6. Lindauer slumped again in the third set, taking only the first game and losing the set and match, 6—1. Byford's easy victory was a surprise.

A. S. Buhai, former University of Illinois player, who was beaten in the first round in both singles and doubles, made a strong bid for consolation honors by downing all his opponents as far as the semi-finals in singles. Paired with R. Anthony, another former Illini, he reached the doubles semi-finals.

Summary of Play.

Fabrice and Ruthven Pike, 7—5, 6—3; Harry Knox and Bob Van Arsdale won by default from B. Clark and Ryecroft; A. Neilson and W. A. Futterer won by default from Crandall and R. Booser.

Semi-final round—A. C. Neilson and W. Futterer defeated Harry Knox and R. L. Van Arsdale, 7—5, 6—2.

K. C. TENNIS TO MISS HIRES.

Kansas City, Mo., June 24.—Miss Marjorie Hires defeated Mrs. W. W. Yeager, state champion, 7—7, 4—6, 6—2, today for the title in the central west tennis championship for women at the Kansas City Field club. Miss Hires won the same tournament in 1912. A surprise was sprung in the doubles when Miss Marjorie Morey and Miss Louise Hammann defeated Miss Hires and Miss Evelyn Seavey, 8—6, 1—6, 6—4.

-THE MILKMAID- Reproduction of A Painting by Greuze

By LOUISE JAMES BARGELT.

THERE are those who work for art's sake solely and to measure up to the ideal they have wrought within themselves. There are others who work for the plaudits of the world and to measure up to the requisites their world exacts.

Jean Baptiste Greuze was a master painter of the latter class. He took delight in charming the public and holding captive their favor just as an actor revels in swaying the emotions of the audience before him. Greuze knew the enchanting power of sheer prettiness and he directed his genius to succeeding through this channel. And even today his paintings are among the most popular paintings in the Louvre, Paris.

He created fascinating ladies elegantly dressed in rich draperies which he arranged in marvelous folds. He let them pose as milkmaids and dairy maids and shepherdesses, though they had plainly never seen a farm and then audaciously offered their beauty in palliation of his rash departure from truth.

His flesh tones he makes seducing, his feminine loveliness enticing. A French painter is a French painter, first, last, and always, but Greuze is not only inherently French but Parisian as well.

He belongs to the French school of Watteau, and Lancret, and Boucher, and Fragonard. Sensation must be provoked, but they must be pleasant ones, preferably delightful ones. The storms which were gathering throughout France and which were to culminate in the carnage of the Revolution were already casting their shadows before them, but the people would not heed them. They must be charmed and pleased, if thrones were tottering.

Before that catastrophe Greuze was the favored of favorite artists. He had accumulated a fortune despite the fact that he was possessed of one of the most extravagant and faithless wives man ever had. But his studio was a rendezvous for both royalty and nobility, and fashionable society followed in their wake.

Then with the storm the revolutionists stirred up, wealth was thrown to the winds and reputations were buried in a night. Afterwards he was supplanted in favor by David, and was forced to drift about begging for work from various people of influence. At 75 years of age he found himself alone without money, friends, or orders for his pictures.

"This is the most terrible moment of all my life," he wrote to a friend.

Five years later, still in abject poverty, he died. Napoleon, when he heard of it, is said to have stormed and asked: "Why was I not told of his troubles? I would have given him a vase of gold for every picture he might copy for me of his 'Broken Pitcher.'"

Among his finest pictures is always included the "Milkmaid" and also the "Broken Pitcher." This "La Laitiere" was included in the bequest of the Baroness Rothschild to the Louvre in 1899.

MATT LOOKS UPON THE WINE

by INEZ HAYNES GILLMORE

This is the tenth of a series of stories by Inez Haynes Gillmore, the famous short story writer, dealing with the adventures, trials, and joys of the "Ollivant Orphans," which will appear every Sunday in The Sunday Tribune. Each installment will be complete in itself, although the series of stories as a whole will make a delightful novel. You will find the Ollivant Orphans good company, and the author's facile style and apt character delineation will make you remember the stories as among the best works of fiction you have read.

"THERE it is!" Beckie exclaimed, rushing to the window and throwing up the sash.

"Listen!"

The three little necks craned to a listening angle. The three little heads dropped to a listening attitude. The three little faces sharpened to a listening expression.

"There it is!" Beckie exclaimed joyously. "One, two, three, four!"

"Five, six, seven, eight!" Lainey chimed in with her.

"Nine, ten, eleven, twelve!" Irresistibly attracted, Ann joined the chorus.

"Happy New Year!" Lainey said.

"Happy New Year! Happy New Year!" Beckie and Ann took it up.

They shut the windows and turned back to the seats at the living room fire. The two rooms still bore their holiday decorations. A Christmas tree, glittering red and green, blue and silver, under the torrent of gold which seemed to pour from its peak, stood in the corner. Wreaths of holly decorated the windows. A bunch of mistletoe hung between the two rooms.

"We must take all those green things down before Twelfth night," Lainey said absently, "or the goblins will get into them. Just think," she went on in an awed tone. "It's another year. Another year! How mysterious that sounds! O, isn't life wonderful! And the world—and space—and time—and—and—and everything! Why, it's just as though we were all on a raft in a stream and the stream were carrying us on and on and on—straight into eternity—we don't know where or why or how or anything. And it wouldn't make any difference if we did know—we'd have to go, just the same."

"Lainey Olivant!" Ann said scathingly, "the boys say you're a nut when you go on in that dotty strain. And sometimes I agree with them. Now, talk sense."

Lainey acepted without a murmur the prevailing opinion of her. "Well, anyway," she remonstrated mildly, "perhaps you'll admit that time flies."

"Flies!" Ann repeated. "Flies! That's just what I won't admit. I should say not. Flies! It creeps. I never saw anything go so slow as time does. Why, it was ages before I got into my teens! And now that I'm getting toward 20 it's slower than ever. Nothing ever happens in this hateful, horrid, hideous old world."

From a light note of exasperation, Ann's voice had sunk to the roundest depths of her 19 year old pessimism.

Her statement brought immediate contradication. "Now I think lots of things happen," Beckie remarked placidly. And "Why—why—why," Lainey positively stuttered. "Things are happening all the time—every minute."

"What, for instance," Ann demanded in a bitter tone. "Tell me one thing that's ever happened to me—or us.'

Lainey did not answer. But perceptibly she probed her memory for data.

"I'll tell you why nothing ever happens to us," Ann went on scornfully. "It's because we haven't the sense to make anything happen. Why didn't we have a New Year's party tonight, for instance?"

"A New Year's party!" Beckie exclaimed with visible shock. "Why, I wouldn't know how to give a New Year's party. Besides, you know—well—we never have had parties."

"I know we haven't," Ann agreed, "but that's no reason why we shouldn't. I never had a New Year's celebration in my life and I never went to one except in a church or a hall—a watch meeting or something stupid like that. But then, that's Boston. Don't I wish I lived in New York! Edwina Allen was there last New Year's and you ought to hear her tell about the party she went to in a restaurant. There were twelve of them and they had to reserve the table weeks beforehand and they could order nothing to drink but champagne. The place was simply jammed with the most gorgeously dressed people you ever saw in your life.

And when the New Year sounded a girl all in tights came out of a great clock in the corner and everybody cheered and fox trotted and lame ducked and sang and drank healths and you shook hands with perfect strangers—and then they all went out on Broadway."

"It must have been just like the night before Bunker Hill day in Charlestown," remarked the guileless Lainey.

"Bunker Hill day—Charlestown!" Ann said in the height of civic scorn. "That's just as much as you know about such things, Lainey—comparing a bum holiday with a real carnival."

"I don't know why you knock Boston so," Beckie commented indignantly. "I'm sure it's a beautiful city."

"Have you ever lived in any other city?" Ann demanded ruthlessly.

"No," Beckie admitted reluctantly.

"That's the answer to why you think so."

"But everybody says so"—Beckie again rose and battled—"even people who've traveled."

"If they're Bostonians of course they do. Well, I'm glad you like Boston, Beckie, seeing you've got to live here. I call it a dead, cold, slow little burg and I'm going to get out of it just as soon as I can. I'm going on the stage if it's necessary." This was Ann's deadliest threat.

"But think of the culture here," Beckie remonstrated.

"Culture!" Ann repeated. "Culture. Who wants culture. Culture's gone out. My goodness, when I think of Boston, I don't blame people for being I. W. W.'s"

"Why don't you join the I. W. W., Ann?" Lainey suggested. Lainey, a little, humorless normally, could on occasions develop a subtle strain of sarcasm. "Things happen to them."

"The I. W. W.," Ann repeated in a wearied voice. "The I. W. W. There's a lot of class to the I. W. W., isn't there?"

"I'm thinking quite seriously of joining it myself," said Lainey.

"Lainey Ollivant," Ann said in tones round and full with horror, "I will not stand for it. Think of having an I. W. W. in the family. It's bad enough your being a Socialist—but when it comes to being an I Won't Work—and picketing—and talking from soap boxes on street corners—and breaking machinery—and everything—I can't see when you were going in for such queer things you didn't take up college settlement work. Why, I never tasted champagne but once in all my life," Ann reverted to her original grievance. "And then I had only two teeny-weeny glasses. It was on board Commodore Carleton's yacht. That crowd drank champagne an awful lot. I always refused it. Now I wish I'd drunk every glass they offered me."

In the height of her recklessness Ann seized her little boudoir cap and dashed it on the floor. "I'm sick of nothing happening," she announced.

She was a monument to discontent at that moment, her warm lips pouted to their most scornful fullness, her big eyes lighted to their most scornful blaze.

"I've never tasted champagne," Lainey asserted with an air of fiery rectitude, "or anything intoxicating. I don't believe in drinking—or at least in women drinking—not until they're married, anyway."

"I'm for temperance," Becky insisted with a look imperious with obstinacy. "Mother always was."

"Well, I'm not," Ann said. "I hate temperance or anything that prevents you from doing what you like. If there was a bottle of champagne in this house at this moment," she glared at her sisters, "I'd drink it," she paused and added with a visible access of recklessness, "even if I got drunk."

"O, Ann!" exclaimed Lainey, scandalized.

"I guess it's about time for us to go to bed," Beckie suggested in a disapproving tone.

"Well, as long as there's nothing else to do," Ann agreed, "I suppose we'd better." Her revolutionary spirit turned suddenly to listnessness. "Come on, Lainey."

Lainey did not move. Instead, "Hark!" she exclaimed. "Somebody's at the door. One of the boys is coming home."

Somebody was at the door. Plainly there came through the silence the sound of a hand on the knob.

"Well, whoever it is, I should think he was blind," Ann remarked with captious intent. "O, it's Matt! Hullo, Matt! Happy New Year!"

"Happy New Year, Matt!" Lainey and Beckie chorused.

"Happy New Year, girls!" Matt responded. "Happy New Year!"

He stood in the hall for an instant, removing his hat and coat. He seemed to have trouble with both. The hat, as though possessed by a spirit of contrariety positively human, refused to be hung up. It fell from his hand twice and he was, each time, a long while in recovering it. "I request you to hang on that hook," Matt finally addressed it in a tone of steely courtesy. It obeyed.

"Happy New Year, girls!" Matt repeated absently as he entered the room. He made for a seat in front of the fire. He walked with perceptible care and precision, but the furniture kept getting in his way. A big chair reached out a treacherous arm and pulled him over.

"O, do for goodness sake pick up your feet, Matt." Ann rebuked him sharply once. "I shouldn't think you knew where you were going."

"I don't," Matt admitted, still weaving towards a chair. And he laughed uproariously as at a joke on himself. But his face sobered instantly. A cunning expression wiped the mirth out. "I don't know where I'm going," he admitted again, "but ——" he paused and swayed a little, "but," he added impressively, "I'm on my way."

His face was flushed. His hair, which usually rose to so trim and rampant a crest of red, had rumpled and tumbled into the curls he always tried so hard to smooth out. Suddenly without warning he threw himself back into his chair and burst into a roar of laughter. "Happy New Year, girls!" he said.

Matt's laughter was infectious. The three girls laughed with him. "You must have been having a good time to be so happy, Matt," Lainey commented in her little voice.

"I think you're silly," Ann remarked in her round notes. "What have you been doing?"

"O, a lot of things," Matt answered vaguely. "Been round to a lot of places—seen a lot of people—been round a lot—seen a lot—but——" He stopped and appeared to grope for something he had forgotten. For a moment his head drooped. His eyes, half closed, closed entirely. A look of cunning introspection crossed his face. Then obviously he got what he was searching for. "I'm on my way," he pronounced impressively. Again he stared hard at his sisters. Immediately another mood caught him. "Happy New Year, girls!" He burst into roars of laughter.

But his sisters did not laugh with him this time. "O, do stop, Matt," Beckie exclaimed. "I don't think that joke is funny any longer."

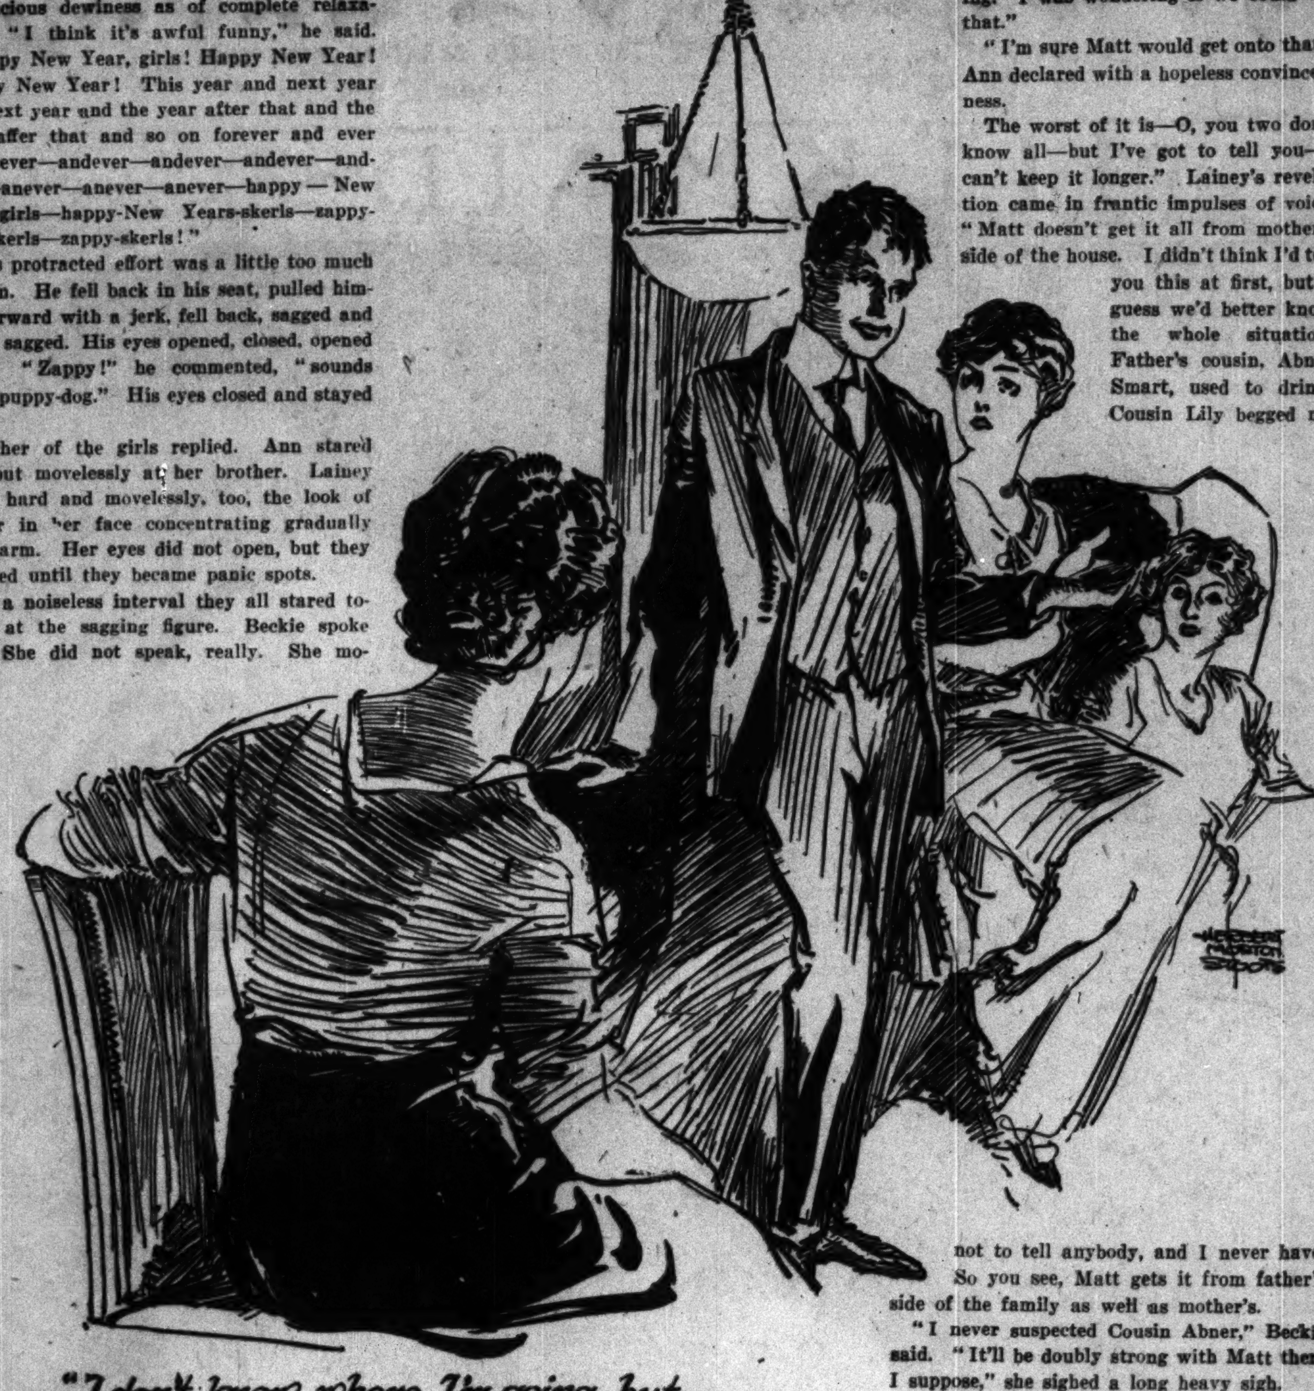
"I didn't think it was funny at the beginning," Ann remarked caustically.

Matt's eyes opened wide again. The mirth melted slowly from his face. In its place came a delicious dewiness as of complete relaxation. "I think it's awful funny," he said. "Happy New Year, girls! Happy New Year! Happy New Year! This year and next year and next year and the year after that and the year affer that and so on forever and ever and ever—andever—andever—andever—andever—anever—anever—anever—happy—New Years-girls—happy-New Years-skerls—zappy-year-skerls—zappy-skerls!"

This protracted effort was a little too much for him. He fell back in his seat, pulled himself forward with a jerk, fell back, sagged and stayed sagged. His eyes opened, closed, opened again. "Zappy!" he commented, "sounds like a puppy-dog." His eyes closed and stayed closed.

Neither of the girls replied. Ann stared hard but movelessly at her brother. Lainey stared hard and movelessly, too, the look of wonder in her face concentrating gradually into alarm. Her eyes did not open, but they darkened until they became panic spots.

For a noiseless interval they all stared together at the sagging figure. Beckie spoke first. She did not speak, really. She motioned with her lips. "He's drunk," they gestured.



"I don't know where I'm going, but— ..

"Get him to bed," Beckie signaled back. With an air of resolution she arose. She bent over the recumbent Matt, fast asleep now and smiling in his sleep, shook him. "Wake up Matt!" she commanded. "It's time to go to bed."

Matt opened one eye, then the other. The cunning look came back into his face. "I'm on my way!" he confided impressively. Again mirth wiped off this seriousness and he laughed. "Zappy-year-skerls!" He roared.

The little image in ice that was Lainey arose from her chair, placed itself at his side. "Stand up, Matt, dear," she begged touchingly, "we'll help you."

"This way!" Beckie commanded. She took one arm. Lainey took the other. As they moved toward the hall Ann fell in behind.

Matt walked steadily under this compulsion until he reached the hall settle. That seemed suddenly to recall his early struggle. "I request you," he addressed his hat in the tone of a steely courtesy, "to hang on that hook. Will you kindly stay where I put you?" he remarked to the coat.

"Up the stairs, Matt dear," Lainey pleaded as with a child.

"All right!" Matt agreed good naturedly. And up he went, leaning first on Beckie, then Lainey. "Jus' think—one step affer anozzer—one-step-affer-anozzer—onestepafferanozzer."

This refrain entertained him more than any previous one. He held to it through their hobbling, stumbling progress up the first flight of stairs, through their swaying, weaving march through the hall, and their jerking, battering ascent of the second flight. "Aw-ways-one-step-affar-anozzer-girls. Jus-zink-of-zat-zat's-life—awways-one-step-affer-anozzer—affer-anozzer—aff-anozzer—av-anozzer—av-anozzer—sounds like a biscuit."

He was absolutely docile, however, during this excursion, and he continued to be docile when they reached his room. Of his own accord he fell immediately into the big chair, and under the compulsion of his condition into a deep sleep. Ann removed his collar and tie, Beckie his coat and waistcoat, Lainey his shoes and stockings.

"That's all we can do," Beckie whispered at the end of these ministrations. "Let's get him into bed."

Matt responded to a violent shaking long enough to rise at their bidding from the chair, to navigate across the room, to flop onto the bed where he apparently fell into a state of coma.

"That's the most dreadful thing that ever happened to me in my life," Beckie breathed in an instant.

"I never was so frightened in all my existence," Ann intoned, "for if there's anything I have a horror of it's a drunken man."

"Thank God, mother didn't live to see this!" Lainey whispered.

Ann's tone grew bitter. "I thought all the terrible things that could possibly happen to the Ollivant family had happened. But I was wrong, I see. It remained for us to raise a drunkard."

Lainey set a hopeless blue-gray haze on a point in space. "Who does he take it from, Beckie?" she asked mournfully. "Do you know?"

"O, I know," Beckie said in despairing tone. "I know. Only too well. I hate to tell you two girls this. Because I know you've never realized it. But I guess I've got to so that you can get what you're up against. Uncle Warren was a drunkard in his youth.

"Poor Aunt Josephine!" Lainey exclaimed. "Poor, poor Auntie! That's why she had that sweet, sad, patient look."

"I suppose that's the way Matt will be," said Ann. "Just imagine having to put him to bed two or three times a week. Well, the boys will have to do it. I won't."

"I don't know what Ed will say," Beckie went on in a frightened voice. "I'm almost afraid to tell him. It will be an awful shock to him. Ed's so correct and so fastidious. He'll have no mercy on Matt."

"And Roly," Lainey interpolated somberly.

"Thank goodness Roly was in bed and asleep," Beckie ejaculated. "We must keep it from him just as long as possible—it will be such a terrible example to him. I suppose he's bound to know some time, though."

"Yes, don't let Roly know." Lainey begged. "It's awful to lose your faith in anybody. I never can respect Matt again."

"Do you suppose," Ann burst out in an accent of horror, "that anybody saw him? I should simply die if Mrs. Damon knew it."

"Well," Ann broke it abruptly, "I guess the best thing we can do is to go to bed. I'm all in. This has been a swell New Year's eve for us, I must say."

The three girls filed upstairs on tiptoe. They whispered their good-nights. Suddenly a little pattering footstep sounded outside in the hall. The knob turned. The door opened. "Are you awake, Beckie?" Lainey's tearful voice called. "Can I come in?"

"O, do come in, Lainey," Beckie answered. "There isn't a drop of sleep in my body." She arose and lighted the gas.

Lainey appeared in its illumination, standing in the doorway. Lainey's eyes were red.

"Is Ann asleep?" Beckie asked.

"Yes, she went to sleep right away," Lainey answered in a dead voice.

"But I haven't closed my eyes. And then I heard you get up and I thought probably you felt the way I did—you'd rather talk with me than just lie and think. Who's that? O, Ann, you frightened me to death! O, Ann, did I wake you up?"

"No," Ann answered dully. "I haven't slept. I can't. I feel—I feel—well, I haven't felt so badly since Matt was arrested for speeding and Ed wouldn't bail him out and he had to spend the night in jail among common criminals."

"I've been thinking, too," Lainey said, "thinking and thinking and thinking—turning it all over. Isn't there some way Matt can be cured?"

"I've been wondering about that," Beckie replied, a little dash of hope in her voice. "Of course there are those places where you go and they cure you up. I shall talk to Ed tomorrow about sending Matt away before this thing grows on him. Ed will agree with me, I know. If we have any trouble with Matt I shall simply insist on it, and, Lainey, I want you to back me up. If it's necessary, I'll go to Verbeck, Wales & Co. and ask them to hold Matt's place open for him."

"O, I will, Beckie," Lainey promised with fervor. "I will. You may be sure of that. I've got a hundred dollars saved up toward going to Europe. I shall offer it to Matt. I shall make him take it."

"The trouble with those cures," Ann said with a tragic pessimism, "is that they don't always cure. Take Miriam Fales' brother. He came home apparently all right and they thought the whole thing was settled for keeps. But one month from the very day he came home he got dead drunk."

"I know," Beckie admitted wanly. "It didn't work with Roy Baker, either. But in case the cure fails there are other ways, I'm sure. I read the other day of a man who used to get drunk and his wife put whisky in every bit of food she cooked for him—coffee, bread, stew, meat pie, pudding—everything. Of course she had to cook his food separately. But when he asked her what made everything taste of whisky she lied and said she didn't know. Well, he got so sick of the taste that he just naturally stopped drinking. I was wondering if we could try that."

"I'm sure Matt would get onto that," Ann declared with a hopeless convincedness.

The worst of it is—O, you two don't know all—but I've got to tell you—I can't keep it longer." Lainey's revelation came in frantic impulses of voice. "Matt doesn't get it all from mother's side of the house. I didn't think I'd tell you this at first, but I guess we'd better know the whole situation. Father's cousin, Abner Smart, used to drink. Cousin Lily begged me not to tell anybody, and I never have. So you see, Matt gets it from father's side of the family as well as mother's.

"I never suspected Cousin Abner," Beckie said. "It'll be doubly strong with Matt then, I suppose," she sighed a long heavy sigh.

"What shall we do?" Lainey asked helplessly

"I can't get my mind off it," Beckie declared wildly, "seems as if I had no control over my thoughts."

"I can't either," Lainey admitted frantically. "My head is going round like a top."

"I don't believe I ever'll sleep again," Ann prophesied crazily. "Think of having a sot in the family!"

"I've been wondering," with an obvious effort Lainey pulled herself together, "if there wasn't some other way of handling this situation. Couldn't we make home so attractive to Matt that he'd want to spend his evenings here. Then he couldn't get drunk. Don't you think it would be a good scheme to have some parties, for instance, and invite all the people he likes?"

At the word parties a little fire of animation flared in Ann's face. "I think that's a wonderful idea," she approved with a tiny jet of vivacity.

"Because," Lainey went on earnestly, "there's nothing really criminal about Matt. He likes nice girls and harmless times and all that sort of thing. I think that with care we could wean him from his present associates, whatever they are. For I'm sure somebody's responsible for his downfall. Matt's such a good boy."

"O, take it from me, it's that crowd of Alice Downing's," Ann interpolated with a touch of her natural causticity. "I don't like them and never did."

"I agree with you," Beckie said stoutly. "It's not Matt. It's the influences about him. Matt is naturally a good boy. He never would get drunk if somebody hadn't tempted him. And probably it was a woman. I feel a lot better. I guess I'll go to bed. I think I can sleep now. Good night, Lainey. Good night, Ann."

"Good night, Beckie," her sisters chorused.

Ann took her place on the inside of the bed. Lainey took her place on the outside. For a long while Ann lay perfectly silent, snuggled into the little round kittenlike heap into which she always fell. Then, suddenly she began to tremble. The trembling became a frantic shaking. She pulled herself up with elaborate care, climbed cautiously over Lainey, snatched a covering from the couch, ran to the door, rushed with an accelerating speed to Beckie's room.

"Beckie, Beckie," she called, the pulses of panic beating in her voice. "Are you awake? I'm coming in."

"Yes, I'm awake. I haven't slept," Beckie admitted wearily. "O, Ann, you mustn't take it so hard." She pulled her sister down on the bed.

"Don't let Lainey hear us," Ann said in the midst of a volley of sobs. "O, is that you, Lainey? Haven't you slept either?"

"I couldn't sleep if my life depended on it," Lainey announced in a stony voice. She sat down beside Ann, threw her arms about her. "Don't cry, Ann," she implored. "Please don't cry."

"I can't stand it any longer," Ann sobbed. "I think of Matt up there—sleeping in his clothes—d-d-d-dead d-d-d-drunk. I'm so afraid it's a jug-jug-jug-judgment on me. The last thing I said be-b-before he came into the house was that if there was a b-b-b-bottle of ch-ch-ch-champagne here I'd drink it all. I'm going to sign the p-p-p-pledge tomorrow."

"Of course it's not a judgment on you, Ann," Beckie said indignantly. "If it's anything, it's the sins of the fathers. "I'm glad you're crying, though. It will relax that awful t-t-t-tension." Beckie's own voice quivered.

"Yes, Ann," Lainey reinforced her sister, "Beckie's right. It will do you good to cry. Cry all you want to. Cr-cr-cry till you c-c-can't cry any more." Lainey's own accent began to break.

Outside the air of that first day of the new year seemed to flash and sparkle. A golden sun was pouring flame jewels through the still clearness. A blue sky dropped blue shadows onto a white world. Snowbirds cluttered and fluttered. Sleighbells caroled and chimed. Snow shovels scraped and grated. Ocasionally snow fell from peaked gables with a long, steady roar. Occasionally icicles broke with a short, brittle clink. From everywhere rang the cries of the coasters. From everybody came the call, "Happy New Year!"

Inside, the three girls—pale faced, wan eyed, slow motioned—went through the movements of getting breakfast.

"I'm trying to think how to break it to Ed," Beckie said. "I expect it'll about half kill him—the disgrace and everything. I never dreaded anything so in my life."

"When is he coming home?" Lainey inquired listlessly.

"Any moment now. He said he'd be here for breakfast. A box just came addressed to Matt. I wonder what it was? I put it upstairs against his door. There, there's Ed now."

Ed's key cut cleanly into the lock. The three girls stood for an instant petrified.

"Is that you, Ed?" Beckie quavered. "O, he's going upstairs first," Ann whispered. "He'll wake Matt," Lainey hissed.

Beckie fired. "Well, perhaps Matt will have the manhood to confess what he's done. But ——" Panic seized her. "We'd better go up there. There's no knowing what might happen."

The three girls hurried out into the hall. The defiant Beckie in the van, the listless Lainey in the rear, cowering Ann between, they stole up the two flights of stairs. In the upper hallway, Beckie paused, her finger at her lip. Involuntarily they put their arms round each other, set to statue stillness.

From the boys' room came not only Ed's clear voice, but Roly's sleepy accent and Matt's sleepier one.

"What's the matter with you, Matt?" Ed demanded with the flattering frankness of brothers, "you look like something the cat brought in."

"I feel worse than that," Matt admitted. "Get me some water, will you, Roly? And say, let me have the first bath, will you, Ed?"

Matt sat on the edge of the bed, his head in his hands. His lack luster hollowness showed a marked contrast to Ed's equable tinting.

"How did you happen to go to bed with your clothes on?" Ed inquired calmly. "Spifflicated?"

"Search me," Matt said. "Yes, I must have been jagged last night. I can't seem to remember anything about it. I went off with some people ——"

"Alice Downing's crowd?" Ed questioned idly, smashing his thick golden hair with smart slapping strokes from two military brushes.

"No, I don't know who—a gang of fellows—three drummers in the hardware business that Gus Clark introduced me to. We went—well, I don't know where—and did—well, I don't know what. And I got home—well, I don't remember when—and got to bed—well, I don't remember how. Did you put me to bed, Roly?"

"No."

"Then the girls must have."

"You were soused all right," Roly grinned broadly. "I heard the girls helping you upstairs. I was too sleepy to get up. You were saying something about one foot after the other—over and over again."

"Gee," Matt said, "I must have been pickled."

"You ought not to have come home drunk," Ed rebuked his brother. "I should have thought you'd have known better than that. You must have frightened the girls half to death. You know women are all bugs on this question. They'll have you in the D. T. ward inside of a week." He turned to Roly. "Remember, kid, if you ever get drunk—don't come home. Go somewhere. Go anywhere—and stay there—but don't come home!"

"I'll never get drunk," Roly growled. "I hate the taste of the stuff."

"I didn't intend to get tight, Ed," Matt said. "It was an accident. I wouldn't have thrown a scare into the girls for anything. What'll I say to them?"

"Don't say anything. Let them do the talking. They'll talk all right. If they don't pack you off to a cure, you're lucky."

"Now, how did it happen?" Matt interrogated himself irritably. He clutched his head and thought hard. "Seems to me somebody mixed up a glass of beer, cocktails, whisky, gin, and every other damn thing in sight and dared me to drink it. I did—and I went out soon after."

"You kept saying, 'Happy New Year, skerls!' coming up the stairs," said Roly, still palpably enjoying his brother's situation.

"Gee!" Matt said, "I must have been stewed."

Their arms about each other, the girls still stood frozen, a little Niobe group of terror.

Suddenly Ann looked at Beckie. Beckie looked at Lainey. Lainey looked at Ann. A quiver zigzagged across Lainey's face. It flashed through the air and spread to a ripple at Ann's generous mouth. The ripple widened, caught on Beckie's wan look, broke into a smile. Beckie covered her lips with a smothering hand. Ann filled her mouth with a gagging handkerchief. Lainey dropped her head to an inhibiting shoulder. Suddenly the group broke apart. The fragments made silently down the stairs. In the living room Ann threw herself on one chair and laughed. Beckie threw herself on another chair and cried. Lainey fell on the couch and both laughed and cried.

When the three brothers came down the stairs the girls had set the table. "Happy New Year, skerls!" Roly called. "Happy New Year, spoys!" Ann answered. "Come to breakfast!"

Mutual understanding wrapped the Ollivant family in its peace.

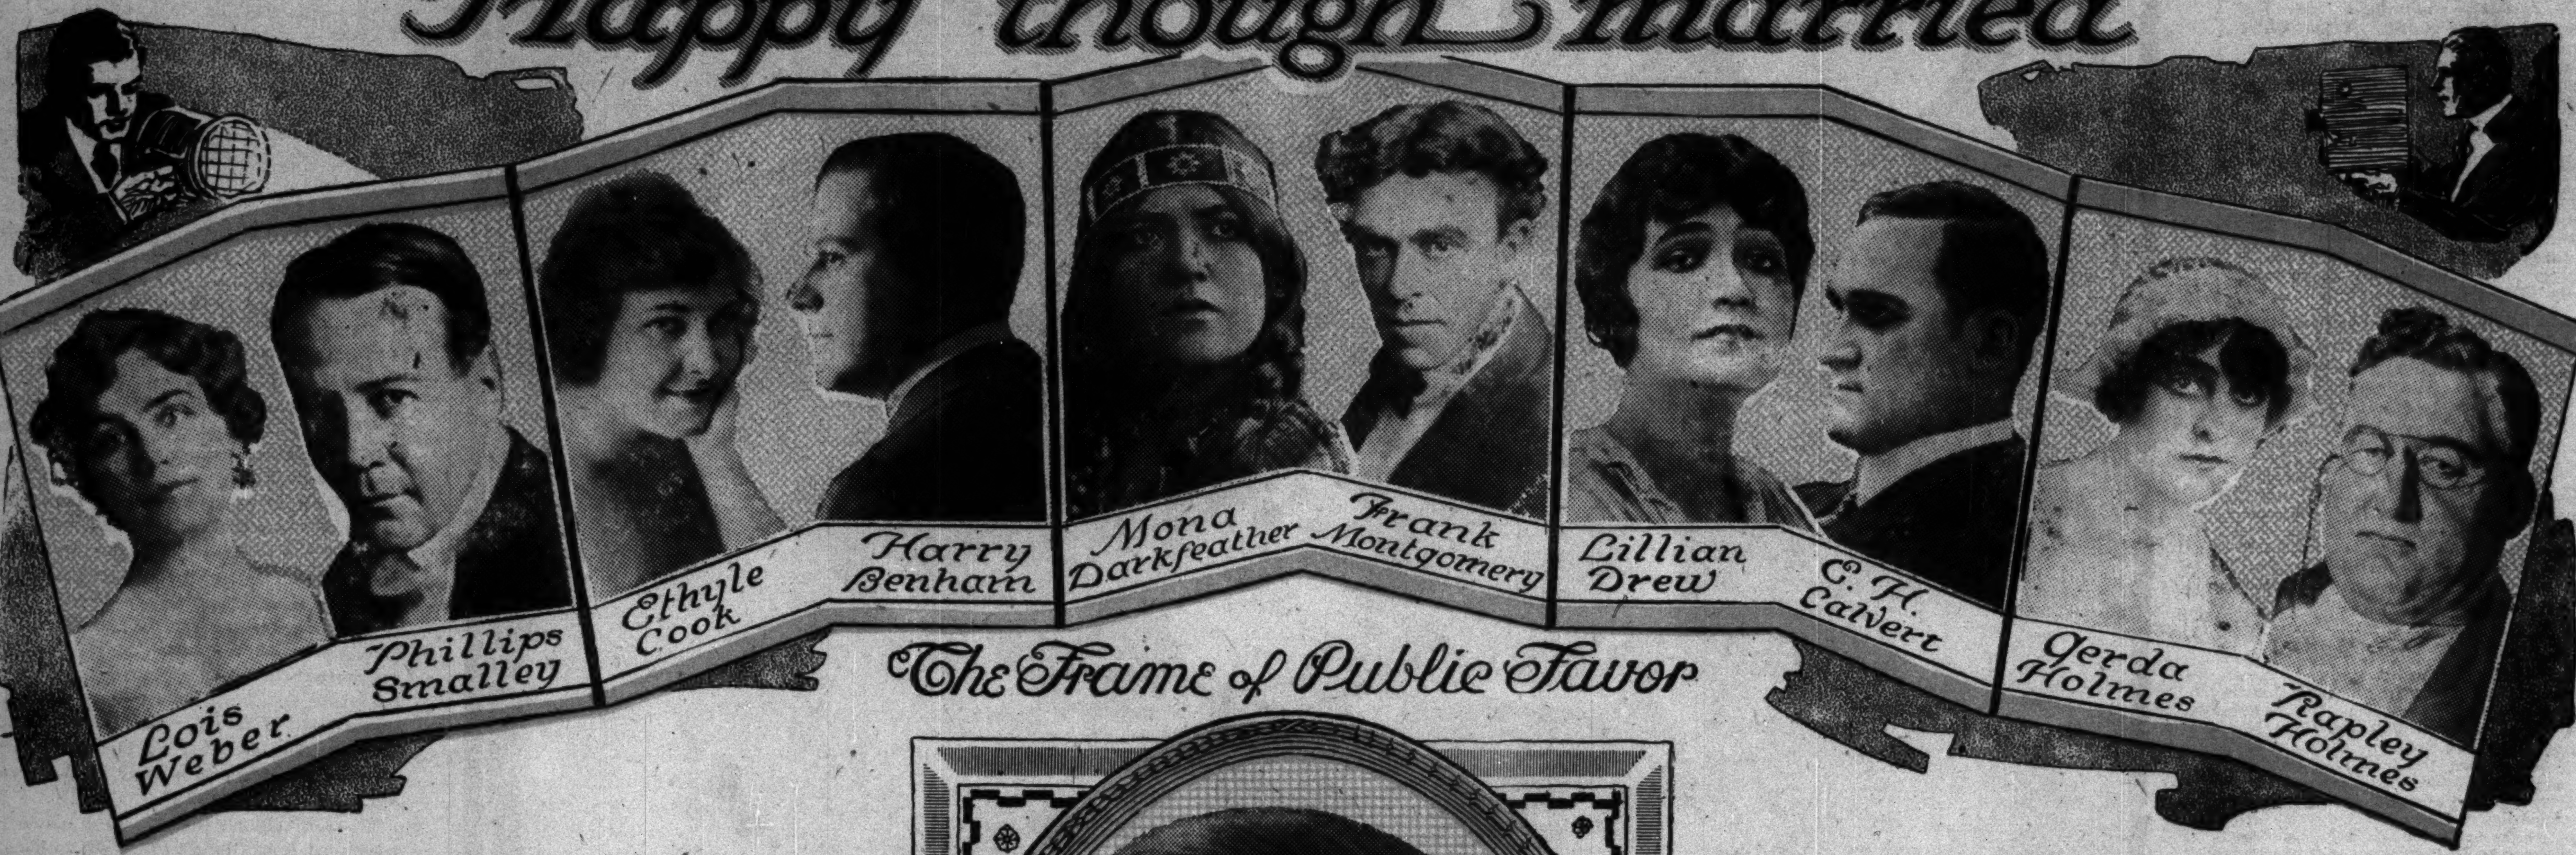
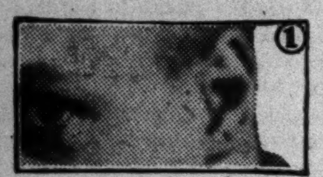
Happy though married



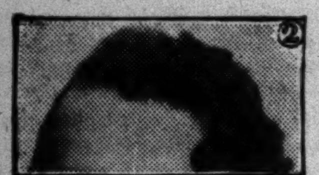
Guess'm—Gwan'n Guess'm!

You're not the ardent fan you think you are if, without the help of the "key" obligingly printed by the obliging editor of this department down below, you're not able to give the names of the movie folk here "featured." Go ahead and look below if you want to—but that's no way to do!



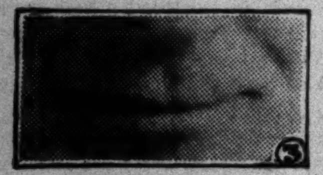
ROMANTIC HERO (1).

Here's an eye and piece of shoulder;
Never did man make love bolder.



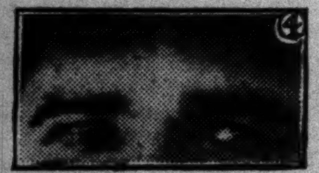
TRAGEDIAN (2).

Look at this brow and tell us—do!
The owner's name. It's up to you.



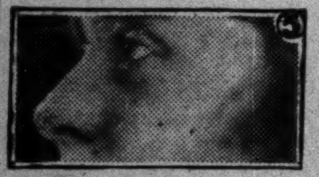
COMEDIAN (3).

Mouth whose whimsies we think funny
Makes us laugh—and so earns money.



ADVENTUROUS ROLES (4).

Whose are the eyebrows, beetling—low?
We love the owner and should know.



INGENUE (5).

The eyes so blue of this fair face have surely not an equal.
If truth be known—should we lose her, we'd never have a sequel.

Vote for the Picture of Your Favorite Player.

Dorothy Davenport received the highest number of votes last week. Her picture, therefore, will appear in The Frame of Public Favor next Sunday. Of the other players voted upon the following six are the leaders: J. Warren Kerrigan, Grace Cunard, Mary Fuller, Billie Burke, Ella Hall, and Vivian Martin.

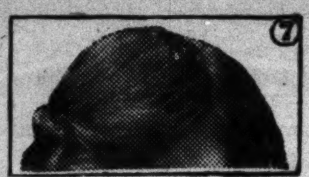
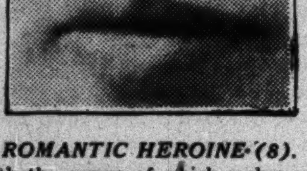
ADVENTURESS (6).

The lady has a kind of nose that's always scenting trouble.
Of incense, too, she likes to sniff—Ah, no! she has no double.



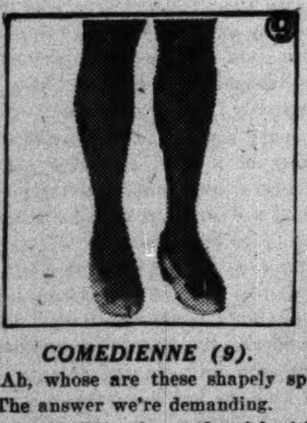
TRAGEDIENNE (7).

Forehead broad—hair parted sweetly—you know the lady well.
She has a charm of presence that always casts a spell.



ROMANTIC HEROINE (8).

A mouth the curves of which makes us with curious feelings yearn.
In other words—whose lips are these? The answer we would learn.



COMEDIENNE (9).

Legs! Ah, whose are these shapely sprouts? The answer we're demanding.
For we should like to know the girl with such good understanding.

VOICE OF THE FAN.

TO MARIN SAIS.

Ah! Would that I were Stingaree,
That bad bushwhacker who could be
So fascinating;
Sweet Ethel Porter once adored him,
And still her heart of hearts leans toward him,
A-palpitating.

O, Ethel Porter, as you're played
By that bewitching actress maid,
Fair Marin Sais;
To me you seem like some bright star,
And like a queen, above me far,
Perched on a dais.

Patrick O'Malley

PATRICK O'MALLEY of the Edison company practically rode himself into screen fame, for when, in "In His Father's Footsteps" he dashed into view on horseback, eager fans nudged each other and asked, "Who is he?" He was Mr. O'Malley an' yer welcome and he's been right there attracting attention ever since. Born in Forrest City, Pa., in 1890, Mr. O'Malley was ever a dare-divil of a lad and did a tight rope stunt on the stage when only 8 years of age. Later, off and on, he worked as an actor. A couple of years ago he went to pictures and has been working in them since, having worked with the International, Gene Gauntier, Kalem, and Edison companies. In appearance Mr. O'Malley is 5 feet 11 inches tall, weighs 167 pounds, and has dark brown hair and blue eyes. Is he married? Well, listen:

"My hobby?" he said in answer to a question, "is—well, I'll tell you—the best little woman in the whole, wide world—my wife!"

THE CASE OF PARIS GREEN.

Nutty Novel.

BY GORDON SEAGROVE.

Chapter 4.

The weather man had promised snow, hail, and three northwest gales, so the day dawned bright and clear. Paris performed a simple toilet requiring a mere two hours. It was to be her last day—in the great scene of "Beef for the Bengals," instead of escaping from the tiger's clutches, she would calmly submit to being torn to pieces.

She ordered a simple breakfast of roast cucumbers, filet of bana, oyster shortcake, and French fried strawberries, but somehow the delicacies did not please her. She was thinking of the great beyond to which she was going following her unhappy marriage venture.

She thought of the farm and the happy times she had had doing the spring plowing. Her childhood days came back to her. She remembered the circus and how she had made friends with one of the baby tigers. She remembered how she had let him eat her hat, and how her dear old father had beat her for it. She smiled happily.

. . . .

The great scene was on. Paris was in the den of wild beasts. The cameras were clicking. The beasts advanced. Paris saw them. They came on apace.

"So this is Paris!" they roared.

The leader of the pack sprang! This was the girl's cue to leap to safety, but she stood there—yes, yes, she stood there waiting for death to claim her—yes, yes, for death to claim her.

The beast was upon her. The director screamed. They expected to see her torn to bits. But she was not.

For the beast was Juju, the baby tiger whom Paris had befriended years ago at the circus, now grown to manhood.

MAE TINEE'S ANSWERS TO MOVIE FANS

"ASK ME! ASK ME!"

HAZEL M. H.: I think Ruth Stonehouse will probably answer your letter if you will address her, care of the Universal company, Universal City, Cal., inclosing stamped, self-addressed envelope for reply. Thank you.

PADDED CELL NO. 1

JESSIE: Am I Mrs. F. X. Bushman? Well, you know, Mr. Bushman says he is not married. (Ye gods; wait till he sees this!)

J. W.: I have an article on the "doubling" process which will, I think, explain just what you want to know. Send a stamped, self-addressed envelope for it.

ELEANOR: I was mighty tickled to get your letter, even though you are a bad child, and wrote to me during school hours. Tut! Tut! Naughty! Naughty! I can't find it in my heart to scold you, however I've done wusser'n that. Norma Talmadge has gone to the Griffith-Triangle company, Los Angeles, Cal. Yes, little Billie Jacobs is adorable. I love him, too. Did I ever feel silly? My child! My child! Ask those who know me!

DISAPPOINTED: Didem finkem busem! Bless it's little heart! It's not right!

CORINNE B.: I am afraid if you want all the information I have on Harold Lockwood you will have to send a stamped, self-addressed envelope. You see, I know so much about him! Billie Burke is certainly a darling; more girls than you are "wild" about her in "Gloria's Romance."

SLIM: The cast of "The Heart of Paula" is as follows: Paula Figueroa, Lenore Ulrich; Claire Pachmann, Velma Lefler; Stephen Pachmann, Jack Livingstone; Bruce McLean, Forrest Stanley; Emiliano Pacheco, Howard Davies; Mr. Adams, Herbert Standing. Y'wekkum.

MOVIE FRIEND: I like that word "friend." Thank you for being one. Marguerite Clark was born in 1882. She is with the Famous Players company, 213-27 West Twenty-sixth street, New York. Billie Burke is married to Florenz Ziegfeld. No, her husband is not in pictures. He is a manager.

M. H.: Maurice Costello is still with the Vitagraph company. Creighton Hale's picture appeared in "The Frame of Public Favor" on the 17th of October, 1915. Earl Williams is in his 30's. Oh! I don't know as I'd call him "cute." I think he's pretty nice, though. Dustin Farnum is with the Pallas Pictures company, 205 N. Occidental blvd., Los Angeles, Cal. Jack Pickford is 19 years old. He is not married. Vurr' wekkum.

F. L.: Thank you vurr' vurr' much for your appreciative little note. It made me feel "all happy" as the children say.

"WEE-UNS": Dorothy Davenport is the wife of Wallace Reid. He is in his 20's. If you will write to Mr. Reid care of the Triangle company, Los Angeles, Cal., sending 25 cents in stamps, I am quite sure he will send you his picture. I wish you luck.

DIPPY FAN: Since the management of the studio absolutely does not allow visitors, I certainly know of no way in which you can get a "peek in." Of course, I suppose there is a possibility of your getting a chance to look into the building, but if you do, do not be surprised if the manly fist of the director does things to your oliveroptics.

Gloria's Romance by Mr. and Mrs. Rupert Hughes

Herewith is presented the fifth installment of the great George Kleine-Tribune photoplay serial, "Gloria's Romance," written by Mr. and Mrs. Rupert Hughes as the especial vehicle for America's most charming actress of romance, Miss Billie Burke. For her services as actress in the title role of the serial Miss Burke receives $4,000 a week. "Gloria's Romance" is a photoplay of rare situations and wonderful photography. As a story it has the inimitably brilliant style that characterizes the work of Rupert Hughes. See the pictures at the nearest theater showing them and read the story here. Watch for it every Sunday. The pictures will be shown in the leading theaters. A new episode is released every Monday.

SYNOPSIS.

Sixteen years old, with Royce, a young doctor, ready to fall in love with her, the gay life of Palm Beach all around her and she forbidden to participate in it by her stern millionaire papa—that's Gloria. She kicks over the traces one night, steals her brother's car to prevent him riding with Lois Freeman, who she thinks is deceiving him, wrecks it, and finds herself lost in the everglades. Her father posts $5,000 reward. Freneau, a broker, needs money. He starts search. So does Royce. Freneau finds Gloria in the Seminole village, courted by Katacalani, a brave. The brave drives him off. A moment later Royce appears. He fights Katacalani—beats him. While Royce fights, Freneau sneaks in and carries Gloria back to her father and accepts the reward and all the praise. Royce cannot denounce him as he has no witnesses. Freneau needing his money and seeing his chance, proposes and is accepted. Gloria's father makes both promise to wait five years before marrying. Royce disappears. Gloria goes to school, her brother, David, marries Lois Freeman, and Freneau flirts with married women, getting tips on stock market that finally make him the partner of Mulry, the successful broker. Just before the five years are up he again meets Lois Freeman Stafford and has an affair with her to the ruin of his business. When Gloria gets out he does not recognize her. Mulry suggests he marry her and get her money. Freneau, after the slight of not recognizing her, again gets in to Gloria's good graces. This infuriates Lois, her sister in law, also Royce. Royce and Lois discover Freneau and Gloria in an intimate tete a tete at Gloria's debutante party. Thenceforth they are allies.

CHAPTER XXI.

THE GATHERING STORM.

"DAUGHTERS are dangerous charges, Pierpont," said Judge Freeman. The two elderly men stood watching the dance which was in full swing at the coming out party of Gloria Stafford. The men were related to each other by marriage—the marriage of Stafford's son David and Freeman's daughter Lois—whatever relations that made them.

Pierpont Stafford nodded a worried assent to the judge's statement and, turning his eyes reluctantly from the grace and charm of his own girl, Gloria, dancing with an almost lyric poetry of motion, enfolded in the arms of Richard Freneau, Pierpont looked for Judge Freeman's girl, Lois, to find a specific cause for the judge's doleful remark. What he saw puzzled him considerably. He saw Lois, not dancing, but watching Gloria and Freneau. There was a look of unmistakable jealousy and helpless rage on her face. He saw his son David speak to her and put his hand on her arm, only to have her shake him off and move away into the crowd.

Pierpont felt suddenly a great fear for his son's honor, and a gnawing ache at his heart for Lois' father, who stood beside him. But it was far too delicate a situation for the two men to discuss—yet.

'Children are hostages to fortune, as somebody said." Pierpont murmured, putting his hand on the other man's arm. "After all, how little it is we can really save them from!"

Gloria was being watched jealously by yet another Dr. Royce, who, with the mixed feelings of a lover and an older guardian, felt cut to the quick as she passed directly in front of him in Freneau's embrace. He could see the look of perfect joy in her glorious eyes, and there was rapture in the whole happy swing of her youthful body. Anger at Freneau's unworthiness of this pure being almost choked him. When another man took Gloria away from Freneau for the last half of the dance, and Freneau reluctantly walked away, Royce asked for a word with him, moving toward the library, where they could be alone. Freneau followed with uneasy bravado. Once safe from observation, Dr. Royce let his rage break forth.

"You contemptible fortune hunter! Five years ago I warned you to keep away from Gloria. You lied to her then and your life is still one long lie."

Freneau's face blanched with fury, and he raised his arm to strike Royce, but before the calm contempt in his eyes he changed his mind. He decided to forego the blow for the present, and laughed as bravely as he could. Royce pursued him with an alarming threat.

"What if I tell her of your affair with a certain married woman?"

Freneau gave a surprised start, attempted to speak, changed his mind again. He was guilty of too much to risk a challenge. Shrugging his shoulders, he moved sullenly off and out of the room.

Royce smiled to himself. "It was a bluff, but it worked." He had caught a glimpse of Lois' jealousy and a faint suspicion had risen in his mind. Now he wondered if it were confirmed.

Royce walked after Freneau and had the satisfaction of seeing him depart without bidding good-by to Gloria.

Royce thought he had won a signal victory. He would have taken little pleasure in it had he known that Freneau left so obediently because Gloria had already granted him a whole afternoon to be spent in her company alone on the following day.

As he descended the outer steps of the Stafford home a footman signaled his car to pull into the driveway. A tramp who had been loitering on the street watching the gorgeous crowd of guests caught sight of Freneau and seemed to go mad with rage. He rushed forward, shouting accusations. Freneau struck out viciously with his walking stick. The tramp fell to the ground, while Freneau, leaping into his limousine, motioned his chauffeur to make haste. He leaned out of his car as it turned and smiled to see the tramp pick himself up awkwardly and run after him, rushing wildly through the traffic of Riverside drive.

As Freneau's car turned into a side street the tramp, still in pursuit, was caught by an oncoming automobile and knocked sidewise. One of the rear wheels passed over his legs. The car was stopped instantly and the occupants picked him up to hurry him to a hospital.

Freneau sat back in a daze at the quick tragedy. He could not tell how badly the man was hurt nor how much he could depend on his own release from danger in that quarter. It ruffled him considerably to encounter another relic of his adventurous past just as he was about to win a wonderful young wife for himself; a relic who had a just grievance and might well ruin him by exposure. To get out of his entanglement with Lois was delicate matter enough for him to handle without this new ghost. Truly, Freneau brooded, a brave, pleasure loving free lance like himself should have a wider field to move about in. The smallness of this world was cramping his style!

Arriving at his own apartment he threw his overcoat at his valet and marched gloomily into the living room, slamming the door behind him. If only Trask would die! But he could not count on such luck. Trask would probably escape with a few bruises and an added grudge and be out again in a few days to pick up the trail.

A vision came to Freneau's mind of Nell Trask, as he had last seen her, when he left her beside a stream near a mining camp in the south whither he had gone to investigate a stock proposition.

Poor fool; Nell had pleaded so unreasonably that he should marry her and save her. When he refused she had thrown herself down on the bank in wild abandonment to her grief. As he mounted his horse he saw the girl's father pick her up and hold her in his arms while apparently she sobbed forth her confession. A look of such savage ferocity came over Trask's face that Freneau dug spurs into his horse. On reaching the town he had boarded a train at once, leaving his few belongings behind him. For that look on Trask's face surely meant death for him if he were overtaken. And now at last he was all but overtaken.

Soon, however, Freneau broke from his reverie, dismissed it as an unpleasant memory, smiled at himself for giving it any place in his thoughts, and turned his mind to Gloria—the bewitching girl-woman to whom on the morrow he would tender his heart and hand, for all that they might be worth.

Meanwhile Gloria herself, tired beyond words, her pretty right hand stiff from the endless shaking of other hands at her reception, her tiny feet weary of their satin slippers and her ears tingling still with the buzz of compliments poured into them, was ecstatic as a full fledged birdling after its first long flight.

Reaching her own room she screamed lustily to Burroughs, her English maid, to run a hot bath for her and for goodness' sake to get her out of her wreck of a dress. As Burroughs fluttered between the two tasks Gloria hummed the "Aloha Oe" that had been played in waltz time for her last heavenly dance with Freneau. She picked a rose from her dressing table and went through the ritual of "He loves me, he loves me not," down almost to the last petal. But finding that it would come out on the tragic "not," she gasped, "How silly!" threw the rose away, casting a shy little smile at herself in the mirror.

Burroughs, having taken the woefully wilted and shredded tulle frock from her, wrapped her young mistress in a dressing gown. And Gloria went, still humming, to her bath.

In the midst of the splashing, while Burroughs was straightening the dressing room, she heard: "O Burroughs, do you think my new fur lined driving coat is very good on me?"

"Yes, miss. I do, indeed," answered Burroughs, surprised at the apparent irrelevance of the question.

"And, Burroughs!"

"Yes, miss?"

"What warm afternoon dress have I that I look awfully nice in?"

"Why, the brown velvet from Lucile, miss; you do look a perfect little doll in that, miss."

Another splash in the tub and a ripple of laughter.

"Thank you, Burroughs—you see, I'm driving the pony sleigh out in the country tomorrow afternoon."

"Yes, miss?"

"And I'm not driving out alone, Burroughs."

"No, miss?"

After this Gloria was silent.

She hopped hurriedly into bed from her bath and ate her crackers and milk like a good child, smiling every now and then at her own thoughts. Then she told Burroughs to put out the lights and not allow her to be disturbed.

"You see, Burroughs, I'm a society queen now, and I have to get my beauty sleep. Good night."

"Quite so, miss, and good night, miss," said Burroughs, as she tiptoed toward the door.

CHAPTER XXII.

On the following day, all arrangements having been made by telephone to the Stafford country place, Gloria took Burroughs with her and motored out. They were met by a glowing and enthusiastic Freneau at the railroad station. Gloria took him on to her warm weather home, which managed to keep a majestic appearance in its mantle of snow.

As she stopped to pet the noses of the ponies Freneau lost for a moment his confidence in his own power to win this small young beauty enveloped in a great coat, which made her seem smaller still, her eyes beaming, her cheeks flushed with the cold, her delicate pink blond curls escaping from the little fur trimmed hat.

With this palatial background, among the obsequious attendants, she stood, more than ever for him, the embodiment of power, youth, beauty, wealth. What had he to offer in exchange for that worldly trinity? Spoiled by women as he was he felt that however sincerely he wanted this slip of a girl—wanted her more than he had ever wanted any one else in his life—she might elude him.

Gloria turned to him with a bright smile, and seeing the look of adoration in his eyes, blushed an even deeper rose than she had been wearing.

"I think we had better start at once if we are to get our sleigh ride," she said. "The days are so short now; we must make the most of this stingy sunlight."

"Right!" Freneau answered eagerly, as he helped her into the sleigh.

The ponies were champing at the bits and jingling the bells and waving the pom-poms on their heads with every impatient movement. Gloria stepped into the driver's seat (she was going to drive them herself, wise girl!) and Freneau snatched the sable robe from the hands of a groom, saw that her little feet were in place on the foot warmer, and proceeded to wrap her snugly in. (How nicely he did things of that sort, she thought.)

"We will be back in a couple of hours; probably stop somewhere for tea," Gloria called to Burroughs as they passed the lodge door. She felt the thrill of being a runaway once more, and she was glad that her father was not present to thrust a chaperon upon them.

Out into the road and off they went, youth, health, and joy of life in their veins; love in their hearts. The ponies pranced and cavorted, somewhat too strenuously, Freneau feared, until he realized how skillful Gloria's hands were in managing them. On they glided merrily, chatting of the big nothings of young love, Gloria pointing out paths and places of interest, Dick Freneau seeing them only as they were mirrored in her eyes, since he could not bear to turn away from her lest he lose one fleeting expression on her face.

After several miles of up hill and down dale, Gloria turned her ponies off the main road into one less used.

"I'm taking you to the dearest old fashioned farm house, where we can have tea and the nummiest apple butter you ever tasted. Shall you like it?"

"I shall like anything and everything in this world, so long as I have it with you," Freneau breathed earnestly.

"Then that's all right," chirruped Gloria, happily. "You shall most certainly have this tea with me, and I'm famished."

When they reached the farm house, which called itself an inn, the plump landlady greeted Gloria with pleased recognition and ushered them into the parlor, saying that she would hasten with their tea and bring the table to them there by the fire. Freneau helped Gloria out of her great coat—how well he took off a coat, she thought. She emerged like a golden brown butterfly in a velvet gown.

The blazing logs in the deep fireplace gilded the beauty of a truly charming old room. Gloria fingered the quaint pewter pieces on the mantel and Freneau waited restlessly for Mrs. Bailey to hurry in with the tea things and hurry away. Soon they were left alone, seated opposite each other, the little tea table between. Gloria learned his sugar. She became suddenly timid and embarrassed. It did seem very intimate and daring. It was the first time she had ever asked a man about his sugar all alone with him!

Dick perceived her shyness and divined the cause at once. He must speak now. He would never have a better chance, he thought. Putting down his cup, he reached across the table for her hand.

"Gloria, dear little Gloria," he sighed, "my five years of probation are up. I've waited patiently and always hopefully. Mayn't I have my reward now? Please say that you will marry be quickly and put me out of my misery, will you?"

Gloria could not answer. She hung her pretty head and wriggled back a little further into the grandfather's chair. Perhaps she did not want to end the luxury of keeping him anxious with a too immediate yes. He would not dally. He picked up the little table that stood between them and putting it aside dropped on one knee before her, like the true artist in love that he was. He clasped his arms about her and she closed her eyes and gave him her lips.

They heard the untimely hostess approaching and he sat back in his chair, twirling his mustache, while Gloria tried to look as if nothing had happened. Nothing had happened except a short flight to heaven.

CHAPTER XXIII.

Pierpont Stafford was not unprepared for the "Will you let me marry your daughter" speech that Richard Freneau made to him. He had given his own word five years before that if Freneau and Gloria found themselves in the same frame of mind at this date he would raise no further objections. He gave up the fight now, and took his defeat like the true sportsman he was, graciously concealing his own sad heart.

The radiance of his child and the evident sincerity of Freneau almost repaid him; at least they made him hopeful for her happiness. One stipulation only he insisted upon, that the engagement should not be made public at once. He knew that engagements were not necessarily certain to end in marriage, and he wanted to test Freneau a little further. He insisted upon guarding his daughter's name to that extent. If anything went wrong with them they should not have taken the great American public into the secret. Freneau agreed to this, the more readily since it would give him the more time to propitiate and get rid of Lois. And old Trask might have to be given his quietus in one way or another.

While Freneau and her father held the council of war Gloria had gone out to the hall to wait its outcome. There Freneau found her huddled up on the lower step, hugging herself as if she were cold. He rushed to take her in his arms for a kiss. She battled with him with mock resistance, before she ran up the steps to play Juliet to his Romeo. Then, throwing kisses, they parted.

When she reached her room Gloria found herself shivering with a violent chill that all the warmth of her heart could not subdue. Burroughs was instantly alarmed. She summoned Gloria's father, who was even more alarmed. He made her go to bed at once, ordered her covered with many blankets, and had hot water bottles filled.

The chill did not abate. In a panic he telephoned from Gloria's own room to his old family physician, Dr. Wakefield, and was fortunate enough to reach him and be assured of his immediate attendance. Dr. Wakefield was a fussy medical man of the very old school. He had taken good care of the Stafford family, but latterly he had let science outrun him. Still he recognized pneumonia without difficulty. He whispered the dreadful word to Stafford and ordered in two trained nurses and no end of medicines.

Pierpont Stafford was frantic with anxiety. He telephoned for Gloria's brother and for Aunt Hortensia. Burroughs told them of the stolen sleigh ride and Freneau became less popular with the Staffords, father and son, than ever before.

Days and nights of harrowing fear dragged over that household. Wealth had not dulled affection, nor could it seem to bribe death. The fever line mounted on the nurse's chart like a mountain side, and Gloria grew weaker and weaker, except in her deliriums, when she seemed to be inhabited by demons of ferocious strength.

At length David felt that Dr. Wakefield had been given all the time to experiment with Gloria's life that could be afforded. He was for calling in a young man of the newest school of medical art. He called for Dr. Royce. Royce came with no hesitation over medical ethics or courtesies. Gloria was more than a patient to him, and old Wakefield was less than a doctor in his eyes, after he had questioned the Staffords as to the manner of Dr. Wakefield's treatment. Things were, as he feared, all wrong. It was life or death. Dr. Wakefield could not cope with the disease. He must be dispossessed as politely as possible.

Dr. Wakefield, he learned, was in the sickroom above. Royce would not mince matters or wait on professional etiquette. He felt the eagerness of a lover in coming once more to the rescue of his idolized Gloria.

He ran up the stairs and walked into the room. He hardly knew his Gloria when he saw her. She was in the throes of a wild delirium. She imagined herself once more among the Seminoles who had held her in bondage when she ran away in Florida five years before.

In her tormenting fancy she was again dressed as a squaw and set to the task of gathering firewood and subjected to the worse task of enduring the old squaw's hatred and the young chief's love. She begged him to kill her rather than marry her and she fought with all her fury, seizing Wakefield's white hair with one hand and the nurse's black locks with the other.

There was no quieting her outcries. "Take me home; my father is rich! He will make you rich! O they don't believe me! They don't believe me! Help! Help!" Then she smiled and cried, "Dick, Dick, it's you! You'll save me! Blessed, beloved Dick! O I'm so glad, so glad you found me!"

Then the frenzy left her and she sank back exhausted, but content. Dr. Royce realized that he had two antagonists now to fight, Death and Richard Freneau, both of them trying to steal from him the girl of his soul.

Death was the first to fight. Royce was too desperate to treat Dr. Wakefield with much formality. He asked a few questions which roused the ire of the old physician. He examined the patient, threw off the smothering blankets and exclaimed, "Fresh air is the best and only treatment for pneumonia." He flung up the window, shoved Gloria's bed against it, and let the cold air from the river sweep into the room and into her tormented lungs.

Almost at once her breathing became less labored. Dr. Wakefield left in as dignified a rage as he could manage. Royce threw away all the Wakefield medicines and gave the nurse a new set of instructions. The nurse at least whom Dr. Wakefield had prescribed seemed a capable one. Royce welcomed her as a valuable ally in the grewsome fight. He arranged to stay all night, and allayed poor old Stafford's fears as best he could. But his own head was near to breaking with terror for the safety of Gloria's sweet life—and for her happiness if she lived.

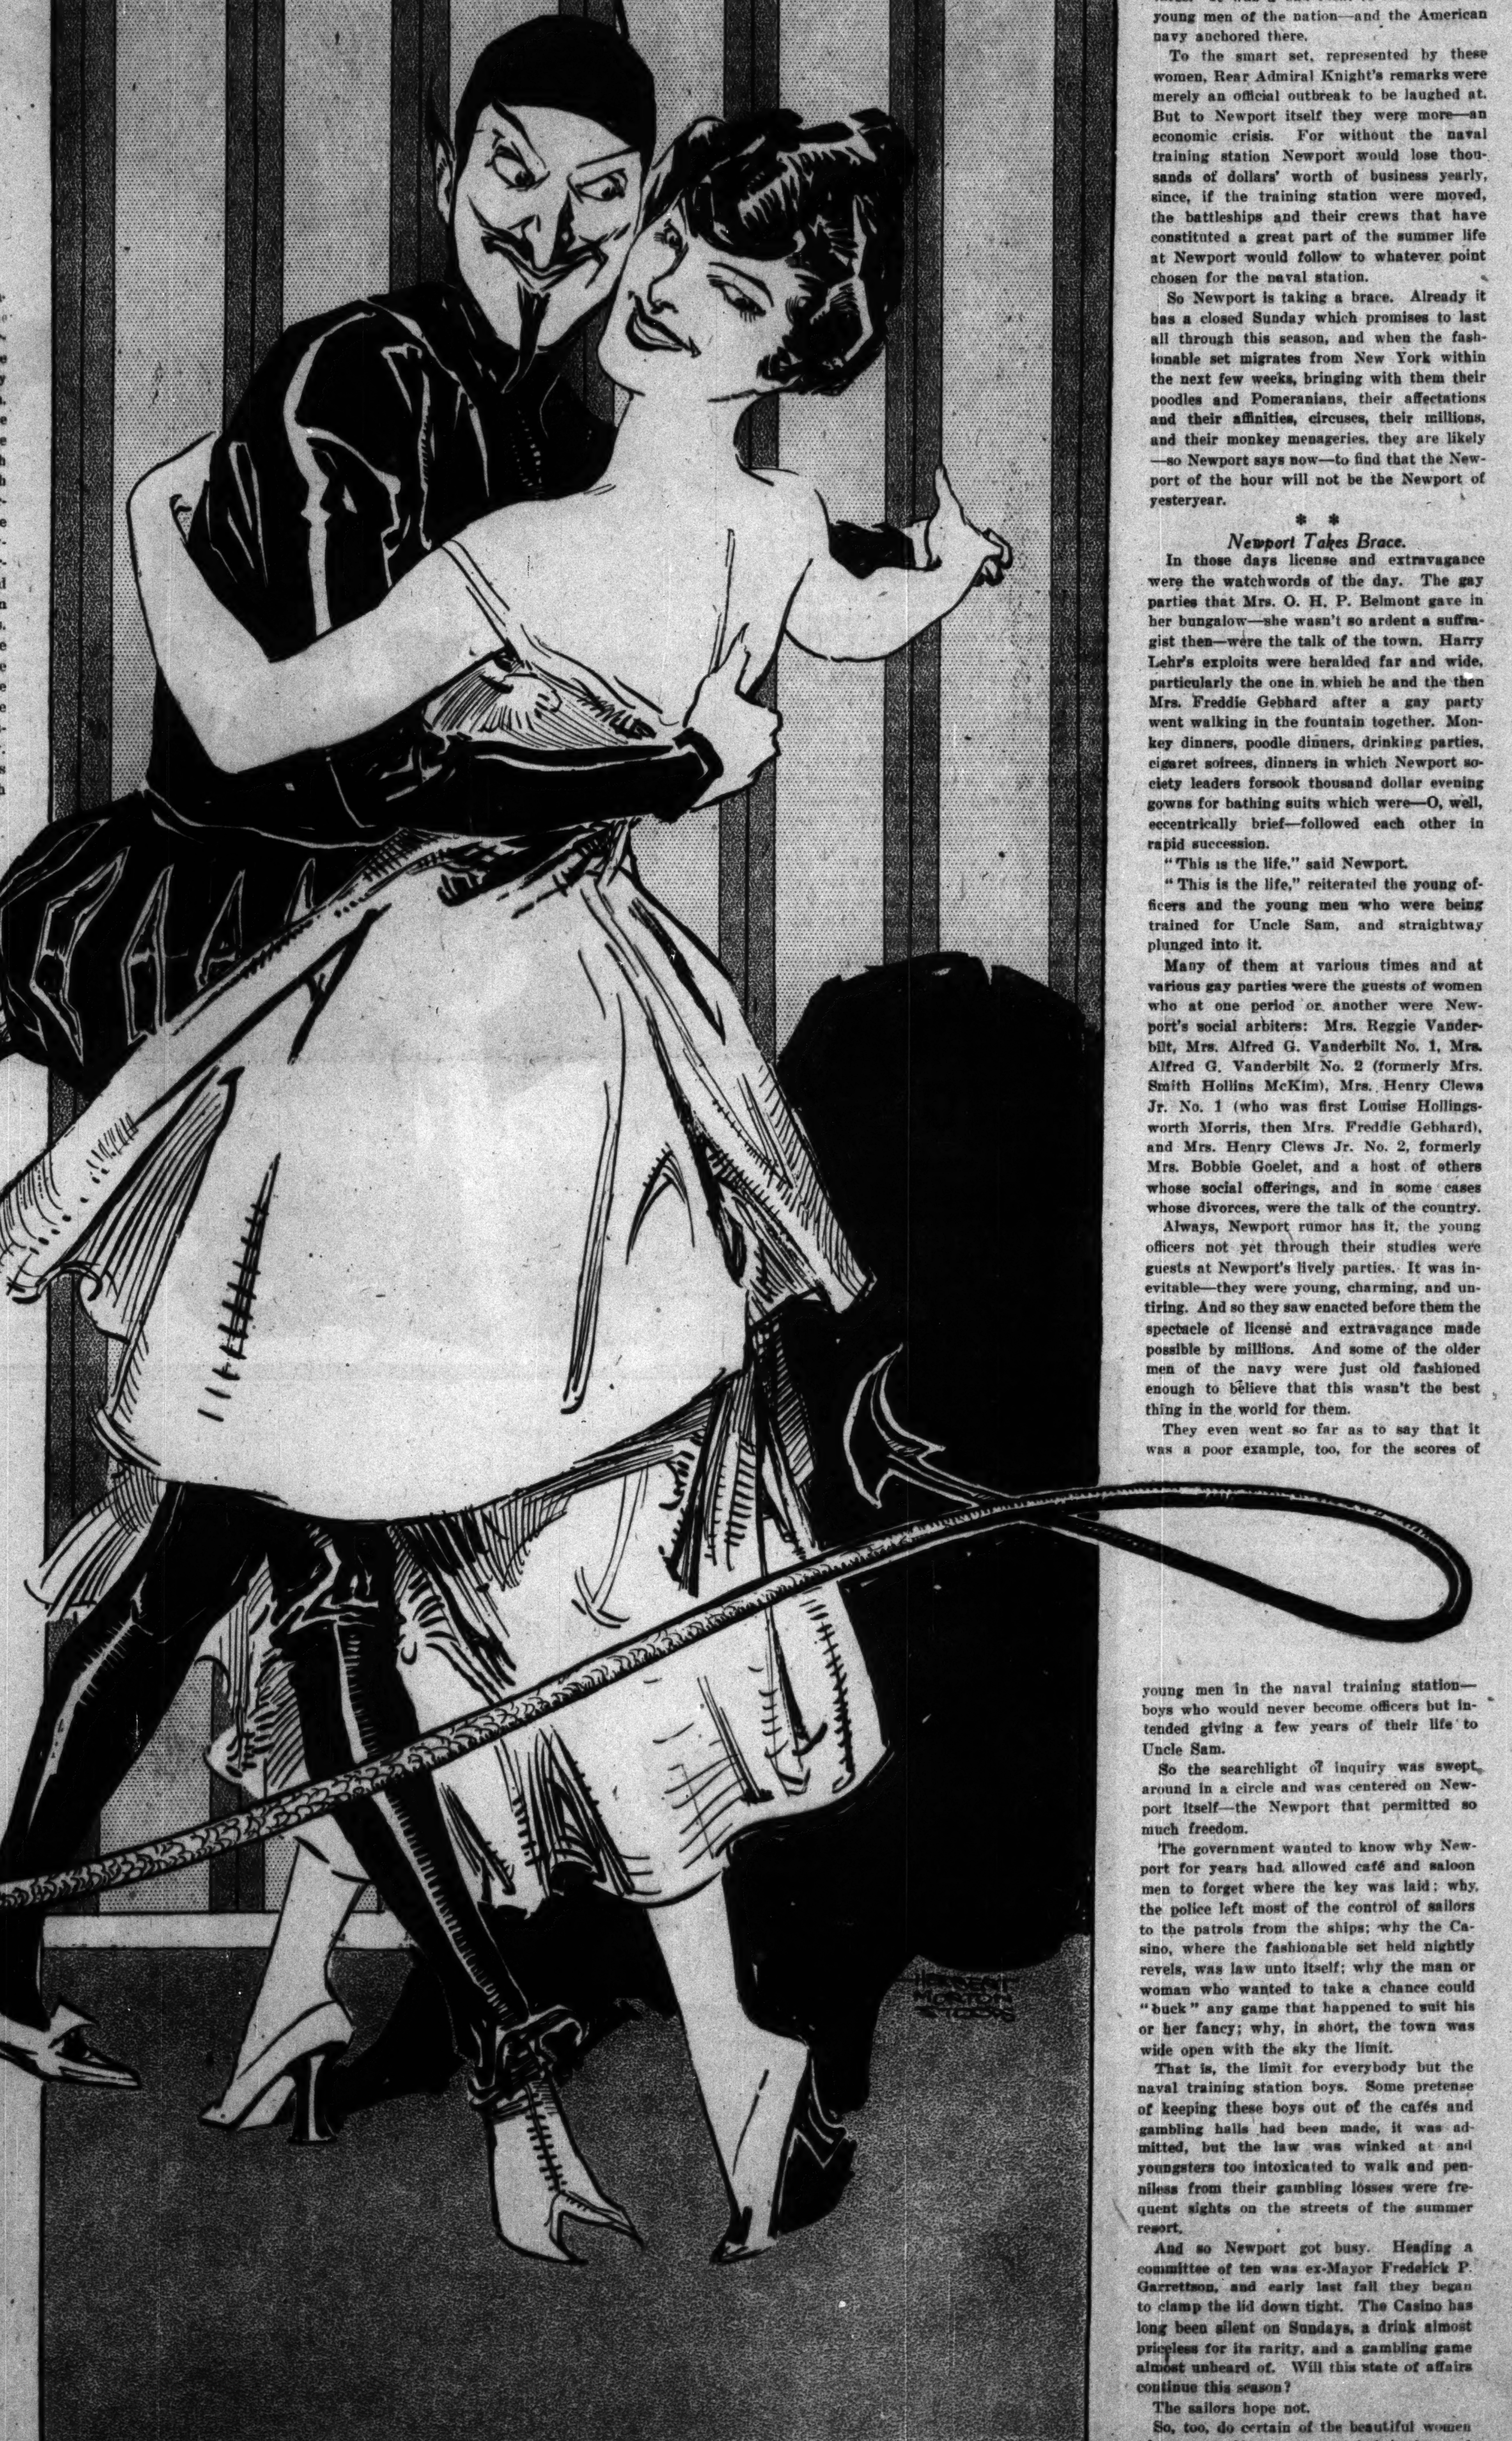
NAUGHTY, NAUGHTY NEWPORT

It Was No Example At All for Young Men Who Were Studying to Be Able Seamen and Others Who Aimed to Be Admirals. An Old Salt Said So Himself, and So They're Trying To Change Newport.



By GORDON SEAGROVE.

NAUGHTY, naughty Newport!

Wicked, sinful, extravagant it always has been, but until lately nobody has paid much attention except to say, "O, well, that's Newport," which was the equivalent of saying that if the millionaires and society women who have always made Newport the scene of their idle and startling triumphs wanted to spend their money in the ways they pleased it was no one else's business.

But now the United States government has paid attention—official attention—and the sum and substance of Uncle Sam's opinion is:

Newport is too naughty for the navy.

It may be all right for the ordinary layman, the casual looker on, the visiting tourist, to watch society's steps at Newport, to join in the heavy drinking at the resorts, to observe the season's earliest debutante smoking expensive monogrammed cigarets, to listen to the clink of the dollars at the gaming tables, but it is not for young men taking a post-graduate course in the war college which turns out officers, nor for younger men of the naval training station.

And Rear Admiral Austin W. Knight, head of the war college and general supervisor of things military at Newport, started something when he told the citizens of the fair, frail, and frivolous community just that.

And he started something more when, after a seething diatribe against the smart set's follies in which he castigated some of Newport's most noted leaders and the resident population of Newport for allowing the same follies to go unreproved, he asserted that if Newport didn't take a brace the naval training station would in all likelihood be removed to other parts; far distant from millionaire married women's smiles, the tinkle of the cocktail glass, the extravagance of summer entertainments, and the lure of the gaming table.

The doughty old seaman's remarks did two things:

Indicted on Four Counts.

They jolted the summer set of Newport, various beautiful women to whom the one ambition of life was to have a good time and spend a lot of money in getting it, as it had not been jolted for many a long day. And they jolted Newport's all year residents into realization that something must be done to stop the pace that kills.

As is known, smart society offends morals and super-refined taste in four particulars. Women, as is further known, are the backbone of smart society. By sheer force of numbers, if by no other reason, they predominate at a ratio of three to one. They are said to direct and maintain the moral tone of their group. This is true to such an extent that fashionable ministers in and round Newport have publicly been asking certain questions regarding them. At the same time, these same ministers have furnished the answers.

They oratorically proclaim: Do society women smoke? Do society women drink? Do society women swear? Do society women gamble? Are society women extravagant? They returned the uniform reply, "Yes."

To take up the first point first: There was a big affair given in Newport last season, with three cozy smoking rooms provided "for the men to retire to. They get so tired of women, poor dears?" Who do you suppose were the chief beneficiaries of this thoughtfulness? The women. The distressed hostess at one time counted eleven of them in a room made to accommodate eight souls. With them, enjoying their edged entertainment, were four of the young officers of the fleet. As regards the second question. Foreigners say, you know, that Americans have no mirth. They mention that the only gayety we ever show is the gayety of intoxication. We only forget Wall street when we have a bottle of champagne at our side. There have been many parties at Newport which would corroborate this point. The one which I attended was given by Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt at Beauliue, when a whole theatrical company was taken up to Newport to provide one-half hour of the entertainment. This little number was preceded by some poses of the fashionable women in millions of dollars' worth of fancy clothes. For the setting of the scene they had the walls draped with oriental rugs to the value of over a million of dollars. It was the dreariest entertainment I ever saw—in the early part of the evening. I was not in costume and I watched it from the balcony. Eleanor Sears—I scarcely knew her, she was so solemn looking. She went through with her part in the pageant like a funeral. Mrs. Reginald Vanderbilt never smiled. Mrs. Bobbie Goelet, who is now Mrs. Henry Clews Jr., looked like an Irish beauty brooding over her country's sadness. Mrs. Richard Stevens for once was subdued. "They take their pleasures solemnly," said Mr. Smith, the Englishman who in the beginning of the war was the press censor for the British government.

That, I say, was early in the evening. At supper you should have heard the rising tumult of joyous sound. An elation came into the voices. For the second time in the course of the evening I inquired, "Who is that beautiful young woman?" Again came the answer, "It is Eleanor Sears." I did not know her the first time because she was so solemn. I did not recognize her later because she was so gay. Champagne corks to the number of several hundred had popped between the early spectacle of that group of merrymakers and the later one. As a matter of history, that party never ended at all. It just gradually dragged away.

Champagne Corks Popped.

By 4 they were making up small groups to go to Bailey's Beach. By 5:30 they were in the water. At 10 the next morning stragglers were running round the streets of Newport in their gay costumes with the paint of the night on their cheeks. Almost every officer of the navy had been asked to the party, and those who did not succeed in getting there "met up" with the crowd at the beach or joined them after breakfast the next morning and got the moral effect of the smart set's conduct for an example on which to model their own conduct.

Newport women swear? They used to do so in private, but now it is getting to be awfully clever for a debutante to run in an occasional "damn." They do it not only at their own little gatherings but in the presence of men. The United States navy has been treated to the sound of that word from young women's lips. For wherever men are asked at Newport the officers of the navy are included. They are engaging, and besides, and more important than that, they are men. This sex is such a rarity at the summer capital that the members of it are included everywhere.

Are Newport women extravagant? So awfully so that the late Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish issued an edict. She said that no more expensive entertainments should be given there. The example of them was pernicious to those who could not afford such expenditures. It was a bad ideal to set before the young men of the nation—and the American navy anchored there.

To the smart set, represented by these women, Rear Admiral Knight's remarks were merely an official outbreak to be laughed at. But to Newport itself they were more—an economic crisis. For without the naval training station Newport would lose thousands of dollars' worth of business yearly, since, if the training station were moved, the battleships and their crews that have constituted a great part of the summer life at Newport would follow to whatever point chosen for the naval station.

So Newport is taking a brace. Already it has a closed Sunday which promises to last all through this season, and when the fashionable set migrates from New York within the next few weeks, bringing with them their poodles and Pomeranians, their affectations and their affinities, circuses, their millions, and their monkey menageries, they are likely—so Newport says now—to find that the Newport of the hour will not be the Newport of yesteryear.

Newport Takes Brace.

In those days license and extravagance were the watchwords of the day. The gay parties that Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont gave in her bungalow—she wasn't so ardent a suffragist then—were the talk of the town. Harry Lehr's exploits were heralded far and wide, particularly the one in which he and the then Mrs. Freddie Gebhard after a gay party went walking in the fountain together. Monkey dinners, poodle dinners, drinking parties, cigaret soirees, dinners in which Newport society leaders forsook thousand dollar evening gowns for bathing suits which were—O, well, eccentrically brief—followed each other in rapid succession.

"This is the life," said Newport.

"This is the life," reiterated the young officers and the young men who were being trained for Uncle Sam, and straightway plunged into it.

Many of them at various times and at various gay parties were the guests of women who at one period or another were Newport's social arbiters: Mrs. Reggie Vanderbilt, Mrs. Alfred G. Vanderbilt No. 1, Mrs. Alfred G. Vanderbilt No. 2 (formerly Mrs. Smith Hollins McKim), Mrs. Henry Clews Jr. No. 1 (who was first Louise Hollingsworth Morris, then Mrs. Freddie Gebhard), and Mrs. Henry Clews Jr. No. 2, formerly Mrs. Bobbie Goelet, and a host of others whose social offerings, and in some cases whose divorces, were the talk of the country.

Always, Newport rumor has it, the young officers not yet through their studies were guests at Newport's lively parties. It was inevitable—they were young, charming, and untiring. And so they saw enacted before them the spectacle of license and extravagance made possible by millions. And some of the older men of the navy were just old fashioned enough to believe that this wasn't the best thing in the world for them.

They even went so far as to say that it was a poor example, too, for the scores of young men in the naval training station—boys who would never become officers but intended giving a few years of their life to Uncle Sam.

So the searchlight of inquiry was swept around in a circle and was centered on Newport itself—the Newport that permitted so much freedom.

The government wanted to know why Newport for years had allowed café and saloon men to forget where the key was laid; why, the police left most of the control of sailors to the patrols from the ships; why the Casino, where the fashionable set held nightly revels, was law unto itself; why the man or woman who wanted to take a chance could "buck" any game that happened to suit his or her fancy; why, in short, the town was wide open with the sky the limit.

That is, the limit for everybody but the naval training station boys. Some pretense of keeping these boys out of the cafés and gambling halls had been made, it was admitted, but the law was winked at and youngsters too intoxicated to walk and penniless from their gambling losses were frequent sights on the streets of the summer resort.

And so Newport got busy. Heading a committee of ten was ex-Mayor Frederick P. Garrettson, and early last fall they began to clamp the lid down tight. The Casino has long been silent on Sundays, a drink almost priceless for its rarity, and a gambling game almost unheard of. Will this state of affairs continue this season?

The sailors hope not.

So, too, do certain of the beautiful women who come to Newport to spend their time and money in the summer.

For they like Newport naughty.

And since they have the money with which to fight, naughty it will likely remain.

TUSSLING with "THE BIG TOP" of the CIRCUS

by ONEY FRED SWEET

TIRED? Say, I had gone to sleep on the tongue of one of the stake and chain wagons. It was the dazzling sunshine, creeping around the wagon, that had awakened me. I could tell by the music that filtered through the "big top" that the bareback riding acts were on. My muscles ached; my neck was blistered from sunburn.

For two days now I had been one of "Mr. Jimmy's" canvasmen. I had been trouping long enough so that I didn't know what town we were in. But we were in a different town every day, I knew that. A different town every day—arriving on "the lot" in the early dawn; pitching the ten acres of canvas just so, despite roads and weather; tearing up at night and leaving nothing behind but stake holes and the remnants of pink popcorn sacks.

"Hey, get off those guy ropes!" I yelled to a bunch of near by barefoot kids.

The hungering kids came cautiously and wistfully over to where I sat on the wagon tongue, rubbing my eyes. The music inside the tent had shifted for a new act. The kids could only imagine what was going on inside the tent; I knew from the laughter that the clowns were running into the arena.

"Did you say this was Champaign, Illinois?" I inquired finally of the admiring group about me. "Yesterday it was Terre Haute, and tomorrow it'll be Danville."

I crossed my legs and pretended to be paying no attention to the juvenile throng about me nor the band music from inside the tent. My sun bleared eyes wandered off over the fields that stretched away from the town—fields with the touch of summer on them. It wouldn't be long until we would be showing "somewhere in Kentucky."

"You'd better be resting up," said a voice behind me, and I looked up into the tanned face of "St. Louis Slim." Just behind him was "Rabbit Head." The forearms of both men bore tattoo marks. Both of them had worked with me that morning at the canvas and ropes and stakes and poles. "You'd better be resting up," continued Slim. "If you stall again like you did this morning I sure will tell Mr. Jimmy. Get away from here, you kids! Shorty (he was referring to me) has only been 'with it' two days. He ain't such an old timer as he pretends to be. Like as not we'll 'leave him on the lot' tonight."

Can't Fool Old Timer.

"Do you know," continued Slim, turning toward me when the three of us had flopped ourselves on the blue grass in the shade of the wall of the billowing "big top," "do you know I could tell you'd never trouped before by the way you talked to Mr. Jimmy the other night. You asked him if he wanted any tent hands, and an old timer would simply have said: 'What's chances?' It's all right for you to pose around with that far away look in your eyes before these natives in the different towns, but me and Rabbit Head here was sitting along with that row of fellows in the 'rest top' when you came in to beg Mr. Jimmy for a job."

"Was you in there?" I asked. "Do you know Mr. Jimmy Whalen sitting there that night in his tent reminded me a good deal of an army general. You know, he's heavy set and has a heavy red mustache, and you can tell by looking at him that he was the kind who'd get the show on or off 'the lot' on time, in spite of rain, mud, high winds, or earthquakes."

"Mr. Jimmy's been a boss canvasman for more'n twenty-four years," reminisced Slim, holding the string to his tobacco sack in his teeth while he rolled a cigaret. "You remember he made you get permission from Mr. Rubien before he'd take you on. I guess you didn't make good as a candy butcher with Mr. Rubien, did ya? That's one of the Ringling Brothers' rules; one boss can't hire a man who's been fired by another boss unless the other boss gives his permission."

"I'm lasting longer as a canvasman than I did as a candy butcher," I enthused. "This new job don't take so much brain work. Nothing to do now until we have to start tearing down."

From inside the big tent wafted "M Is for the Million Things She Told Me" as it was being played for Mlle. Leitzel, madcap of midair. A gang of Negro canvasmen—ninety-six out of Mr. Jimmy Whalen's crew of 165 were Negroes—were coming along the side of the "big top," tightening ropes. The Negro crew called the stakes "Mr. Jimmy's trees." They sure did get away with a lot of pork chops over in the cook tent, those colored folks did, but with their lieutenant chanting a song while they worked they hustled things along. It was something that those on the seats inside missed—those Negro chants:

"Heavo! Heava! Heavo! Heava! Don't pull out de rag! That Ringling rag! That 'big top' rag!"

Some More Circus Terms.

"You think you've made some long jumps, don't ya, Shorty?" continued Slim, as the Negro gang passed out of sight around the far end of the tent. "You think because you've been with us in a couple of states that you are somebody. Well, you should have been with us last season, when the last section left Salt Lake City at 1:30 on a Sunday morning and made Reno, Nev.—576 miles away—by 6 o'clock Monday morning."

"I know," I yawned; "Germany sent some of her army officers over here a few years ago to study the transportation methods of the Ringling show. We fellows may be 'razorbacks,' but——"

"Say, where'd you get that razorback stuff?" Slim interrupted. "Don't you know that a razorback never shows up on 'the lot' nor helps handle canvas; his job's loading wagons on the train. You're so new that I suppose you've got that old fashioned idea that circus people are tough, too. Well, just try to get into a fight or pull any rough stuff and see how quick one of the show's 'dicks' gets hold of you. I'll admit that when I was with cheap shows in the old days I've been in many a 'clem' myself, but the town people have kept getting better and the show people have kept getting better. Why, we still call it the 'stake and chain' wagon, though we don't carry no chains on her any more—used to have to have chains on these tents because in some towns the gangs was so tough they used to cut the ropes. And it used to be that most all of us canvasmen was 'side wallers'—used to lift up the wall of the tent to let folks in at half price. Believe me, boy, there's no 'side walling' done with this show; let me give you warning."

"I think I'm getting onto everything pretty well," I says. "After that first morning you've noticed I ain't fallen for that gag of going around and asking for 'the key to the bail ring' nor trying to locate Bill Spevins. I know now that these stakes and poles are painted different colors in order to classify them, as well as for decoration. You notice I've been getting pretty well schooled in patience and I don't get sore at the crowd getting in my way all the time while I'm swinging the sledge. I'm getting used to getting up early and being out late, and I've got so I can grab off extra sleep swell on a wagon tongue."

Two "Ends" to the Cook Tent.

I sat between Slim and Rabbit Head at supper that night in the cook tent. I was learning fast that there was an aristocracy among circus folk, and we sat in what was called the "long end" of the cook tent, while the performers and department heads, etc., sat in the "short end." It occurred to me that Ollie Webb, who had charge of the commissary department, must have a strenuous job of it, feeding the 1,300 people with the show. In the morning, for instance, it was necessary to flop something like 5,200 cakes.

"I notice you've learned what it means when the white flag's flying from the cook tent," remarked Slim, turning toward me the tattooed arm that held his coffee cup resting bare elbowed on the table. "I guess you learned the first day that when you get here with the black flag up you don't get so much as a cracker. Wait until we get to making some of those 'two dukie runs.' Awe, you don't even know what a 'dukie' is. Well, a 'dukie' is a handout to keep you going until the cook tent can be set up again."

When we emerged from the cook tent the sun was beginning to send long, deep shadows across "the lot" and already the crowd was beginning to gather for the night show. By the time it became dark the cook tent and the horse tents had gone to the train. I was beginning to get on to the clockwork system by this time. We canvasmen had berths on what was called the first baggage train, carrying the canvas wagon and the stake and chain wagons. We were always preceded out of town by the flying squadron section, which included the menagerie, the cookhouse stuff, and the horse tents. After us followed the second baggage section, with its stringer wagons, property wagons, parade wagons, ticket wagons, and seat wagons. Last to leave each town was the section bearing the elephant, the ring stock, and the performers. Four sections in all.

With the waning of an afternoon of dozing and lounging in the shade of canvas and red wagons we, of Mr. Jimmy's army, were beginning to strain muscles again. Mr. Jimmy had come down out of "the fo'castle"—his headquarters in one of the stake and chain wagons. Mr. Jimmy must have been a sailor in his younger days, for he was continually using nautical terms. The day before I had had a hard time understanding what he meant when he ordered us to drive the stake "to the leeward side." Mr. Jimmy always spoke of the "big top" as "her," and each blue pole seemed to him to be a human thing. I heard him regret that he had been obliged to leave "Crooked Bill," a veteran king pole, behind at Baraboo at the start of the season, because Bill, though mighty faithful for four long summers, was getting a trifle outworn.

"It took 68,000 stake blows and two hours and a half to put the whole show up this morning," commented Slim at my side as we crossed "the lot" together, "and now we've got to get her down as fast as we can without interfering with the night show. Take it from me, if you're going to stay with m[illegible]g you ain't going to do any stalling to[illegible]. You're going to shoulder poles and you're going to fold and carry canvas without just pretending to be doing it. You ought to be used to it by this time if you're ever going to be used to it. When you stall the way you have you shift the work onto the rest of my gang, and I won't stand for it. I'm going to watch you close tonight."

Pulling Down the Big Top.

To me there was something sad about the tearing down of the tents late at night after a day that had been so full of sunshine and music and mingling of people. Gradually the lot began to darken and grow more quiet, the searchlights and the occasional flickering torch causing the jolting, continually vanishing wagons, and their high perched drivers to appear in silhouette. The early leaving of certain of the wagons gave some the impression that the night show was not as complete as the afternoon show, but it was a mistaken impression. With the night crowd well inside the "big top," through which the yellow lights streamed, we began eventually, at the blow of a whistle from Mr. Jimmy, to make quick work of the side show and the menagerie tents. No sooner had the crowd finally come out of the "big top" after the show than Mr. Jimmy started with his time honored formula.

"How are the main buys, Adam?" Jimmy called out to his first lieutenant.

"All right!" called back Adam at the king pole. Adam wasn't his real name, but he had formerly been with the Adam Forepaugh show and no one knew what his folks had really called him.

"Count off!" called Mr. Jimmy to the men at the six center poles, and when the six had yelled back "All right," Mr. Jimmy gave the command: "Let her go!"

It was then that the great roof of canvas came fluttering down into a cloud of dust, its surface rising and falling above the ground like a stretch of troubled sea. We were at the highest pitch of activity.

"Get onto the lacings!" Mr. Jimmy shouted, and, scampering like monkeys, we hurried along the great tent roof, separating the canvas into its several parts.

"Start to lower the poles!" yelled Mr. Jimmy. "Here, you men, catch that pole and get it on your shoulders. Come this way with it to the left." Then followed the "boom, boom" of the poles as we made them strike the front end of the wagons.

By the time our bunch got over to the wagon with the last of the center poles the ten acres of tents had dwindled into practically nothing but a memory. I had done the best I could, considering my sore shoulder. The band had ceased playing, the crowds had gone home, even Sid Rubien's candy butchers had ceased shifting their stands about to get into the line of trade. The sideshow banners had been lowered and folded and packed; the iron frame on which they had hung had been disjointed and loaded and hauled away; in fact, there was only trampled grass to show where the sideshow tent had been. Along the paved streets of the town the canvas covered wagons were rattling to the railroad yards, guided by beacon torches at various corners. Even the shouts of man to man around about me were becoming fainter and fewer. I decided to get to my wagon before it should grow too late. Reaching the wagon, I found Slim had beaten me to it. His legs were dangling over the edge of the loaded poles and he was puffing a cigaret authoritatively.

"O, no, you don't get on here," shouted down Slim. "I've kept my eye on you all night and I spoke to Mr. Jimmy about you half an hour ago. You've got to do something besides put your hand on a pole and just pretend you're helping with the gang. You've had the trial you asked for; I told him how you hadn't improved none."

"Gid dap," called out the high perched driver to the leader of his six horses.

I knew it was no use to demonstrate. On one side of me the Illinois fields stretched away in deep midnight shadows; on the other side of me a strange town was going tired to bed; around about me were innumerable stake holes and the remnants of popcorn sacks; above me the stars blinked indifferently.

I had been "left on the lot."

Herewith is presented the seventeenth installment of a fiction serial dealing with what might happen should European powers, after they had settled their own differences, wage war upon the United States. The author, one of the best fiction writers in the country, has based his story upon a thorough understanding of military, naval, and internal conditions in the United States and upon a sound knowledge of military and economic history. The story will cause you to realize the critical situation in which this country and you, your neighbors, and your family are placed by the let-well-enough-alone attitude of the pacifists.

SYNOPSIS.

In Elgin, Ill., live the Ashby family, consisting of Nathan Ashby, owner of the Ashby Brass company, and his wife; a daughter, Nellie, married to Bob Wendell, a navy lieutenant; and Jim Ashby, a son, engaged to Agnes Ware. Nathan Ashby is the archetype of pacifist, deaf to the warnings of impending danger to America. Out of a clear sky a league of former European enemies gives cause of war by sinking an American scout cruiser and then proceeds against unprepared United States. The country is honeycombed with league spies. The Arizona, Bob's ship, is sunk in a terrific battle, and Bob narrowly escapes death by swimming ashore. Jim, against Agnes' wishes, enlists. A cabinet meeting is held and the politicians hedged about a weak president are driven forcibly from their offices and their work given over to expert men. Jim, after training in Chicago, is ready to leave on a troop train for New York when he recognizes in the disguise of an aviator a girl he met in the house of the league spies, whither he had been taken unconscious while running down a clew as to the organization of the spies. The girl tells Jim she has turned patriot, which Jim does not believe. As the troop train leaves the suburban station the girl leaps from the train and Jim leaps after her. Jim stumbles upon the unconscious body of the girl and carries her to a house, from which she escapes. Jim later goes to New York. The enemy already is entering the city and bombarding it from the air. In a warehouse Jim's company is stationed. As the enemy crowds Brooklyn bridge to invade New York the bridge is blown up and the river filled with bodies. Again they try to cross in boats and destroyers bear down upon them, splitting them asunder and overturning them.

THE shells! They were bursting ceaselessly, furiously again about "N 94." That meant—Houston was yelling it—that the attack was beaten back; the regent's men were retreating; they were no longer trying to land.

The guns across the river shelled the American positions now to cover the retreat; they kept up the shell fire for half an hour longer in revenge for the check. Then there was a cessation of the fire. Jim Ashby, very weak, but glowing within with the sense of heroic achievement, turned about and saw Houston. The wooden legged man was kneeling beside Swenson and caring for a hurt in "Swedy's" head.

"Corporal," he said quietly, "the boys on each side of us got us through; and the general could better have had us take more loss. We must get the bayonet into our minds. Next time we must be able to bayonet!"

Not the next time, nor yet the next, nor the next was company F—a band of twenty-two men now—able to bayonet. "N 94," as a building, was gone; "N 94" had become purely a position—a rampart of cotton bales and ballast bags chinked up with bricks and stone from the debris of the warehouse; it was a section of firing trench which girded the Manhattan waterfront from the Battery to the Bronx, and then along the Hudson and the Harlem, too, as the regent drew his lines about the billion dollar fortress of Manhattan.

It was ten days after that first assault, according to Jim's reckoning—the reckoning did not agree with that of Kilbane, who knew it was eleven days—that the infantry of the regent crossed to Manhattan island near the old line of Manhattan bridge. The regulars, who had held the line up there, must have been killed; and the American batteries about there either were destroyed or out of ammunition. That was more likely, Jim thought, for if twenty-two men at "N 94" couldn't get rifle cartridges except at night when someone crept to the opening of the subway the artillerymen further away must be having their troubles. Or perhaps more of the guns had burst and killed their crews. Guns were bursting pretty often now, Jim knew; but that wasn't strange; they were defective guns—a lot of two hundred guns made for the allies during the European war. They hadn't been accepted on account of defects; so they'd been returned, and when this war came the army had grabbed them, for at least they were guns; they would shoot a good many times, maybe, before they burst. Suppose they were going to kill the men who had to fire them! More American men would be killed if the guns weren't fired, if riflemen were going to try to fight infantrymen and artillery without any artillery support at all. Besides, if the Americans used those defective, foreign guns the American factories could supply them with shells right away, without having to change a pattern or rip out a machine. They had been making shells of the sizes for those foreign guns—not the American sizes. So the guns had come to New York; so the fortress of Manhattan had had artillery and the riflemen of the militia had some support against the shells from across the river. But too many of the guns had burst or run out of ammunition—even though they were using shells of the foreign pattern—and the regent's troops were across the river now and no one was stopping them or pushing them back. More men were coming over and more and more. Were all the guns on Manhattan out of business? Were all the shells used up? Were all the gunners killed? Ah, there! Some battery was waking up. But the regent's men were coming on—on toward the ramparts of "N 94."

The twenty-two men there were becoming trained to holding a position; or Winslow and Houston had convinced them all that if a man tried to run he surely would be shot through the head. So, as the regent's men moved on "N 94," twenty-two rifles fired over the cotton bales.

"Bayonets now, boys! Bayonets! Stand up and give it to them! They're coming! Give it to them, O, stand and give 'em the steel or you'll get it. Now—bayonets! Bayonets!"

The recruits could not all stand to that; some of them ran and were shot, not by Winslow or Houston, but by the regent's men; others fell down and tried to hide behind the cotton bales; but when Winslow jumped up on a bale to fight and Houston, stumbling a little because of his wooden leg, stood up also, others followed them. Paddy Kilbane, for one, and, for another, Swenson, the ex-janitor. Jim Ashby fought beside him.

Steel against steel! Kilbane was quick; he lunged low and got a man before one got him. But Swenson was a bit slow; he tried to club his musket and was thrust through. Yet the man opposite Jim was fighting with clubbed musket and Jim could not reach him; instead—Jim went down, quite helpless, but not quite unconscious, and felt other men falling upon him. They did not move because they were dead; and, as he did not move, the enemy considered him dead also. They went over him and past him about business which they had yet to do further on. So Jim, utterly spent and nerveless, rested.

REST.

It was queer to rest with dead men on both sides of you and a dead man across your body; but it was rest—the first rest with nothing to do and nothing to watch and wait for which Jim had had in ten days—eleven, if Kilbane's reckoning was right. Jim moved some one's arm—it was Kilbane's arm—so he could breathe a little better. Every one about him was dead; he was sure of that. No one moved, and when he called no one answered. Jim went to sleep.

It was dark; beside the white beams of searchlights sweeping the river and the greenish, eerie flash of starshells breaking above the ruins, there was no light when he awoke. Whether it was just after nightfall or almost morning, Jim could not guess; but nothing had changed about him.

Jim pushed away the body which had lain across him, and he sat up. The man who had fallen above him was one of the enemy. He had a canteen and a haversack, in which was an emergency ration and chocolate. Jim ate, and in the light of the next starshell he found another of the regent's dead and he ate that man's ration, too, and drank the coffee from both canteens. The food which had supplied company F for ten days had been foraged from under the ruins of a cheap, east side grocery on what had been Water street, and the supply had been very scant and irregular.

The noise of artillery and the crash of shells breaking told that the battle for Manhattan was continuing this night, as upon every night before. There were no shells bursting about the water front; that was the only change. Jim found himself in a zone of ruin which neither side sought to further demolish. Perhaps that zone now was behind the enemy's lines; certainly the center of the city, where the great, towering buildings of Broadway still showed their pointed pinnacles in the light of the starshells, was strongly held.

Jim gazed from the towers down to the faces of the dead about him. Paddy Kilbane—the Irish boy who had been a shipping clerk till a couple of weeks ago and who had been picked to try out in the infield with the "Cubs"—had been thrust through the heart. The bayonet had pushed from his pocket a scrap of lace, all crimson now. Jim recalled it—the handkerchief Paddy had found in the seat of the train which had belonged to one of the beautiful refugees who had fled to Chicago. So Paddy had kept it, the guerdon from his unknown lady for whom he had fought. Well, the Irish boy's gallantries were over. He was very bold and handsome, as the starshell showed him; there seemed almost a smile on his lips. He lay as he would have liked to lie if one of those blushing little colleens, who came to the camp in Chicago, should come to see him now. Swedy Swenson—who had carried his rifle like a mop—was bayoneted through and through. He was not at all neat now; Swedy would not like that. Swedy had written a letter a few days before; Jim found it and put it in his pocket. Winslow was dead, too, so was Houston—every man of the company, except Jim, who had faced that charge; the others were dead, too—those who could not face it. Their shrinking could not save them—every one was killed when the assault succeeded. Jim gazed with awe at Houston's face. He had been ashamed before Houston, living; he was more ashamed before Houston, dead. The wooden legged man had fallen on his side, with an arm extended before him, a finger pointing. It pointed toward the towers where the shells now were breaking.

"Go there!" Jim seemed to hear Houston's voice order. "Go there; if you ain't a damned coward and a quitter, go!"

Jim did not realize before that so far as his brain had been forming a plan it was of escape from the city.

"All right, old fellow," he promised Houston. "I'll go there."

THE INNER FORT.

He took a rifle and was fumbling about dead men's belts and bandoliers for cartridges when he heard some one approaching. He crouched very still and waited. A starshell blazed and showed him a girl's slight figure bending over the bodies at the other end of "N 94." Jim watched her dazedly, amazed. She was alone; besides himself she was the only living thing in the light of the starshell. Its light burned out, but the girl continued her search in the darkness. She worked slowly in Jim's direction, examining each still form. Jim waited for another starshell to show her to him again; she was quite close now. She was a girl of 22 or 23, he guessed, with clear cut features; she wore shirtwaist and plain skirt and she was without hat. She looked like an American girl. That definition included, Jim realized, Marion Marlatt as well as Agnes. She might be of the other side; but Jim believed she was not. She had come to Winslow's body now and was turning it over.

"Those men are all dead," Jim addressed her quietly.

She straightened and looked about quickly, but without starting. "Where are you?" she asked in a low, gentle voice.

"Here." Jim stood up.

"You are hurt?"

"No; I was—just resting here."

"I see." She came closer and gazed at him. She showed no surprise that he, unhurt, had lain there to rest. She simply took his hand and began leading him away. She guided him, by the flare of the starshells, over the débris, away from the river toward the great granite and brick and tile pinnacles of the city, where the searchlights were playing. There were none of the regent's soldiers about, she told him. The assault, which had swept over "N 94" had broken down soon afterwards; the enemy were killed or taken or driven back, but the Americans had not yet reformed their positions along that part of the water front.

Jim stumbled over something—it was just a body—and fell down; now that he knew that the enemy weren't about him he was content to lie there where he fell, but the girl would not leave him alone. She tried to pull him up by physical force, but her strength was not enough, so she sat down beside him and got him to talking. He told her first about Kilbane and Houston and then about his father and Nellie and Bob, about Mart and, yes, about Agnes and Marion Marlatt. This girl—she told him her name when he asked it, but he could not remember it—had wonderfully gentle but tense little hands; she kept hold of his hands all the time and held him hard when his mind wandered. Once, when he cried, she cried, too. Then he got up.

She led him through choked, débris strewn streets, with smoldering ruins on both sides, where sentinels challenged them and she answered and was allowed to lead him on; she led him past charred ruins and great, gaunt heaps of brick and stone and plaster and steel beams, where men searched with electric flashlights; she led him into a street—a wide street, a ragged, eerie, spectral caricature of Broadway, where she was challenged again and where a great gun was firing. It was a long barreled gun of the sort seen on warships, but it was mounted upon a truck, which stood on a car track and moved away after the gun had been fired up into the air. The girl turned with Jim into a building where—except that the glass was gone from windows and doors—everything was all right. An electric light was burning and an elevator was running. A car was waiting on the ground floor. The girl led Jim into it and immediately it descended with him to an electric lighted room where two men were at a table, with books before them. They looked up, and one arose and examined Jim while the other asked him questions. The girl was gone then. One of the men led him away to a room where other men were sleeping and there was a cot waiting for Jim. He lay down upon it and went to sleep.

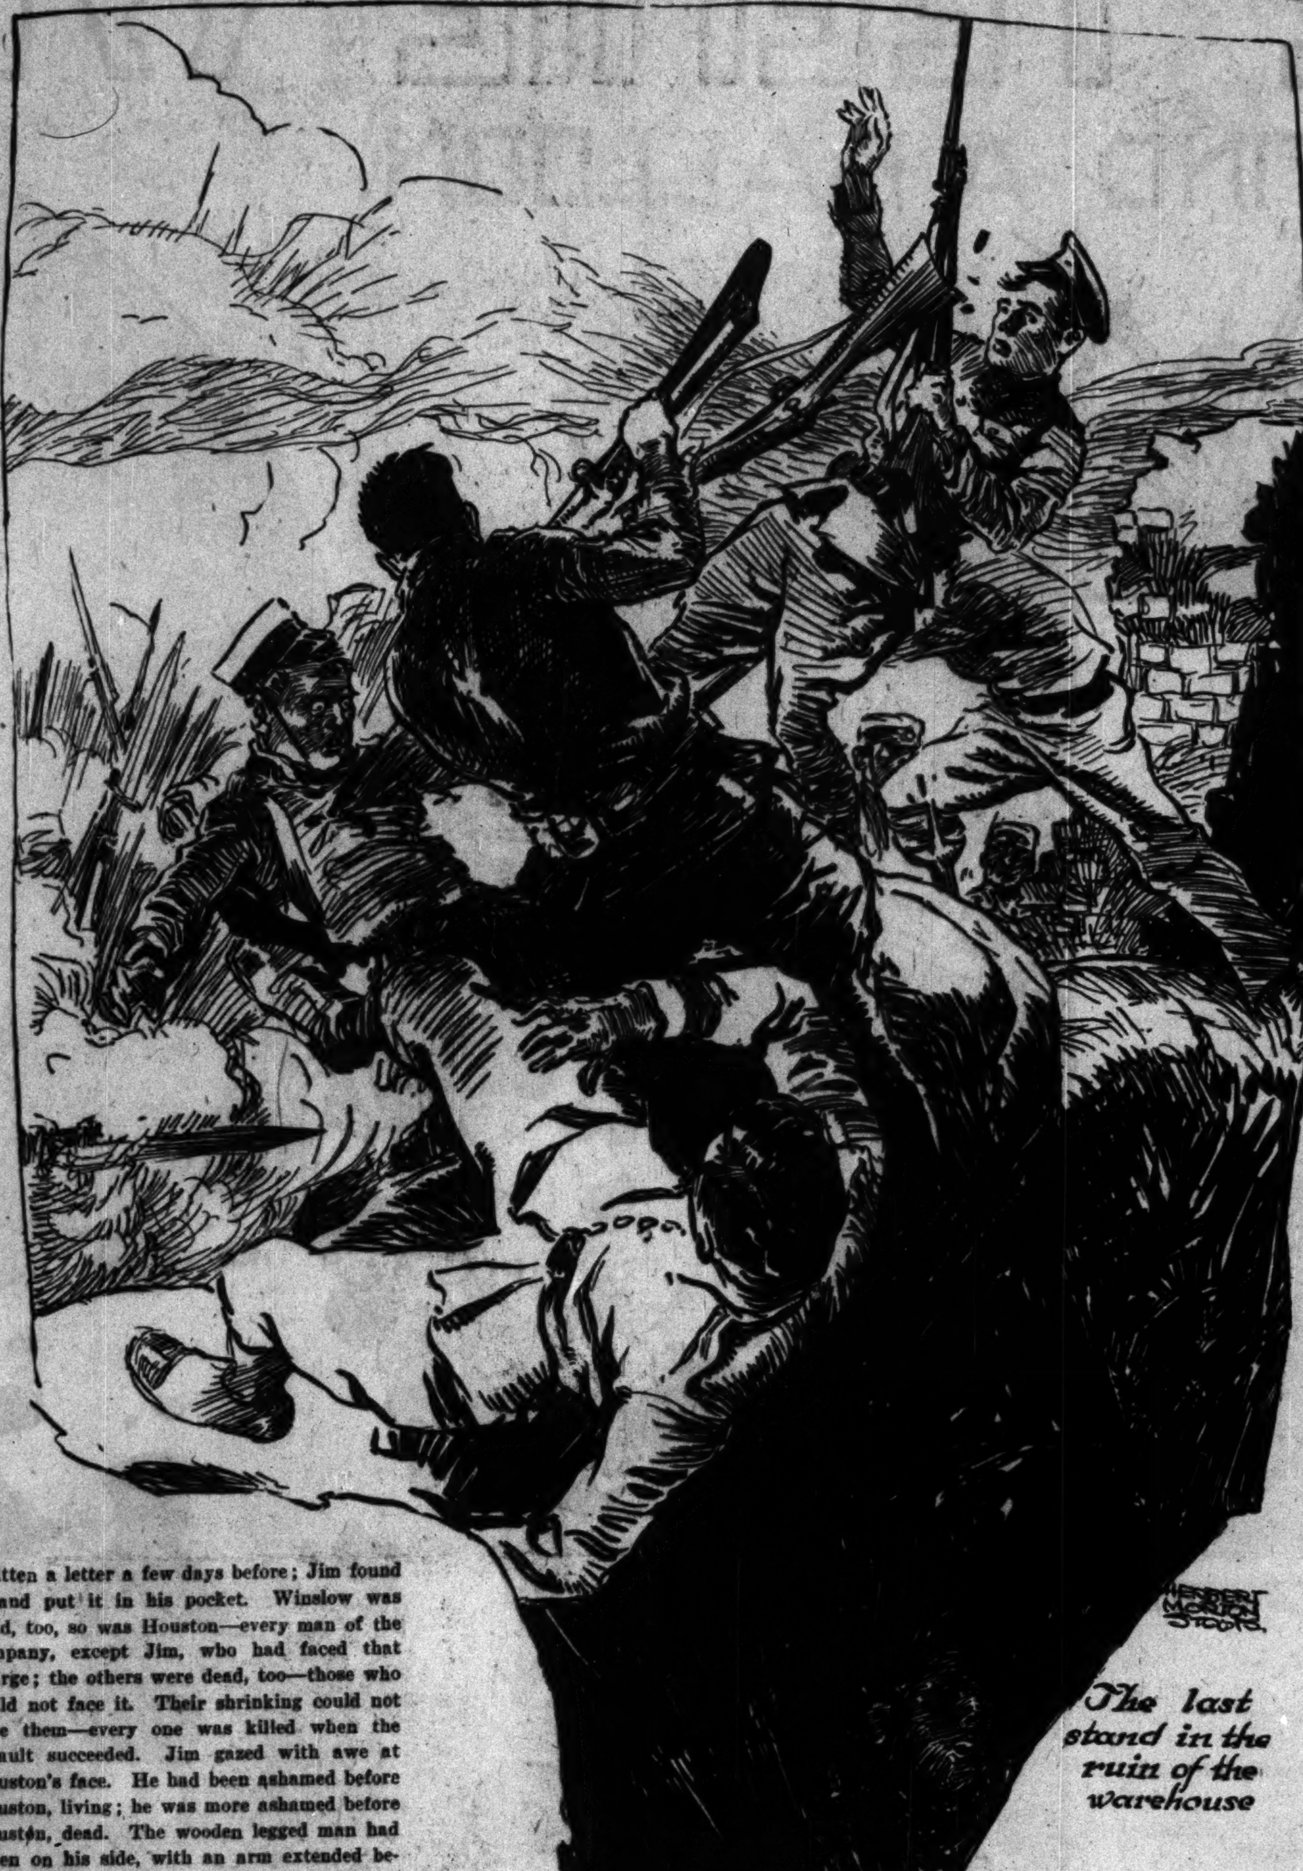
"SAVE HIMSELF WHO CAN."

Upon the second morning after that he was given rifle and cartridges again and assigned to a company, and he took his part once more in the defense of Manhattan. His company—it was a non-descript of fragments of companies from New York and Connecticut militia with a few Vermont boys and a couple more who had belonged to a Chicago regiment—was among those garrisoning the inner citadels. They helped move the American field guns from floor to floor and fire the foreign guns till they burst; they helped hide the positions in the great, steel girdered buildings as the enemy's shells stripped the beams bare; they helped remove batteries and military stuff from building to building as slowly, patiently, systematically the regent's gunners battered the steel cliffs of Broadway down; they helped serve the great naval guns which fired from the streets over the shattered city heights; by night they helped dismantle the destroyers, the cruisers, and the other war craft which had been in Brooklyn navy yard before the siege and the others from the ocean which had run to refuge in the Hudson. This gave more guns and more shells, and as they were mounted on freight trucks and moved each time after they were fired, the regent's artillery officers had a hard time finding them. These guns, with the mines in the harbor and in the river, were able to keep the regent's ships away even after the harbor defenses, attacked from the rear, had fallen. But now Manhattan fortress was completely isolated; the regent held not only Long Island and the Bronx and the narrow neck of upper Manhattan itself, but he occupied also the Jersey shore and the Jersey end of the tunnels which for days had been the sole means of moving men and supplies to and from Manhattan.

From high up on the Metropolitan tower—the regent's guns had blasted away the brick and stone, but most of the steel framework still stood—Jim gazed at conquered country beyond the Manhattan moats. In that circle within his horizon there lived—or had lived—one-sixteenth of the population of the United States. The millions of Manhattan had disappeared. Ordered away by the American army authorities, driven in headlong flight by the regent's shells, they had fled—as Jim himself had observed—by the thousand as far as Chicago; by the tens of thousand they had gained Ohio and the Ohio valley; by the hundred thousand they had traveled and tramped and plodded to upper New York; the last millions had moved in desperate, desolate migration to add to the misery of the millions in Brooklyn borough, captured and half burned, and in Jersey, also occupied by a hostile army, and throughout the rest of that circle of vanquished land.



The last stand in the ruin of the warehouse

What was the gain of all the despair, the agony, and woe of those millions driven paupers from their homes? What was the gain of the thousands of soldiers and of civilians—women and men—who had stayed to help the soldiers, slaughtered in the hopeless fight for Manhattan?

Jim watched from the towers and understood. The regent's mighty army was closing in upon Manhattan, but till Manhattan was taken his army could not go on. Jim had no census of the men holding the island; he doubted whether any one knew the number now; but he noticed that, after the Pennsylvania tunnels were closed, almost all the soldiers left were militia and recruits. They were the national guardsmen and the recruits of New York, of Connecticut, of New Jersey, with the city regiments from Ohio, Indiana, and Illinois. The regulars who had taken the shock of the first assaults and stiffened the militia till they had begun to stand, had almost disappeared. They could not have been all killed; they must have been withdrawn. And, by wireless, word came to the Manhattan garrison of where the regulars had gone. They were inland with the militia of the other eastern states and the men from the west drilling and hardening and training a field army while the men in Manhattan still held the enemy's first expeditionary force close to the coast.

So the surrounded regiments fought on. The civilians, who had remained for different duties after the beginning of the siege, had disappeared also; there remained of the women only those who would not leave the wounded and dying in the improvised hospital wards in the subbasements far below the streets. Whether the girl who led him from "N 94" was among these Jim did not know; he did not see her again, and when he inquired for her he was not able to make definite enough description for identification. He never saw again the men to whom she brought him.

Sometimes, as he lay alone cringing under the shock of shell fire, he questioned whether she had ever come to him, whether she might not have been a fancy, a delusion. Some men went quite mad under the shock of the shells; more were mildly insane for a few days and then sometimes died suddenly and without mark of wound or hurt upon them or lay paralyzed; others cringed or leaped and shrieked for the shells to stop—for the guns to stop only a little while, just a few moments to have silence. But the shells never stopped; day and night ceaselessly they came till the mad men rushed down to the cellars and shut themselves up in furnace fireboxes and office vaults so they would hear the guns no more; and there they died, still shrieking when there was no one about to hear, shrieking for the shells to stop till they ceased—for them—forever. Still the sane fought on.

The Croton aqueducts were cut; the men drank water stored in tanks and bathtubs or brought from the reservoir in the park. They foraged from under the burned and shattered buildings; they cooked with the kindling of mansion panels and ballustrades, of tenement floors and walls.

Then their lines about the city broke and the garrisons of the trenches, falling back upon the gaunt, battered skeletons of the great steel buildings, became city guerillas. They fought from upper floors, from basements; they made forays through the subways; they mined the streets and blew up battalions of the enemy as they advanced to occupy a square. From building to building they fought and, dying, made the regent pay. At last, where the Americans gathered, came the order from Bainbridge: "Let every man save himself as he can."

It meant that, though here and there a building held out or a cellar was garrisoned, the fortress was taken. It no longer served to hold any great force of the enemy; his ships were at the ruins of the quays.

ON THE HUDSON.

That night, in scattered bands or one by one, the last of the garrison of Manhattan crept out of their hiding places to make their ways down to the Hudson. Jim Ashby—he had lost all rank in recent days—was one of those who reached the river near where had been the Chelsea piers. There was a sort of tunnel through the débris there which was not known to the regent's sentries or was not well watched. Jim found the passage, and, creeping back, led others through it to the water. One of those who followed him was a girl. Jim saw her profile before a glint of light and she saw him; for she was real! But he dared not even whisper. Yet he kept close to her and when he gained the water again he took her with him upon the raft which he prepared.

It was a dark, dismal, chill October night with a mist rolling up the river from the sea; the fog carried every sound and magnified each footfall on the shore; there came the challenge and firing from patrol boats which told that some of the rafts were discovered; but the mist kept the circle of vision close to the boat lanterns and baffled even the searchlights on the shore. The tide was flowing, strong and fast; the current caught Jim's raft and bore it out to midstream; the tide took it up the river. The wind lapped the water over the boards, drenching Jim through and drenching the girl who lay beside him; he rolled a bit closer.

"What are you doing here?" he whispered, his lips almost touching her cheek. "You should have stayed—or left long ago!"

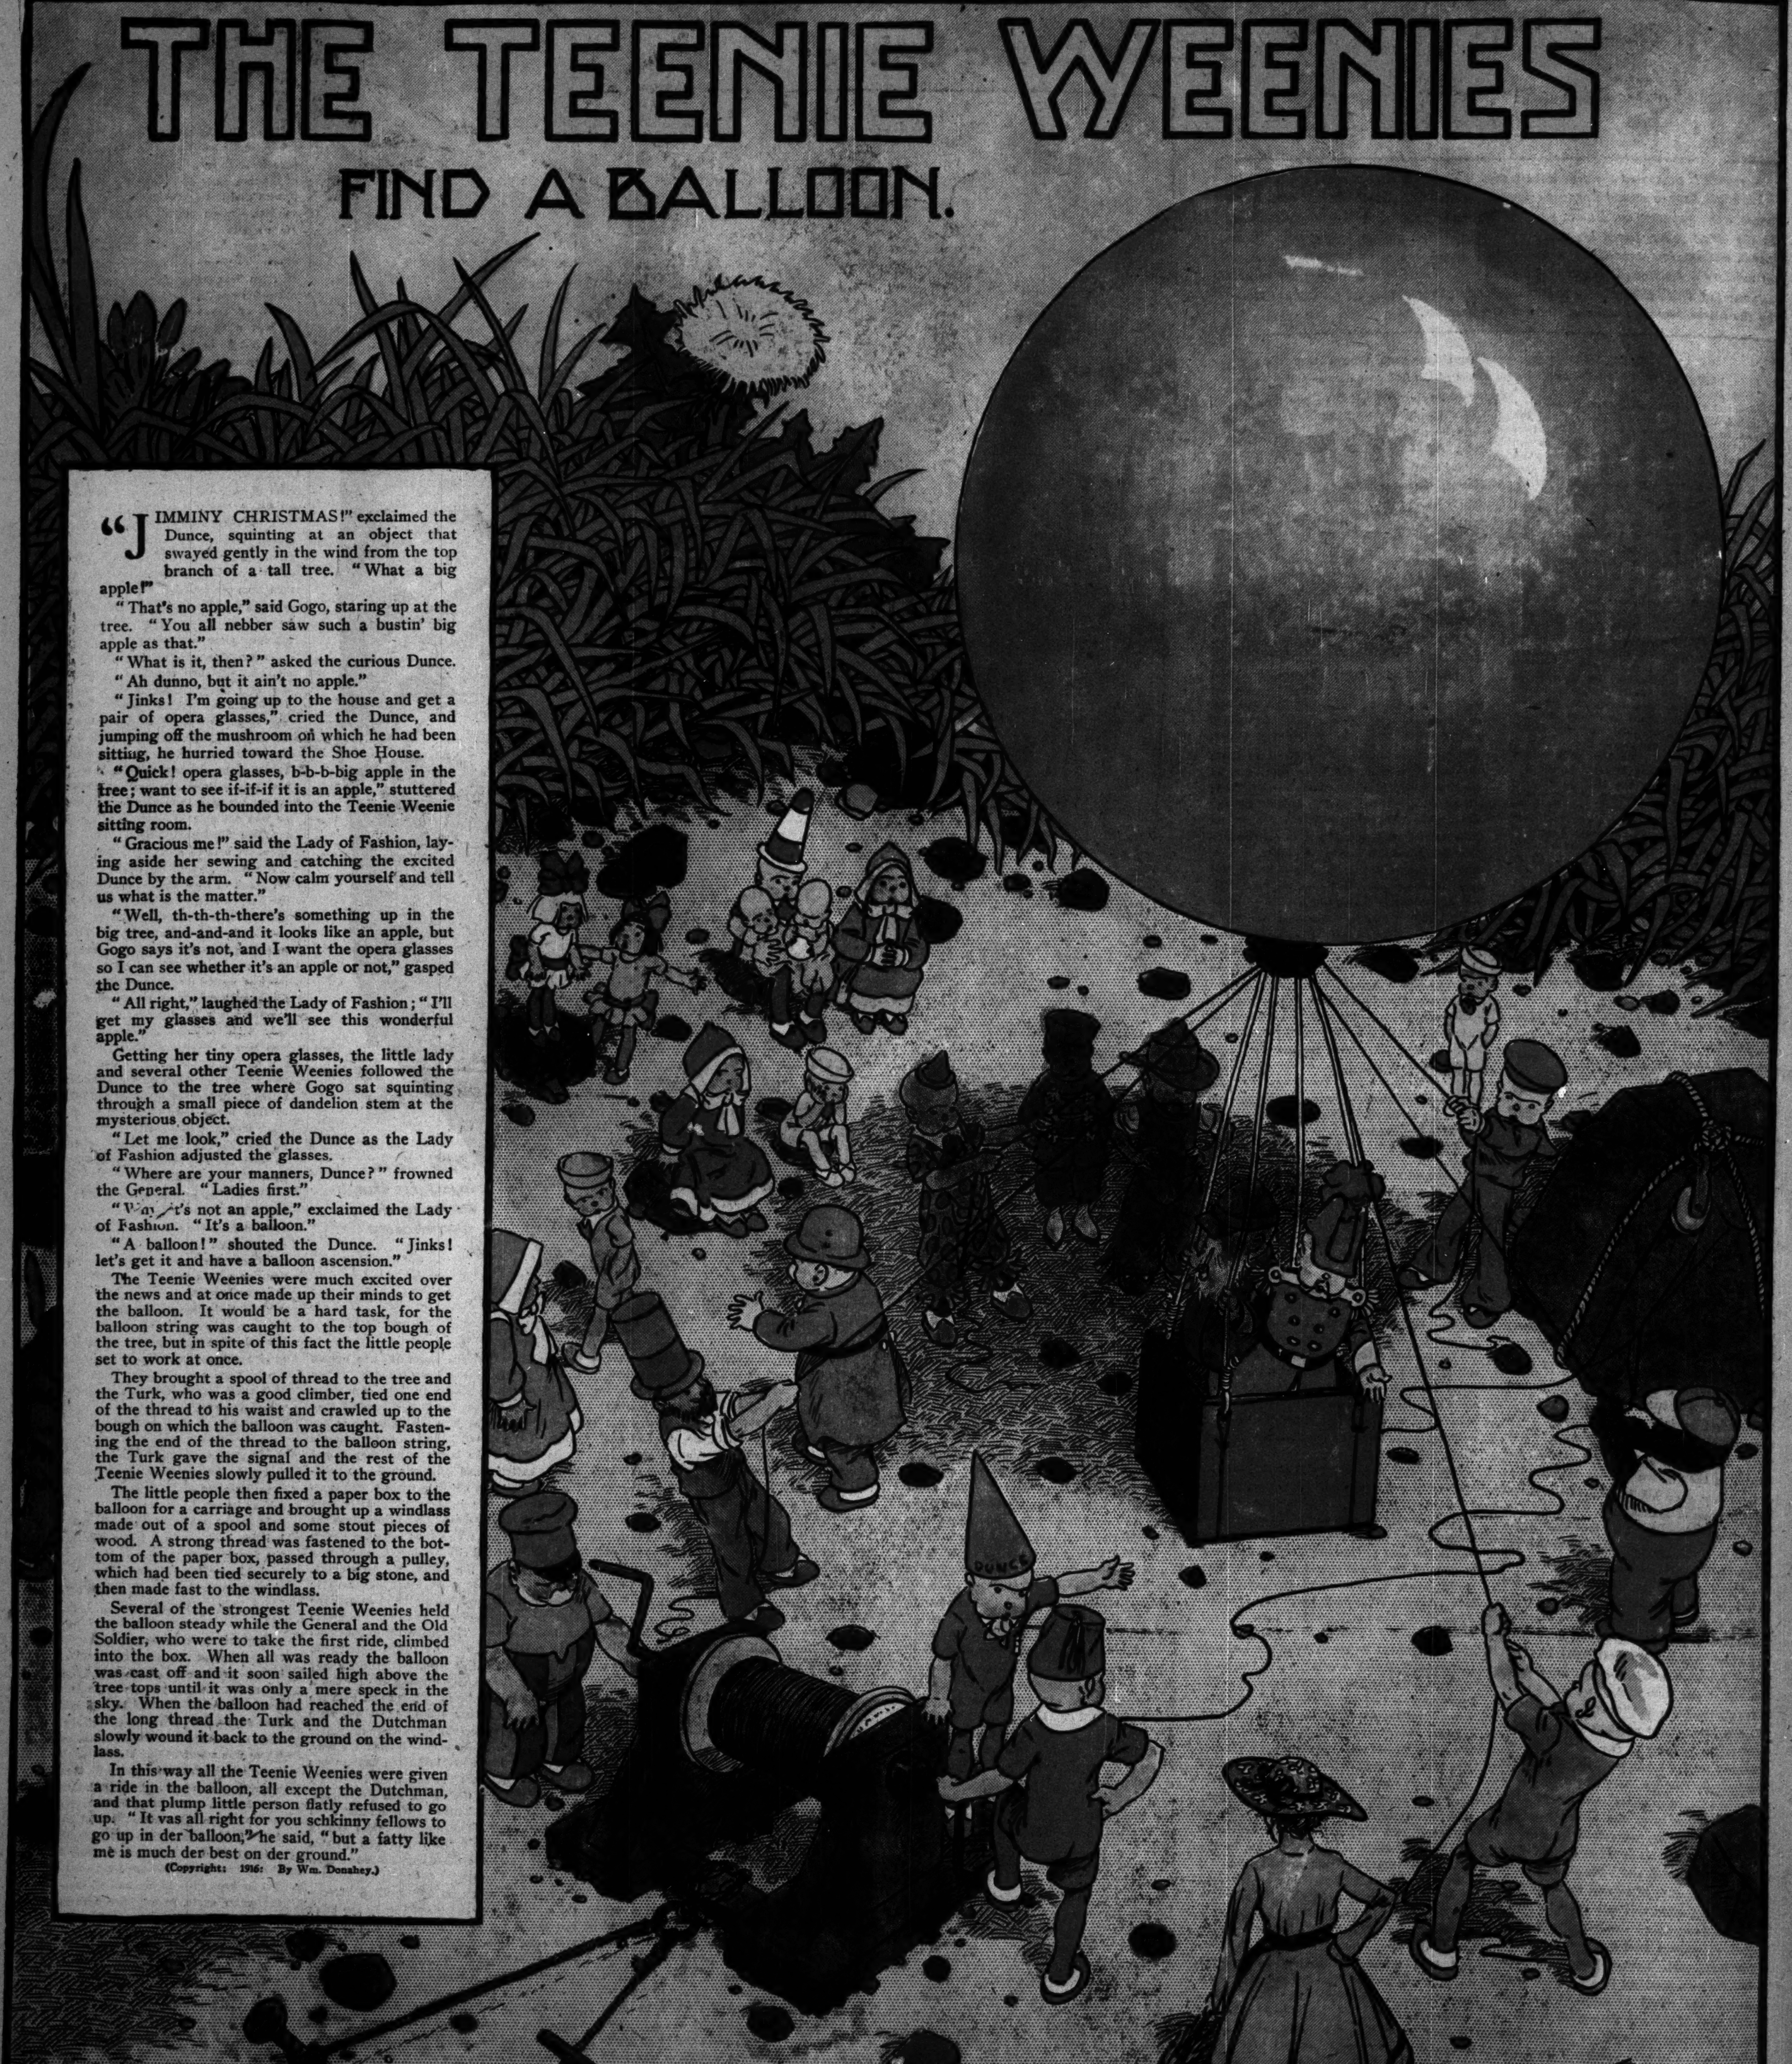
THE TEENIE WEENIES

FIND A BALLOON.



"JIMMINY CHRISTMAS!" exclaimed the Dunce, squinting at an object that swayed gently in the wind from the top branch of a tall tree. "What a big apple!"

"That's no apple," said Gogo, staring up at the tree. "You all nebber saw such a bustin' big apple as that."

"What is it, then?" asked the curious Dunce.

"Ah dunno, but it ain't no apple."

"Jinks! I'm going up to the house and get a pair of opera glasses," cried the Dunce, and jumping off the mushroom on which he had been sitting, he hurried toward the Shoe House.

"Quick! opera glasses, b-b-b-big apple in the tree; want to see if-if-if it is an apple," stuttered the Dunce as he bounded into the Teenie Weenie sitting room.

"Gracious me!" said the Lady of Fashion, laying aside her sewing and catching the excited Dunce by the arm. "Now calm yourself and tell us what is the matter."

"Well, th-th-th-there's something up in the big tree, and-and-and it looks like an apple, but Gogo says it's not, and I want the opera glasses so I can see whether it's an apple or not," gasped the Dunce.

"All right," laughed the Lady of Fashion; "I'll get my glasses and we'll see this wonderful apple."

Getting her tiny opera glasses, the little lady and several other Teenie Weenies followed the Dunce to the tree where Gogo sat squinting through a small piece of dandelion stem at the mysterious object.

"Let me look," cried the Dunce as the Lady of Fashion adjusted the glasses.

"Where are your manners, Dunce?" frowned the General. "Ladies first."

"Why, it's not an apple," exclaimed the Lady of Fashion. "It's a balloon."

"A balloon!" shouted the Dunce. "Jinks! let's get it and have a balloon ascension."

The Teenie Weenies were much excited over the news and at once made up their minds to get the balloon. It would be a hard task, for the balloon string was caught to the top bough of the tree, but in spite of this fact the little people set to work at once.

They brought a spool of thread to the tree and the Turk, who was a good climber, tied one end of the thread to his waist and crawled up to the bough on which the balloon was caught. Fastening the end of the thread to the balloon string, the Turk gave the signal and the rest of the Teenie Weenies slowly pulled it to the ground.

The little people then fixed a paper box to the balloon for a carriage and brought up a windlass made out of a spool and some stout pieces of wood. A strong thread was fastened to the bottom of the paper box, passed through a pulley, which had been tied securely to a big stone, and then made fast to the windlass.

Several of the strongest Teenie Weenies held the balloon steady while the General and the Old Soldier, who were to take the first ride, climbed into the box. When all was ready the balloon was cast off and it soon sailed high above the tree tops until it was only a mere speck in the sky. When the balloon had reached the end of the long thread the Turk and the Dutchman slowly wound it back to the ground on the windlass.

In this way all the Teenie Weenies were given a ride in the balloon, all except the Dutchman, and that plump little person flatly refused to go up. "It vas all right for you schkinny fellows to go up in der balloon," he said, "but a fatty like me is much der best on der ground."

The Old Fashioned Mantelet Appears with the First Fall Models

FASHION'S BLUE BOOK

THE charm of the picturesque always appeals to the feminine heart, especially when it is found in the domain of dress.

Perhaps one of the most fascinating developments of the season is revealed in the quaint mantlets that give a most unusual touch to the simple costume of summer time. Many are the artistic creations evolved from shimmering silks, rich velvets, and filmy chiffons.

Three delightful modes are depicted on this page. At the top is a fascinating little wrap of mauve and gray changeable taffeta. Designed with a charming shawllike collar, this origination is gayly ornamented with handsome silver embroidery, and from the tip of the pointed collar depends a beautiful silk tassel. A suggestion of a sleeve is revealed in the silk which is shirred at the top of the arms, with a flaring heading that tends to accentuate the width of the shoulders.

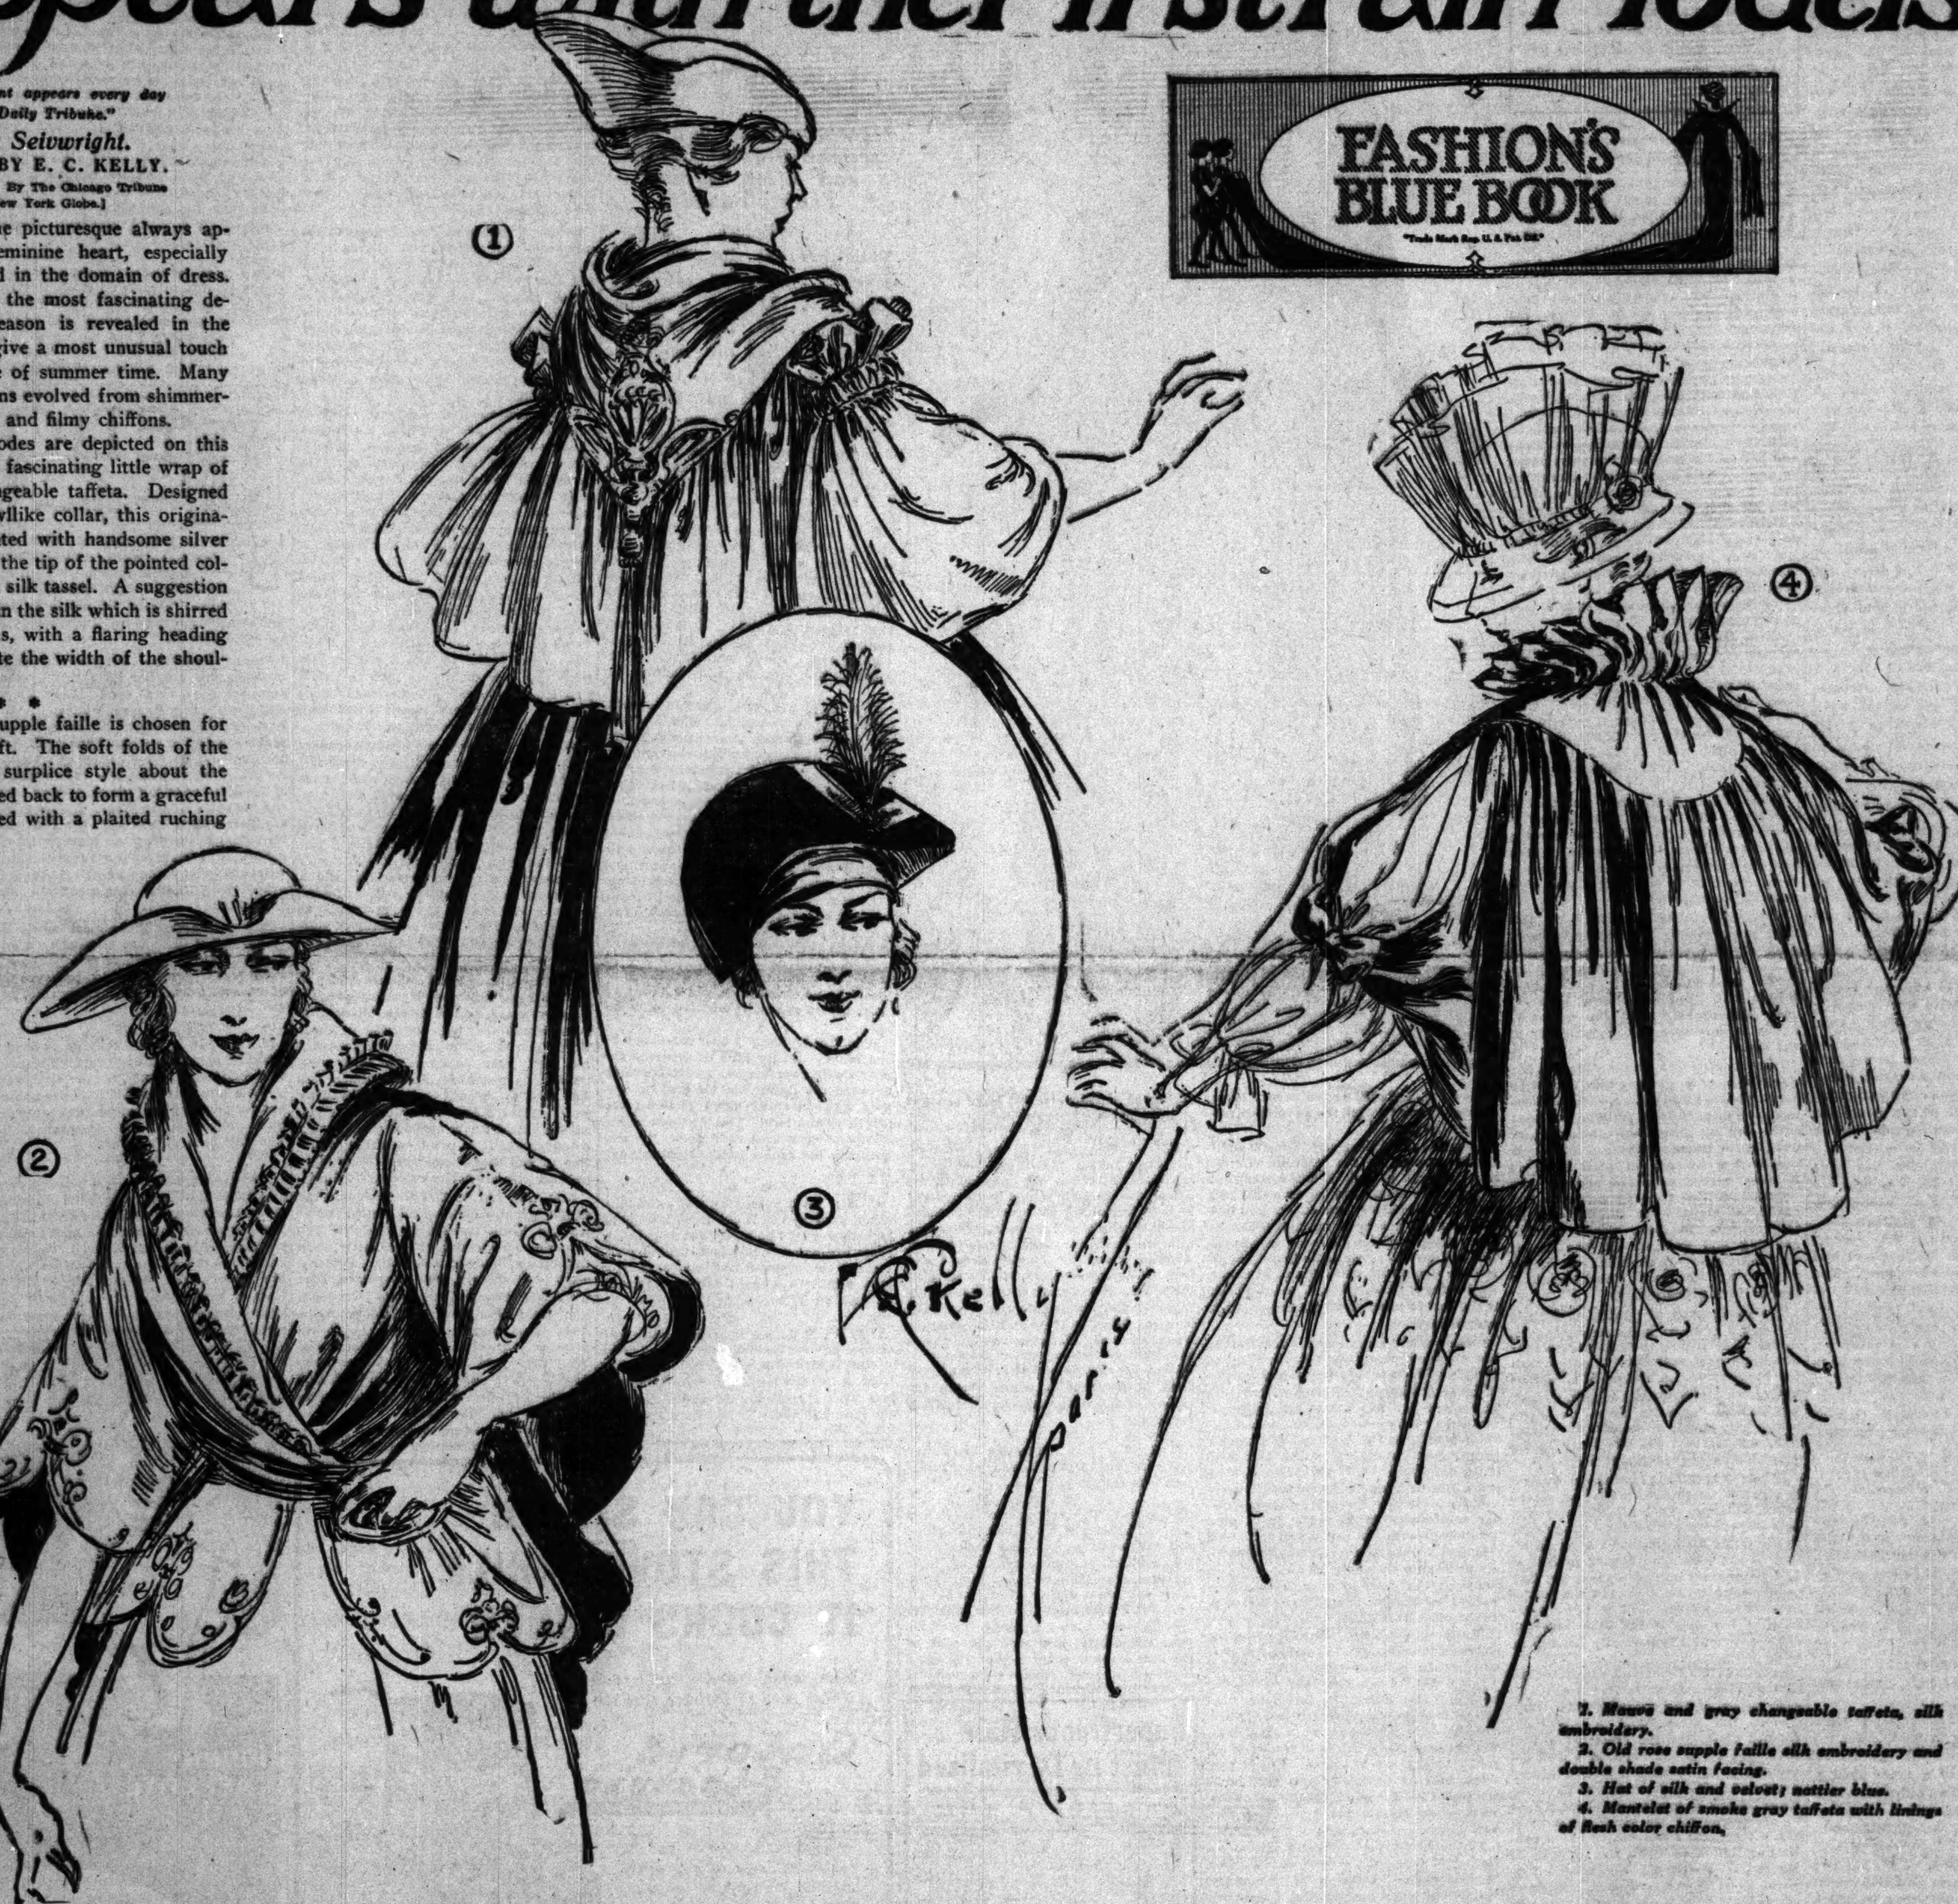
A lovely old rose supple faille is chosen for the mantelet at the left. The soft folds of the silk are wrapped in surplice style about the figure and loosely folded back to form a graceful collar. This is adorned with a plaited ruching and about the waist a fold of the silk is draped and finished with a cabochon at the left side. The widely scalloped peplum and prettily shaped sleeves are enriched with silk embroidery and faced with satin in a darker shade.



1. Mauve and gray changeable taffeta, silk embroidery.
2. Old rose supple faille silk embroidery and double shade satin facing.
3. Hat of silk and velvet; nattier blue.
4. Mantelet of smoke gray taffeta with linings of flesh color chiffon.

Another delectable mantlet is pictured at the right, and its charming style will surely be approved by every woman who delights in dainty attire. This creation is evolved from smoke gray taffeta and lined with flesh colored chiffon. Fashioned with a deep circular yoke, a full cape is achieved, for the silk is closely gathered and falls in many a ripple about the figure. From shoulder to elbow this is slashed apart so that the filmy sleeve of the waist is revealed, while a dainty bow of the silk holds the loose ends together. The collar is exceedingly lovely and looks like a delicate flower with the gray silk sepals that are clustered about the pale pink chiffon.

A dashing hat is pictured in the center of the group and offers a suggestion for the early fall models that frequently appear while midsummer is still with us. Nattier blue velvet combined with silk of matching shade is favored for this creation, and rising from the narrow ribbon trimming is a feather cockade that emphasizes the military tendency in this mode.

Although the mantelet will doubtless be much in vogue throughout the summer, it is too charming an adjunct to be quickly dropped from milady's wardrobe. In many of the advance fall modes one finds that cape effects are favored. Of course these are much longer than the summer wraps and require many yards of material, as they are cut on flaring lines and lavishly trimmed with fur.

Fur trimmings, however, are not reserved for fall and winter use, for at this time such adorning is exceedingly popular on the wool jersey suit and tricot silk costume. White astrakhan and silver rabbit are fashionable furs for such purposes, while another pelt is dyed to imitate beaver, and as its price is only a fraction of the latter, it is widely used.

Fur capes, too, are approved by creators and leaders of fashion. The newest way of mounting pelts is to stretch them so that breadth rather than length is achieved. Long stoles are no longer esteemed and fox and fisher are spread out as widely as possible and developed into picturesque collars that are unusually attractive.

Another novelty is found in the sailor collar of fur. Such collars fall about twelve inches from the neck line in the manner of the popular plaited models shown on jersey suits or linen blouses. These are usually worn with lingerie dresses and are decidedly effective.

With many formal out of doors functions now being held, one naturally finds much of interest in the summery frocks that are designed especially for the garden party or affairs at country clubs. Exquisite voiles, chiffons, and organdie dresses reveal many interesting features. One lovely dress is originated in a pale lavender shadow check organdie. The bodice, following rather closely the lines of the figure, is unadorned save for the fichu that is lightly laid about the shoulders. This is elaborated with a narrow plaiting of the material and finished in V shaped style just above the waist line.

The skirt is designed with a circular yoke which is outlined by a four inch frill of the organdie which decreases in width at the sides of the frock. Another frill, slightly deeper, is placed about a couple of inches lower and follows the sweep of the frill just described, while a third frill assumes the proportions of a flounce. Gay cockades of green ribbon with flying streamers lend a bright dash of color to this dainty summer frock.

Another lovely frock of printed silk voile is designed with a simply gathered skirt finished with three narrow tucks above the hem. Although at first glance the foregoing description might seem sufficient, yet on closer inspection a charming idea is developed in this apparently simple skirt. Perhaps when its creator originated it he had the daisy in mind, for from the waist line radiate petal shaped panels that are outlined with pale blue ribbon that matches the dominating color of the floral motifs with which the voile is bestrewn. The lower part of the bodice is similarly decorated, while the outline of the collar follows the graceful petal shape of the flower. The dainty vestee of fine cream colored batiste is trimmed with small blue buttons.

Hats in quaint poke shapes or with drooping brims, gloriously trimmed with brilliant tinted flowers, give the finishing touch to these fascinating frocks for the joyful hours of summer.

MEN AND WOMEN

A MOST perplexing problem to attempt to solve is that of the ratio of a woman's value as sweetheart, wife, and possible widow in the estimation of man in each of his various rôles of lover, husband, and testator. Especially perplexing is the estimation put upon widows.

Widows and Wills.

When a man is seeking to obtain the consent of a girl of his choice he thinks that he is ready to surrender almost anything in order to secure that consent. In the marriage vow he says unhesitatingly, "With all my worldly goods I thee endow," but afterward the vow is forgotten or entirely ignored and has no legal validity whatever.

Mrs. Madeline Force Astor's necessary sacrifice of $5,000,000 and a magnificent home in Fifth avenue, New York, in order to rewed proves that in will making men do not always prove themselves models of generosity and justice. The will of John Jacob Astor, who was drowned when the Titanic sunk, disposed of an estate valued at $100,000,000. A comparatively insignificant sum he gave outright to his girl widow and the income from a trust fund of $5,000,000 and the use of the Fifth avenue house and its contents, the last two items to be lost to her entirely in case she married again. A trust fund of $3,000,000 for the surviving child was provided.

Sympathy is not in great demand for the loss of the Astor money and house by the young widow, since she is marrying for love a man reputed to be worth millions. But the meager manifestation of love for and gratitude to the young girl bride who defied, for John Jacob Astor, the most scathing public criticism from pulpit and press in order to become his wife is somewhat difficult to comprehend.

In the will of the wealthy there is often exhibited an ancient, barbaric sentiment regarding the status of a wife or widow. Many widows of rich men have found themseves unable to continue in the style of living to which they were accustomed because of the restricted incomes left to them by their husbands. There have been instances where the children found it necessary to unite in forming a fund to enable their mother to keep up the great establishments that the husband's and father's will obliged her to retain and maintain during her own lifetime.

Again, the wills of some of our millionaires leave the faithful wife and mother poor compared with any one of their children and with less liberty in the disposing of her own portion than any one of them. After spending the years from early wifehood to the time when some of her children are married and all are grown up—after occupying the position of head of the household during those years—when the will of her deceased husband is opened she finds that every child she has gone down to the gates of death to bear for him has been left with a fortune multiplying her own several times.

"The true index to a man's character is contained in his last will and testament," wrote an able jurist. The strange and erratic testaments presumably sane people leave behind them when compelled to part with the wealth they have been able to acquire during life prove beyond doubt that few men are really known until they are dead.

Women as Witnesses.

Every one has heard lawyers talk of the incredibility of women as witnesses. At first we are inclined to think that it may be simply another jest at the expense of women. But ask any lawyer who has had experience in the trial of cases and he will tell you that of all witnesses, women are the most unreliable and untrustworthy. I have heard not one but many say the same thing, and they have been most serious in their assertion.

It is said of witnesses that children are most truthful, men next, and women least truthful.

This accusation of lawyers has come to me most forcibly in reading the account of the Orpet trial. There we have the spectacle of a great number of young women telling different stories and contradicting each other. Some of them are necessarily telling falsehoods. There is the story of "Jo" Davis, contradicted by other girls. Then there is the story of Florence Russell anent Anna Paulson's violent weeping, which in turn was contradicted.

The trial to some extent seems to have become a partisan affair and every one seems to be on one side or the other. The testimony of each witness suggests a possible test as to whether the witness is a friend of the defendant or the deceased girl.

We express no opinion upon the relative credulity of the various stories—but we wonder if the lawyers' accusation against the sex is not justified.

A woman's affections, they say, will largely control her actions. She doesn't have the same sense of honor. She sees only the result she desires and directs her efforts to that end. That it requires a falsehood seems to deter her not. "It is better to lie a little than to be unhappy much," as Blanche Bates said in "The Darling of the Gods." In other words, "truth for truth's sake" doesn't seem to be a woman's motto.

In the face of the overwhelming evidence we must admit some basis for the charge. A woman is more susceptible to emotion and is no doubt actuated by impulses different from those of men.

ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

Twenty Pounds in-5-Weeks ... total gain of my model Helene ... Barnett says Antoinette Donnelly

If you missed the Antoinette Donnelly series telling how she reduced Mrs. Lane thirty-six pounds in six weeks send her a stamped, addressed envelope and she will mail you complete exercise and diet instructions. Any other questions on obesity will be glady answered by Miss Donnelly.

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

FROM 109 pounds to 129 pounds in five weeks is the record weight gain of my model, Miss Helene Barnett. This makes an average gain of four pounds a week. Miss Barnett, who is 26 and 5 feet 6 inches, should weigh 135 pounds. By following my instructions as to diet, exercise, hours of sleep, and general mode of living she has succeeded in bringing her weight within six pounds of standard weight according to her age and height.

As I have explained in previous articles, I worked with Miss Barnett two weeks before any satisfactory gain in weight was accomplished. During these two preparatory weeks Miss Barnett gained three and one-half pounds and lost them again on account of a slight illness. However, these two weeks proved to be valuable time spent on Miss Barnett. During the time she learned to take daily walks, to deep breathe as she walked, and to practice deep breathing generally; she learned to eat the foods which she had been depriving her system of, to its obvious detriment; and she learned to live more hygienically.

At the end of these two weeks my model started out with the same weight, 109 pounds, as in the beginning, but from then on the increase in her weight has been tremendously satisfactory. Miss Barnett's work resulted not only in the gain of the twenty pounds but in an increased bust, filled in neck, increased waist measure, and rounded out hips and calves.

From 31½ to 34½ inches was the increase in Miss Barnett's bust measurement; from 30¼ to 33¾ inches was the chest development; from 20 to 24½ inches was the increase in the waist measurement; hips, 32 to 36½ inches, and neck from 11½ to 13 inches.

The photographs illustrated on this page show plainly the beauty value of flesh covered bones. The improvement in Miss Barnett's face and neck, with the drawn lines supplanted by plumped up cheeks and filled in hollows, is really quite remarkable. And the improved figure is correspondingly gratifying to the eye.

Miss Barnett has done nothing in her work of putting on flesh that cannot be accomplished by any other woman. There is a possible exception, perhaps, and that is the daytime sleep I advocated for her. But if your hours are those of a business woman you can take at least a fifteen minutes' rest at noon and make up the balance of the time by going to bed earlier at night. The walking can be done, too, by the busy woman in the morning and evening. If she cannot walk all the way to work she can walk a few miles of the way. The same thing applies to the return home.

The whole point of putting on flesh is the desire to do so, and a strong enough desire to be willing to do the things that are absolutely necessary to accomplish the desired end. A system of strenuous exercise is not necessary to gain weight, but enough exercise must be given muscles to supply them with blood and nourishment that are necessary in the performance of their functions.

The deep breathing exercises come first in order of importance to the person who wants to gain. They afford almost the only hope to counteract the damage done to the lungs by the sitting, stooping position at the desk, over sewing machines or whatever the occupation may be; they counteract also to a degree the lack of muscular training. They are recommended not only to the lean and flat chested but to the normally healthy as well.

Deep breathing exercises guarantee the necessary strength to resist the unavoidable strain of the everyday life. They develop the chest. And in a well developed chest lies the secret of a well developed body. It requires a well developed chest to have a well developed heart and well developed lungs. To cramp these organs in insufficient space means to undermine all the vital processes of life. The chest development has a controlling influence upon the location of the upper abdominal organs—the kidneys, liver, spleen, stomach, and parts of the bowels. If the chest is narrow and undeveloped these upper abdominal organs are prone to sink, lose their strength, and consequently perform their functions unsatisfactorily.

Therefore if you wish to build up get the deep breathing habit and practice it morning, noon, and night and all the time between times. The development of Miss Barnett's bust and chest was due to her faithful adherence to the breathing exercises. There can be no bust development where there is a badly developed chest.

The condition of the air is of importance when breathing. Never take breathing exercises in bad, too cold, dusty, or dry air. A good ventilation of the room before beginning is indispensable.

Too much cannot be said in favor of swimming. The exhilarating contact with air and water, the healthy strain upon the muscles, the correct position of the body, the removal of the excretions from the skin, the stimulation to heart and blood vessels—all make swimming the most ideal and healthful of sports. Miss Barnett practiced the breast swimming strokes every day in her room. As soon as weather permits she intends to go swimming every day.

The diet she adhered to I described in previous articles. If you missed it, as well as the instructions for the exercises I gave her, I shall be glad to mail them to you if you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope.

As to baths, if the constitution is sufficiently strong for the morning plunge, take it by all means. It is invigorating. It tones the skin. But be sure that you suffer no ill effects from it. If you feel that you do not react promptly discontinue the plunge and take a cold sponge. The hot baths are not to be taken by the woman who would put on flesh. They are weakening if persisted in. The tepid bath is the best to take. It cleanses and is not enervating.

I want to call attention to a fact that is not always recognized. It is the responsibility of defective teeth toward constitutional weakness and nondevelopment. There are two ways in which defective teeth may influence constitution and development. On the one hand, they make proper mastication impossible, and thus harm digestion. On the other hand, they are a source from which the body is constantly poisoned. Pus and decaying matter continually exude from them, are swallowed with the saliva and food, and frequently disarrange stomach and bowels and cause chronic ailments.

One of the chief hindrances to a lean person getting fat is the losing heart in the attempt, thinking it useless to do anything for oneself, and then throwing all effort aside in disgust. If you are thin you can't get fat in a day nor a week—nor two weeks. Don't relax your efforts even if it takes a couple of months. Every one who attempts to do what Miss Barnett has accomplished will not be so successful simply because every one will not work as faithfully as she has done. But if you work half as faithfully you may have the joy of twenty pounds at the end of ten weeks—and this is worth working for, too.

The real beauty of gaining weight is the feeling of new life it gives you. As Miss Barnett says "I feel as if life were worth while again. And when I meet my friends and acquaintances the look of surprise and their first question, 'What are you doing to make you look so well?' make me feel as happy as a youngster and as full of hope again as a young debutante."

Answers to Inquiries.

MINNIE T.: Dyes and bleaches will ruin the hair. The hair becomes dry and brittle and coarse after it has once been dyed and it is almost impossible to keep it the one shade. In addition to this dyes are liable to cause neck and facial eruptions. Any other shade of hair except what nature gave you would not be in keeping with your complexion. So why be so foolish as to go contrary to nature. I have a formula for a shampoo for blonde hair which I shall be glad to send you if you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope.

A WORRIED GIRL: This is an excellent lotion for freckles: Sodium sulphocarbolate, fifty grains; glycerin, two fluid ounces; rosewater, one fluid ounce; alcohol, one fluid ounce. Apply the lotion night and morning with a piece of absorbent cotton. Yes, I received your letters, but there were many letters ahead of yours and each letter has to be answered in turn. The best soap for the face is pure imported castile soap. A stamped, addressed envelope would have brought you an immediate reply.

FLO: Sweeping, lifting weights, swinging Indian clubs, and swimming are good exercises for developing the arms. The weights should be fairly light at first, beginning with perhaps two and one-half pounds and gradually increasing until five pounds are used. Face the chest weights, grasp the handles firmly, and hold the arms straight out in front of the chest. Stand with your heels nearly together and far enough away from the weights to raise them a little distance from the floor. Draw the two handles to the chest and almost under the armpits, letting the elbows and shoulders go well back; then extend the arms. Repeat ten times. Practice this exercise twice a day faithfully.

J. C.: The only suggestion I can offer you in regard to your faded wicker furniture is to restain it.

* *

W. E. S.: The wallpaper of which you inclosed a sample is a good neutral tone and will make an excellent background, but will not, of course, reflect the light as the buff would have done. Your apartment will seem darker when you have it up. With this paper and the rugs you describe, use blue and taupe velvet for your upholstery, and rose the color of the rose in your rug for your silk lamp shades. In your dining room use old blue blocked linen for your draperies. For your French doors use silk gauze trimmed with filet. Do not begin the curtains at the top of the door, but about a foot down from the top.

I. B. A.: With the things you have and the exposure you mention, a light warm gray would be your best choice of color for your side walls. I can best describe the shade of gray I mean by saying that in mixing it, cream color has been used instead of white. This is a delicate neutral tone and makes an excellent background. Thank you for your compliments and interest in my column.

* *

J. D. M.: Yes, it is possible to make red mahogany brown, but I should not advise you to do this yourself, but to put it in the hands of an expert refinisher. The brown and red mahogany may be used together without fear of clashing. You should be able to use blue and gray striped upholstery well with the colors you have in your rug, and pearl gray would be excellent for your side wall. Furnishing a five or six room apartment all in furniture of one type has many advantages. Often, however, the bedroom is made an exception, and enameled furniture is used in the bedroom.

MRS. O. R. W.: Grays in soft rich tones with burnt orange or delft blue would be becoming to a girl with brown hair, brown eyes, and a sallow complexion.

WAITING: Tangly hair can easily be combed by taking time to separate the snarls with your fingers. Grasp the comb between the thumb and the first two fingers and carefully draw it down the length of the hair. Two or three gentle efforts of this kind will generally disentangle the snarls without pulling out the hair.

C. M.: With your gray walls and blue rug a gray and blue chintz with touches of yellow would be pretty for your living room draperies. The same could be used for the couch cover and have a gray, a blue, a yellow, a black, and a sage green cushion on your couch.

* *

A. J. B.: I do not believe there is any chance of your restoring its natural color to the Wilton rug which your man has tried a solution on and which is now just little "splotches of green and yellow here and there." Your rug could be dyed, but not restored.

Doris Blake Says

If you were born this week you are Domestic.

Have you a perplexing love affair in which you need the counsel of a friend? Write to Doris Blake, care "The Sunday Tribune." If you wish a personal reply send stamped and addressed envelope.

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

IF your birthday falls during the week beginning June 25, you are innately domestic and motherly, even if a man; exceedingly fond of your home, true to those you love, and intensely affectionate. You have splendid executive ability in the management of your home and are devoted to your children. It is only your extreme sensitiveness that gets you into unhappy predicaments, for if your feelings are hurt you are apt to lose heart and abandon whatever you have undertaken.

Being of such a naturally sympathetic and emotional nature, you will make an excellent nurse. As a housewife, you are the soul of economy and industry, rather plodding like your prototype, the "crab," but so anxious to provide for those dependent upon you that they don't mind your idiosyncrasies. Judging others by your own friendly feelings, you are sometimes misled by a show of good fellowship.

If you are married and your wife is of another sign, you will have a stronger hold upon the children than she. In fact, the men make better husbands than the women do wives, though Cancer women make wonderful mothers. Both Cancer men and women, if deprived of a home, sometimes become wanderers on the face of the earth, unhappy themselves and a source of unhappiness to others. But so sensitive are you to unpleasant surroundings and inharmonious relations that if you find yourselves chained to these conditions, the result may prove fatal to both your health and disposition. Far better to lead a solitary life with the love of friends than to wreck your life by an unhappy marriage. So it is, that Cancer folk should think long and carefully before making this step.

Whether man or woman, single or married, you are extremely fond of dress and finery. You can arrange flowers, place furniture, or twist a piece of ribbon so that the result will be the "last word" in artistic decoration. Poetry and love are your basic nature, so it is only natural that you would have special ability to render sentimental music, into which you seem to throw all the pathos of your nature. Air castles are your delight, so it is that you enjoy the company of your own thoughts and while in this state you don't like to be interrupted.

You have much self-reliance and you love to rule; however, if, on some occasions you are denied this privilege, you won't break your heart over the deprivation. You desire to be known by every one and your domineering tendencies make this possible. As a teacher, you are sure to succeed and to be loved by your pupils. Along with this quality you have a thirst for knowledge that is truly commendable. It must be added in justice to you that though you resent compulsion, you are easily ruled by kindness.

And how you do like to delve into the mysterious! Your natural psychic powers and intuitions are strong and you sometimes depend too implicitly upon deductions made in this way. You can often see clearly into conditions that seem like darkness to others. Crablike, you avoid a hole out of which you have once been routed, but you should remember that when you are acting under the influence of your best judgment, you should carry the project through and should not throw it up because some busybody has interfered.

You will be fortunate when the moon is on the increase and should avoid entering on new business during its decrease.

Don't marry too young; be well on the road towards conquering your faults before you think of marrying. A marriage with your opposite pole, Pisces, Feb. 20-March 21, probably would prove most harmonious, for Pisces has a natural sympathy with the contradictions of your nature that would help you overcome them. Scorpio, Oct. 24-Nov. 22, likely will prove a congenial mate, as may also Aquarius, Jan. 21-Feb. 19

Your colors are orange, green, and russet; birthstones, emerald and black onyx. Professions manufacturing, and literature, with a special emphasis on the esthetic side in both cases.

He's Deeply Perplexed.

"Dear Miss Blake: I've known two young ladies for some time. I see each about three or four times a month, and from their actions toward me, I understand they each have some affections for me. These girls are about 20 years of age, and are both nice. I think neither of them has a steady friend, though each is popular.

"Do you think it wrong for me to be in their way, as I have no understanding with either of them and connot talk of matrimony for about four or five years to come? I like their friendship. That is why I keep them both in suspense.

"G. H. N. R."

It's a poor game that three can't play. If you give these girls no cause to think that you have serious intentions toward them, and they each know of your friendship for the other, I see no reason why this pleasant triangle can't continue. However, if you see that either is falling in love with you, then you, as a gentleman, should cease your visits. I wish you the best of luck, and hope that at the end of the five years you will have been fortunate enough to have retained the friendship of at least one of these girls.

He'll Probably Return.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am writing these lines to you as I am in love with a friend and would like some advice about it from you.

"I am a girl of 16 and am in love with a boy of 16. He said he loved me, but it does not look that way, for as we were walking along the street one Sunday afternoon he continually cut up and I told him if he did not behave himself I would get some one else. He then got mad and has treated me coolly ever since.

"I told him that I was sorry if I had made him mad. I would like to know if I am to make up with him first or whether I did wrong in making up with him before. I love him dearly and would like to have his friendship again.

"M. J. B."

If you don't like the way he acted, why are you so anxious to make up? One shouldn't criticize those she loves too severely; that is, until she has the right to do so. I think if you don't act too anxious to renew the old ties that he may come back from sheer curiosity, if for no deeper reason. He will be so surprised to see you act this way that he will say "Well, I thought that girl was in love with me; I wonder what's happened?" Try it instead of the heart-broken, overanxious, running after method so popular 'mongst deserted maidens.

ETIQUETTE by ELIZABETH VAN RENSSELAER

Any question on etiquette will be answered if you write to Elizabeth Van Rensselaer, "Chicago Sunday Tribune." If you wish a personal reply inclose a stamped, addressed envelope. Please write on one side of the paper only.

BESIDES being unkind and poor policy to correct or find fault with a house servant or employé of any kind before a third person, it is a distinct breach of etiquette and marks a lack of good breeding in the person who does it.

Family disputes in the presence of an outsider are another infraction of good manners hard to forgive. Many a man criticizes, before a guest, the food his wife has provided for dinner, or the manner of service; many a woman finds fault with her husband, in the presence of a visitor, for his habit of being late for a meal, or of tracking mud in the house, or of reading the paper at breakfast. All unawares are these fault-finders of the fact that they themselves are much more reprehensible than their recreant spouses and have outraged good manners by thus dragging others into family disagreements and bickerings.

It is a fact that it is almost impossible to quarrel if the voice be kept at a low, gentle pitch. Try it and see. If there is a quarrel where both sides preserve this quiet, soft tone, it will, at any rate, be a well bred quarrel.

M. W.: It is not necessary to send a wedding present if accepting an invitation to a wedding. In fact, the giving of such gifts is much overdone. There is no reason for putting mere acquaintances under such obligation as the acceptance of a wedding present implies.

MARGARET W.: 1. It is better always to remove gloves for luncheon or dinner, or even when only eating ice cream. Eat nothing stickly or likely to spot or stain while wearing gloves. 2. and 3. The woman follows the waiter at the restaurant or the usher at the theater; her escort follows or walks with her. 4. I think that it is pelasanter to use a paper napkin at a café than a handkerchief. It helps keep the gown unspotted to have the napkin in the lap. 5. Tell your escort what you would like to eat or drink, but always let him give the orders to the waiter. 6. You can follow your own preference in supping from the glass or using a straw.

H. W.: Where the aisle is too narrow for a couple to go together and an usher leads the way, the woman comes after him and her escort follows close on her heels. The woman always enters a theater or restaurant ahead of the man with her. She also goes up or down stairs or enters a room first. If the man's seat at the wheel in a motor necessitates his stepping across the woman he is taking for a drive if she gets in the car first it is quite proper for him to make an apology and enter the car before her and, turning, give her a hand to help her in. Women as a rule do not rise when introduced to each other unless one is much younger than the other, when it is more deferential for the former either to rise or at least half rise from her seat.

CONSTANT READER: For your five day lake trip be sure to take a well made tailor suit and plenty of fresh blouses to wear with it. Also have a neat, all enveloping kimono. A pretty afternoon dress to wear for dinner is also advisable, and a sports hat, one that can't be hurt by wind, sun, or rain.

YOU CAN SIT ON THIS STOVE WHILE IT COOKS DINNER

This is only one peculiar feature which goes to indicate that the

is absolutely unique and as far in advance of any other method of cooking as electric light is in advance of the old tallow candle.

Cord to be connected to any electric light fixture.

Makes Electricty a Cheap Fuel

In all ordinary cooking about 20% of the heat created is actually put to work and 80% escapes into the air.

In the Caloric Electric about 98% of the heat created is put at work and kept at work INSIDE a "fireless cooker." Waste is negligible.

Keeps the Kitchen Cool and Odorless

Since there is no preliminary cooking of the food outside the Caloric, and no heating of stones, the kitchen may be kept as cool as a shady porch, even while roasting beef and boiling potatoes.

And since no heat can escape—neither can any odors. All the rich juices and delicious natural flavors are retained in the food, where they are healthful and appetizing—not allowed to cool in the air and become unpleasant.

The Caloric Electric is as simple and easy to operate as the electric light switch in your parlor.

See it at your dealer's or write for descriptive booklet.

Real Love Stories

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

> Do you know a real love story—one that is stranger than fiction? It is the idea that is wanted. No attention will be paid to literary style. "The Tribune" will pay $5 for every story published. Manuscripts will not be returned. Address Doris Blake, "The Tribune," Chicago.

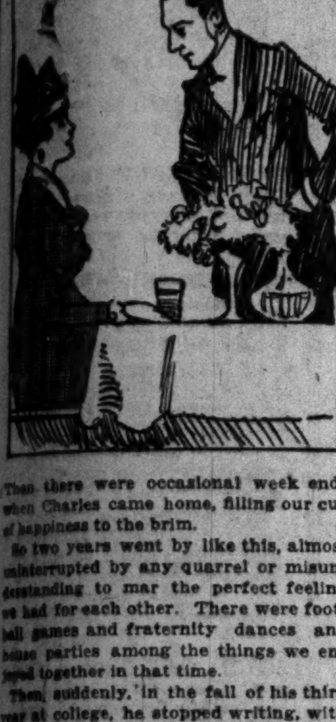
Put to a Test.

WHEN Charles and I were in high school together in a town in Massachusetts, our friendship soon grew into a stronger attachment. This was so recognized and accepted by both our friends and families that our names were habitually coupled, and we were invited to the same parties and dances as a matter of course.

These first early years held nothing but happiness, with one pleasure after another for us, until finally Charles left home to attend a college not far distant. After this our love was expressed in daily letters, and these were looked for with fresh anxiety and pleasure each day.



Then there were occasional week ends when Charles came home, filling our cup of happiness to the brim.

So two years went by like this, almost uninterrupted by any quarrel or misunderstanding to mar the perfect feeling we had for each other. There were football games and fraternity dances and house parties among the things we enjoyed together in that time.

Then, suddenly, in the fall of his third year at college, he stopped writing, with no apparent reason. Thinking him ill I wired his roommate, but received no reply. Finding it difficult to understand his silence, and knowing no reason for such, I continued writing to him for several days, first pleading for some word, then threatening to construe his silence as an end to our love.

As his letter failed to appear I despairingly accepted this last conclusion, and grieved myself into a half sick condition.

My family were naturally angry at this treatment of their only daughter, and refused to hear his name spoken in my home. Then to help me forget they sent me to a boarding school, where I spent the greater part of the next two years, making new friends and enjoying the life. But in all this time I could not forget Charles; rather, my love for him seemed stronger with time, and the hope that he would sometime come back to me rested deep in my heart.

I remember once after a big football game in which he had played with considerable skill, bringing victory to his team, I came face to face with him for a few moments. My feelings nearly obliterated my vision for the time, but I caught the old flash in his eye for me before I turned away to some friends. This little incident made life seem even more colorless afterward, for it brought back to me a fresh realization of what I had lost.

I tried harder than ever to put him out of my heart and to become interested in other men; but nothing could fill the empty place his going had left.

Then he graduated from college and became connected with a brokerage firm in Chicago. When I heard of his departure for the distant city my hope wavered and nearly died out; for his friends spoke highly of his ability and brilliance and I expected he would climb high on the ladder of success, leaving me farther and farther behind.

I was alone at luncheon in a downtown hotel one day in Boston, waiting for my mother, with whom I had planned an afternoon of shopping. The dining room was only partly filled, and on glancing around casually my eyes met and held those of a man not far away. Well, you may have guessed it was Charles; and after looking at me for several moments he arose and strode straight toward my table. Struggling for composure, I could say nothing; but he grabbed both my hands and spoke my name over and over.

I finally asked him to be seated and waited for him to speak. Well, I can't quite recall now all that he said, for it seems yet like a dream; but he told me he had put me out of his life only for a time, hoping my love would withstand the test of years. On reaching the end of his college course and holding a substantial position in the business world, he had looked forward to asking and obtaining my forgiveness.

Previous to this he had considered himself too young and wholly unfitted for the responsibilities of marriage, and knowing the depth our love had reached, he had decided that temporary separation was the best solution.

I listened to him with mixed feelings of joy and anger; but under the spell of his nearness and the avowals of love falling from his lips, I forgot the pain and disappointment his unusual course had caused me and placed my hand in his in silent response.

We waited for my mother, not without some apprehension, which was all dispelled when mother saw the perfect happiness in my face and heard our explanations.

That was seven years ago, and I have been his wife since then, and a very contented wife, indeed, with no resentment for the time my love endured such a hard test. For, after all, real love survives when all else has perished, and hope is the greatest incentive to live. C. B.

Housekeeping Mistakes.

> Did you make absurd mistakes when you first started housekeeping? Of course you did. Every bride has. So tell us about it. And if you are a man—well, surely you can remember what your wife did. The funnier the experiences the better. For every letter published "The Tribune" will pay $1. Keep your story on one side of the paper and within 300 words and address it to Housekeeping Experience Editor, "Chicago Sunday Tribune." No manuscripts returned.

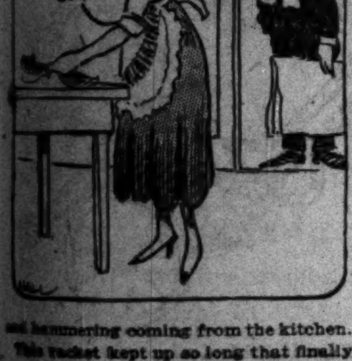
Beat It to Death.

One day shortly after my marriage I stopped on my way home at the market and purchased a fine thick sirloin steak for our dinner.

I took it home and gave it to my wife to cook, sat down, and began to read the paper.

Soon I heard the noise of pounding and hammering coming from the kitchen.



This racket kept up so long that finally I went to the kitchen to see what was going on.

There was my wife pounding that expensive steak for all she was worth.

It seems the poor girl thought all steaks must be hammered if they were to be tender. F. C. J.

Looked for Dead Cat.

Although I have been married a number of years, my friends and also my daughter's friends, never get over teasing me about my first mincemeat. I had only been married a few months when my aunt from the country came in and brought me some mincemeat. I was delighted, got out my cook books, and went to work, chopped my meat, added apples, raisins, etc., and put them in a large stone jar to season.

As the weather was cold I put the concoction in the bottom of my kitchen cabinet; the kitchen was warm, and in a few days the whole house smelled terribly and I could not find the cause. At last I decided a cat had died under the house. We looked, but could find no cat. Just at this time my aunt came to visit with me, and, of course, asked about my mincemeat, and I went proudly to show her my first mincemeat. Well it had seasoned all right. I had forgotten to cook the meat. It all went out in the garbage can and we did not look for the dead cat any longer. Mrs. H. K.

Rice Soup for Weeks.

Although I am not a bride nor a wife I was given the opportunity to be chief cook and bottle washer. Grandma was ill, mother at work, so I thought that I would surprise the family by having rice soup.

Without asking for suggestions as to how much rice to use, I sent little brother to the store for a pound of rice. I put that pound into the soup. Thinking that it would not be near enough rice for six I promptly sent for a half pound more. That, too, went into the ill fated soup. I fairly flew around the kitchen, thinking about my grand surprise, but my dreams were shattered when I went to dish the soup out, for what I found looked more like nice white popcorn than it did soup. I explained to the folks, and they gave me the ha ha, but I didn't see the joke. The result was, rice diet for a week, for both the family and the dogs. P. W.

It Wasn't Ground.

My wife is a good cook, and she frequently surprises me with something new. One night I brought a young gentleman friend of mine home from the office for dinner, and my wife served a nice meal which included cake.

My friend was the first to bite into the cake, and as soon as he did he looked sheepishly, first at one and then at the other. We inquired the reason and he drew from his mouth a whole clove. The young fellow said: "I would have swallowed it and said nothing, but was afraid it was a tack."

She had used two teaspoonfuls of whole spice instead of ground spice. J. H.

Pronounced It Hopeless.

I shall never forget the first Sunday morning on which my wife let me sleep late. While I lay dozing I could faintly hear her about the kitchen, humming softly to herself. Later, while I was shaving, she proudly announced that a glad surprise was awaiting me in the kitchen.

Believe me, it was some surprise! She had taken my month old panama, in which I had invested fifteen large dollars, and attempted to clean it with a mixture of vinegar, pumice stone, and flour, or some such combination—an artistic achievement she had recently learned from some neighbor.

She assured me after it had dried in the sun it would be just like new. Next morning I sneaked it downtown to a professional cleaner, who pronounced it a hopeless case. L. W.

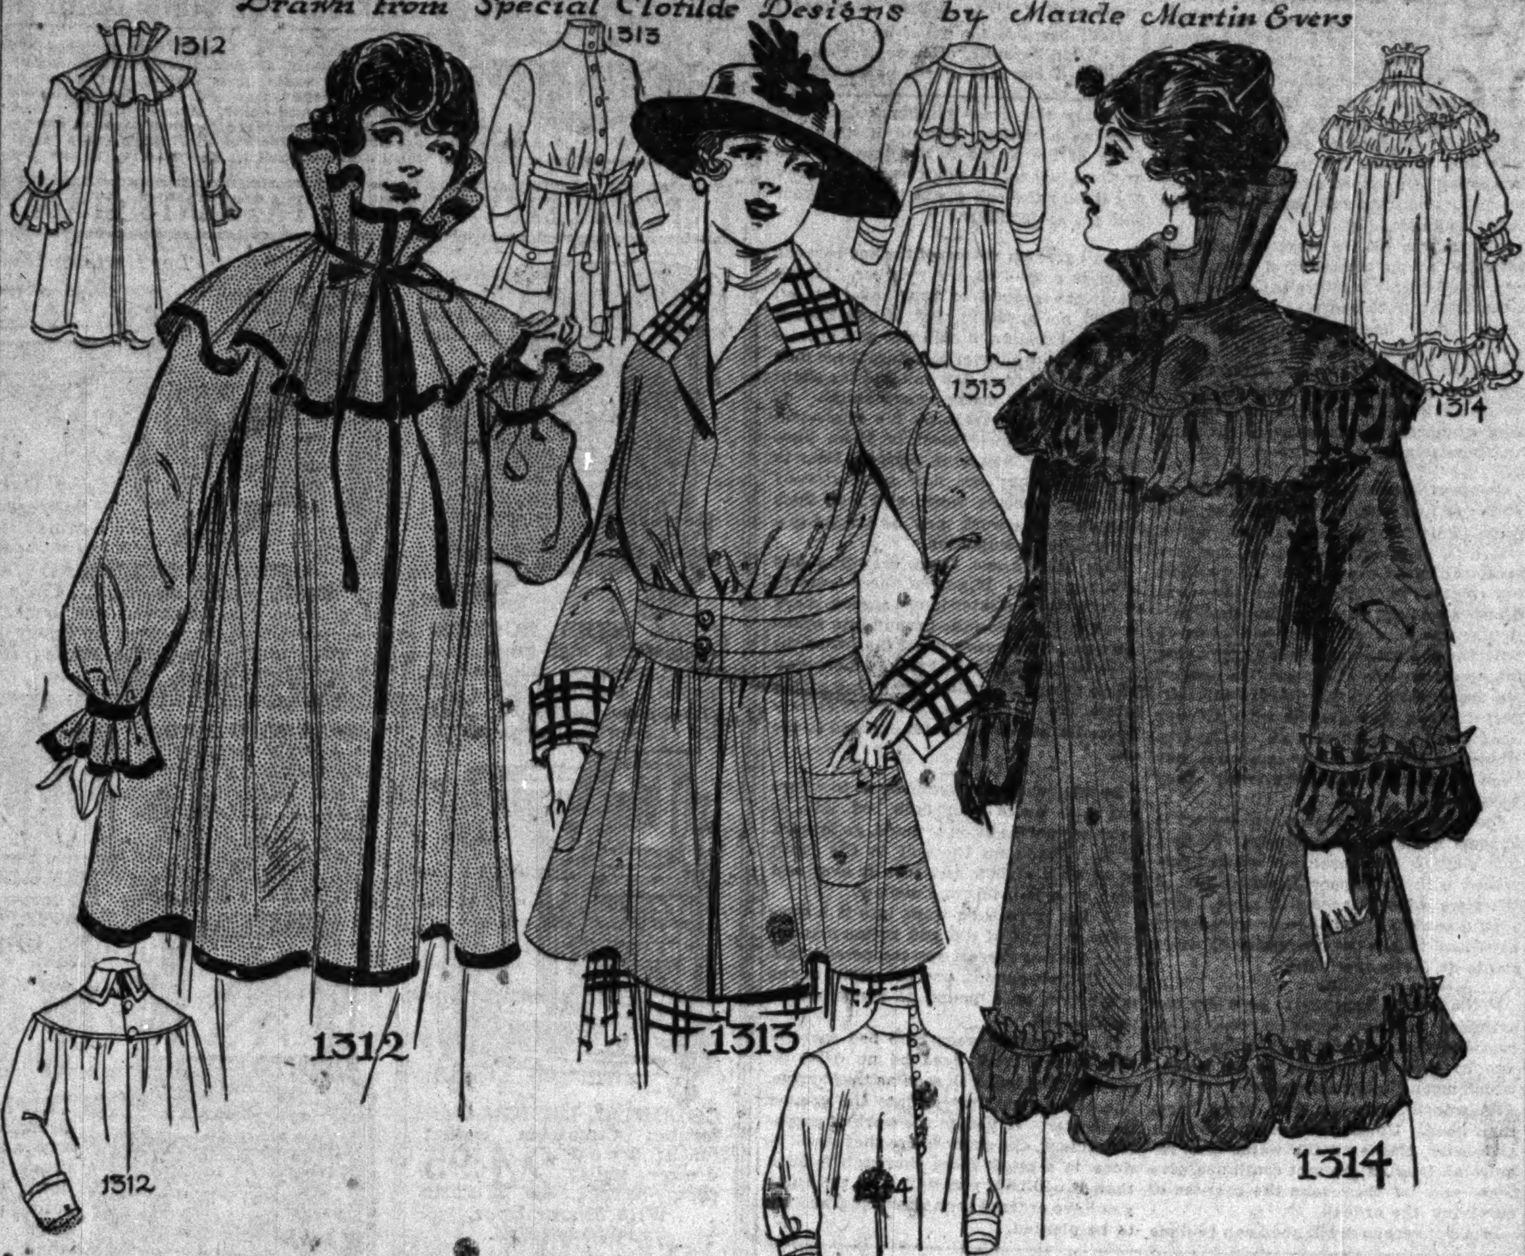
PATTERNS by CLOTILDE

THREE OF THE SEASON'S BEST STYLES IN COATS

Drawn from Special Clotilde Designs by Maude Martin Evers



No. 1312—Coat with cape, 16 and 18 years. For the 16 year size will be needed 6½ yards of material 36 inches wide, 5 yards 44, or 4½ yards 54.

No. 1313—Belted coat, 34 to 44 bust measure. For the medium size will be needed 4¼ yards of material 36 inches wide, 4 yards 44, or 3¼ yards 54.

No. 1314—Loose coat, 34 to 44 bust measure. For the medium size will be needed 7¾ yards of material 36 inches wide or 5¼ yards 44, with 2½ yards 36 or 1½ yards 44 for the trimming.

SINCE summer is as much the season of coats as winter time these three coats have been designed primarily for summer and for early fall wear.

There is nothing more stylish than capes right now, and pattern number 1,312 is possessed of a smart effect along this line.

For the woman who likes coats with belts No. 1,313 will be practical and desirable. It is up to date at the same time that there is no feature about it which will not be perfectly good in the fall.

No. 1314 is an excellent example of the loose coat for any and every occasion almost. And in this day of flaring loose effects such a coat as this will appear of the moment born.

There is a wealth of material to draw from for coats. Silks first always, and then the vast assortment of sports goods. Then, too, the early fall serges and lightweight wools are appearing, and these are splendid for coats of any and all kinds.

How to Order Your Clotilde Patterns.

In ordering a waist the size should be determined by the bust measure. Give the bust measure. In ordering a skirt the size of the hip is more important than the size of the waist, but give both the hip and the waist measure. Ten cents for each waist, coat, or skirt.

In ordering misses' patterns the age should be stated—12, 14, 16, or 18 years. Ten cents for each waist, coat, skirt, or dress.

In ordering children's regular patterns order them by the age of the child. Ten cents each.

Clotilde's patterns are made in New York exclusively for THE CHICAGO SUNDAY TRIBUNE and may be obtained through no other service. It is requested that customers allow one week before making complaint for nonreceipt. An extra 2 cent stamp will allow for letter postage and thereby hasten delivery.

Wants the Dishes Clean.

I was going with a man and we became engaged. His home was out of the city. On going home to break the news of his engagement to his mother she said: "How do you know she is a good housekeeper?" He replied: "We never go into a restaurant that she doesn't wipe plate, knife, and fork with the napkin. So I know she is, as that first attracted my attention. J. E. N.

Heeding Mother's Warning.

Mother began to warn me that if he did not do something one way or the other she would take matters in hand herself. The prospect of that did not appeal to me at all, so I decided that I would make the best of the first opportunity that presented itself. The opportunity came one evening when we were asked to accompany a pair of Cupid's victims to a near by village where hurry-up matrimony was a specialty. After the magistrate had performed the necessary functions over our friends the bridegroom remarked jokingly that he was ready to return the favor to his best man. I replied, apparently in the same spirit as the bridegroom, that I was willing. The best man called me aside and asked me if I really meant what I said, and I told him I would stand by any meaning he cared to make of it. And mother can't understand why I had never told her I was to be married. C. B.

She Made the Gravy.

We were entertaining a young minister in our home for a few days. I didn't help much with the cooking, for mother was a good cook, but I could make gravy, and made it for every meal, because our guest was fond of it. My husband tells me that is one of the best reasons why I am "mistress of the manse" today. Now, when I prepare a meal without gravy the Rev. Jr., 2½ years old, asks: "Where gravy?" H. S.

Complimented on Good Work.

I attended a party which consisted mostly of old maids and bachelors. We all had a good time, but one poor fellow, whom I had always admired secretly, was made fun of and laughed at because of his bald head. I got up and coldly remarked "Did you ever see grass growing on a busy street?" Later he complimented me on my good work and asked me to protect him. So they rang the wedding bells for us. G. K.

MARION HARLAND'S HELPING HAND

By MARION HARLAND

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

"I WISH to thank you much for several packages of literature received through you. This has been a great treat to my whole family as well as to me. I should like to know if any one having old classical studies for the piano would send them to me. I have a little sister 9 years old who has great artistic talent, and if any one who has any old studies or artistic material of any kind that is not wanted would send them to us, we would be grateful for them, as we cannot afford to buy such things for her. I have seeds of flowers I will send to anybody who would like them. V. C."

I hope there is some one who will comply with her request, and I am sure she will receive applications for the flower seeds she has to give. Her address will be sent on request, accompanied by a stamped and self-addressed envelope.

Make Pretty Beads.

"May I call the Helping Hand my friend? You have no idea of how much it has befriended me. When a young housekeeper I turned to the Corner for recipes and advice, and some of the best dishes I prepare I learned from you. Now I think I can be of a little help. If umbrella china seeds are wanted I can supply them, as I have two beautiful trees. The seeds can be mailed with little cost and are rapid growers. If any one has flower seed to give away I should like some. China berries or seeds make pretty beads. Tie as many seeds as you like loosely in a cloth and boil for a few minutes to loosen the pulp, and they can be washed clean. Dye any color you like by boiling in dye, and string as you would other beads, by themselves or alternately with gold or silver beads. They have been sold in our town for $1 a string, and would make lovely portieres. I should like to know how to make portieres. "LITTLE MOTHER."

I am at a loss to know what kind of portieres she means—it can hardly be of the umbrella tree seeds; she tells us how to string those. Can any one of our fancywork experts advise her? Requests for her address must be accompanied by a stamped and addressed envelope.

Brightens Somber Lives.

"To bring a little light into somber lives, a little cheer and help into dull, restricted ones, is really doing something worth while. I have read the various letters often and with interest, but so far have not tried to do any helping myself. However, if you will put me in touch with the correspondent whose name I send I will send her some of the interesting magazines which have collected in my house. "M. H. C."

The address requested was sent and I print this letter only because of its cordial tribute to the Helping Hand. The Cornerites deserve the best that can be said of them, and once in a while I like to put on record some of the good things that are written to me about them. It is encouraging and inspiring.

Keeping Eggs in Summer.

"I have been referred to you to reply to the question how to keep eggs through the summer in as nearly perfect condition as possible. E. A. A."

The best method I know for keeping eggs is in water glass. Get fresh eggs and test them before putting them down. This may be done by "candling" the eggs—that is, holding them up to the light. If fresh they are more transparent in the center than at the ends. Or they may be laid in a brine made of ten parts of water to one of salt; the good eggs will sink, the stale ones will float. The eggs must be perfectly clean and packed in an earthen jar or crock, the small ends downward. A solution of water glass is made by adding one part of powdered silicate of soda to twelve parts of boiled water. This is poured over the eggs in a sufficient quantity for the fluid to stand two inches above the topmost layer. A weighted board must be placed upon them to hold them down. The jar holding them should be kept where it is dark and cool and not moved unless it is necessary. When eggs are taken out of the solution they should be wiped off and used as soon as possible after they are removed from the water glass. If only a few eggs can be secured at a time they may be packed down in small numbers as they come in, but care must be taken always to have the water glass at least two inches above the uppermost layer.

Wants Pair of Glasses.

"I read in the Corner that A. H. offers four pairs of spectacles, and as I am greatly in need of some I would be so glad to get a pair of those. I am 65 years old, and I will return the glasses if I cannot use them. G. C. P."

I am sorry to say that the glasses offered by A. H. had been bestowed elsewhere before the receipt of this letter. Has any one else glasses to give to this Cornerite?

Invalid Crochets Quilts.

"I see in the Corner that some one has silk or velvet pieces to pass along. I am an invalid and amuse myself by doing crochet quilts and so on, so if I am not too late I hope she can send me some of her supply. I would greatly appreciate them. "T. J. S."

Unfortunately, this correspondent has made the mistake so commonly made, of not sending the signature of the friend who offered the pieces. It is, therefore, impossible to trace her. But will not some one else write for the address of Mrs. T. J. S. and try to supply her with what she needs to cheer her invalid hours?

Can Sew Patchwork.

"It has been a long time since I wrote to you, as I have been ill for a long time and was in a hospital. Now I am better and have regained a good deal of strength. I am again so that I can sew patchwork and I am wondering if any of the Cornerites would have pieces of any kind to spare for me. I should be so glad to have them and thread to work crazy quilts. M. A. C."

This seems to be a full week in the application for pieces. Still, perhaps each one can be helped. I am sure I hope so and I shall look for applications for the address of this correspondent.

Pieces to Give.

"I have just sent a small package of pieces to the friend whose address I received from you. I could help in this way once in a while if it were some one living near, for the postage mounts up when parcels must be sent a distance. Thinking what an immense amount of good is done by the Corner makes me feel that every one should be thankful for it, since there is nothing that makes one so happy as doing for others, and that is something the Corner does all the time. "J. J. H."

I hold the address of this correspondent in the hope there may be some one to whom she will have a chance now and then to send a few pieces. I am grateful for the deserved words of commendation of the Cornerites.

Generous and Acceptable Gift.

"I write to return my hearty thanks for the interest in my request for a go-cart for a worthy little mother. Today the express brought prepaid the dearest kind of a one, better in every way than I had ever hoped to get, and the baby fits in completely. The family are all so much pleased, and so am I, with this most generous and acceptable gift! It came from a friend to whom you sent my address. This kind act will add much comfort to that baby and mother, and I have not words to express my appreciation in their behalf. L. M. B."

Another one of the utterances of gratitude which it does me good to lay before the Corner.

Fruit Beverages.

THE professional mixer of drinks fills a glass one-fourth full of some sirup, adds fresh fruit juices and aërated water, dips in a tablespoon of ice cream, and serves you. Again, he fills the glass one-fourth full of sirup, adds an egg, some milk, and perhaps a powder, shakes the whole with shaved ice, strains it, and serves you. Perhaps to his sirup, which may be of many different flavors, he adds boiled milk flavored with coffee or some prepared cocoa. The number of variations, nearly always starting with the one-fourth measure of sirup, he may make runs into the hundreds.

When I have the gumption, or think an hour can hardly be more profitably spent than in making fruit sirups for the summer enjoyment of myself and friends, I enjoy this true piece of fancywork. With expedition I can make three or four sirups in an hour. A quart of berries, or cherries, or plums can be depended upon to make anywhere from a pint and a half to a quart of sirup. I use both the hot and cold methods, since constant experiment is the very life of interest in cookery.

By using the cold method and then the hot with the byproduct or squeezed pulp I get two kinds of sirup from one measure of berries—a distinct economy. If I pay 15 cents for my quart of fruit, which promises pretty nearly to be the maximum this year, and get foundation for a dozen or fifteen drinks—and I may get more—here is 1 cent apiece for this part of a glass of refreshment. The sugar for each will cost about 1 cent more, and plain chilled water is all I absolutely need to add for a finish.

In most cases the fruit sirup drinks are vastly improved by a few drops of lemon juice or orange or pineapple, though certain mixtures of sirups without fresh juice may be equally palatable. Ice and mint are customary additions. I can add a number of ingredients to my drink and stick a spray of mint in it and still have it cost less than 5 cents, plus my time. The time for finishing is but a slight matter, once the sirups are ready. Five minutes suffices to pour out the sirup, add the water, and fresh lemon juice.

I do not believe I am mistaken in believing that these drinks are more sanitary and safe, as well as one-half as expensive, as any I can have served me in even some of the best shops, where I may pay up to 25 cents for combinations I can make in quantity for 5.

There has been a vast improvement in sanitary appliances at the public counters. Law has forced progress. The sanitary ideas of the owners of these shops are often of the highest, but the sanitary practices of those who serve are often of the lowest. It is not their fault, but the fault of poor life conditions and insufficient training. The washing of glasses and spoons is often indifferently done, and these are rarely dried. To be sure, a thorough young pharmacist who goes back and forth between mixing drugs and mixing drinks will carry ideas of surgical cleanliness to the latter task. However, I have seen people who understood surgical clenaliness perfectly well, because they had been disciplined to it in school, who were perfect slovens in everyday ways.

The preparations used in public drinks are often questionable, and ultimately condemned by the food commissioners, as state food reports show. Political influence has sometimes prevented such condemnation.

Summer troubles often come from drinking unsafe things just as winter troubles come from excessive eating. There is as much need of warning concerning one as the other.

I am not an authority on charged waters, which are inexpensive and do make attractive home drinks, with fruit sirups, often without any addition of fresh fruit juices. No porch refreshment outfit is really complete without the seltzer siphon, although in America it has most generally been a neighbor to the whisky bottle.

The cooking of sirups will be well done by the good cook, and poorly done, like everything else, by the poor cook. A thermometer saves time and attention. They should be cooked to 215 to 220 degrees. The more acid a fruit has the less the sirup must be cooked, while one with little may be cooked to the 220 stage, or so as to coat the spoon. If cooked to the jelly stage an acid fruit will not quickly blend with water, as is desirable. There is also a difference between cooked juice and uncooked juices to which sugar is added and cooked.

The most general proportions are twice as much sugar as liquid, and this liquid may be made with half the measure of water that there is fruit, although some people prefer more and some less. This is also much influenced by the character of the fruit.

Plain Sirup.

For lemonade and for fruit punches a prepared sirup gives body, saves sugar, and less juice is required to make the drink or punch acceptable. The larger quantity made the less liquid should there be in proportion, because the sugar should not be cooked too long. For two cups of sugar use a scant cup of water, stir over fire until completely dissolved, skim if necessary, and cook to 220 degrees. Put in sterile jar and keep in cool place. Good for picnics. Put sirup in glass, add fruit juice and water. Finely cut oranges, pineapple, mashed strawberries, and lemon juice with this sirup, ice, and water will make a good punch without freezing.

Blackberry Sirup.

Fine blackberry sirups are expensive, but popular among those who like variety. Some blackberries are, however, too insipid to use uncooked. To make the uncooked juice for sirup mash the berries, add half their measure of cold water, and let stand half an hour; strain juice, add double measure of sugar, stir until dissolved, skim, and cook a little short of maximum. Put one-half the measure of cold water that there is pulp over it and cook five minutes. Strain this juice and treat in the same way as the other, and you will have the two kinds of sirup. The sirup made of the cooked berries will have a more pronounced flavor, but will be lighter of color. In making cherry sirups the exact opposite will be true.

Crushed raspberries may be treated the same way as the blackberries. A quarter glass of blackberry sirup, plus a few drops of lemon juice and plain cold water, will make a delicious drink. Of course it may be treated much more elaborately.

These sirups are infinitely more wholesome than those made elaborately with vinegar and culled shrubs.

Cherry Sirups.

Sour cherries make a delicious sirup if cooked in half their measure of water, the juice squeezed out, double sugar added, and cooked to about 216 degrees. This is delicious with seltzer water, while the cherries, squeezed raw after they have been crushed and allowed to stand with half their measure of water, do not make so good a sirup, require more sugar, apparently—some cherries do—and it requires more toning up with other fruit juices.

Pineappleade.

Raw or preserved pineapple is almost as serviceable a toner up of drinks as lemon juice. The cooking of this fruit, perfectly, involves various problems. For a fruit punch, or to use with plain seltzer water, the following is a good method of preparing it: Peel pineapple, leaving the leaves on for a handle, and use one of the new small aluminum graters with a handle. Tin is not good with pineapple, neither is steel. These graters do the work better than the old sort, because you move them instead of the material to be grated. It is better to grate pineapple than to chop it, and this method is quicker than that of shredding it with a silver fork, and more thorough.

To each cup of pineapple allow the juice of one lemon, or more if to taste, and pour over the whole a plain hot sirup, one cup to each of fruit. Allow to stand several hours, strain, and serve with seltzer water. Fresh strawberry juice always goes well with pineapple. It also enhances a blackberry sirup.

Answers to Correspondents.

MRS. LAIRD: Tutti-frutti is an Italian term meaning all kinds of fruit (frutti). Combinations of dried fruits in a candy give tutti-frutti candy. One way of preparing a tutti-frutti for water ices is as follows: "Put one pint of brandy into a stone jar, add the various fruits as they come into market; to each quart of fruit add the same quantity of sugar, and stir the mixture each morning until all the fruit has been added. Raspberries, apricots, peaches, cherries, and pineapples are the best to use." A punch made of all the fruits to taste with a plain sirup or a mixture of sirups might rightly be scalled a tutti-frutti punch.

GENEVIEVE: Whip up sour cream, add lemon juice, and then sugar to taste, and a bit of celery seed if you want to, although you will not need, and serve it with your sliced cucumbers. If you have stomach toruble do not try to get any cake to eat, and avoid Spanish rice. Write me a letter and inclose stamped and addressed envelope and I shall tell you why.

MRS. C. F. H.: You can make fried pastries such as French doughnuts over a gas burner, but you know they are not the most digestible foods, and one needs to be a good cook or they become actually dangerous foods.

* *

R. V. N.: Can you make a plain mayonnaise? If so, add to it chopped olives, pickles, capers, a little chopped parsley, a bit of chopped tarragon if you can get it, or use tarragon vinegar and a little chopped sweet pepper and some onion juice, or not, as you prefer, and you have a tartare sauce. One-fourth cup of the main ingredients to one pint of mayonnaise is good measure.

* *

MRS. L. F. M.: Use granulated tapioca, following the directions on the box, and after it is cooked so as to be completely dissolved add your apples, sugar to taste, according as the apples are sour or less sour; add eggs and milk or not, as you choose; grate over a few gratings of nutmeg, and bake until apple is well cooked and pudding jellied. I do not combine acid fruit with tapioca for my table because I wish to have only easy digestive problems. Make a plain sirup for your pineapple sherbet or as above. Custards are watery because cooked in too hot an oven. Egg dishes should be cooked at rather low temperature.

* *

MRS. C. F. C.: My own inexpensive fruit cake is made as follows: One-half cup of butter, one cup of sugar, one and a half cups of flour, one-half cup of milk, two eggs, one-half cup of nut meats or more if you choose, cut up fine or rather coarse, as you will; one-half cup or more of fruit cut fine—dates, figs, a few raisins—a scant teaspoon of cinnamon or not, a fourth teaspoon of almond extract, and whole fruit and nuts to decorate the top. Sift the sugar, add the butter, and rub the two to a cream, to which add the cinnamon or other powdered spices, stirring them in, then beat in the well beaten yolks of the eggs. Add the milk and flour alternately. A level teaspoon of baking powder may be added to the flour if you are an amateur cook, but it is not needed when the work is expert, especially if the eggs are fresh. The cake is of better texture without it and easier to bake. Stir in the nuts and the mruit, which has been rubbed in flour so that every piece is separate. Then add the whites of the eggs beaten stiff and finally the almond flavoring. Cover the top thickly with a fancy decoration of fruit and nuts if you want a handsome cake, brush over with white of egg, and bake for one hour in a slow oven in a well oiled and paper lined pan narrow and rather deep. Use oil to grease pan instead of butter, as it does not burn so readily.

How Actresses Remove Hair From the Underarms

Many are enthusiastic in their use of the sanitary liquid, El Rado. It is the only preparation ever endorsed by Julian Eltinge, foremost impersonator of beautiful women; also Stella Mayhew, Roszicka Dolly, and others.

Whether on face, lip, neck, or arms, El Rado removes the hair so quickly it is no more trouble than washing. Easily applied with piece of absorbent cotton, or small sponge. Does not coarsen later hair growth, as is the case with shaving. Absolutely harmless; no disagreeable odor; money-back guarantee. At all toilet counters, 50c and $1.00.

If you prefer, we will gladly fill your order by mail direct, in plain wrapper, if you will write inclosing stamps or coin. Pilgrim Mfg. Co., 14 East 28th Street, New York.

The AMATEUR GARDENER

by Eben E. Rexford

Summer Work in the Garden.

All questions relating to the cultivation of gardens will be answered if addressed to the Amateur Gardener, "The Tribune," Chicago. Please write on one side of the paper only.

WEEDS should be given careful attention at this time of the year. If one grows and ripens its seed next season there will will be thousands of direct descendants of it to pull. If the gardener would make a practice of pulling up every weed as soon as seen it would not take long to make the garden immune, in a sense. Of course, a few weeds would creep in from outside, but these could easily be disposed of.

The trouble is, we start out enthusiastically, at the beginning of the season, and wage deadly warfare with weeds for a short time, but as soon as our plants get fairly under headway our enthusiasm wanes and then the weed has its inning. The result is that season after season we have great crops of weeds that we would not have if we were to fight against their ancestors a little more consistently and persistently.

Go over the garden at least once a week, and cut away faded flowers and seed pods. This for two reasons, the first of which is, neatness; the second, the prevention of seed production. If we allow our plants to develop seed they will throw all their energies into that particular line of work, but if we interfere with the processes of nature by removing the seed they are attempting to develop we force them, in their desire for self-perpetuation, to begin the work all over again, and in doing this we get flowers where we would get few or none if they were allowed to complete what they have begun.

See to it that all plants which require support are given it promptly. Many a fine plant is lost because it was not furnished with the support it needed just at the time when it needed it most. Successful gardening is the result of constant attention to the requirements of one's plants at the proper time.

If the season happens to be a dry one artificial watering must be resorted to, provided that, after it has been begun, it can be kept up as long as necessary, which means until rain comes.

Spasmodic watering does more harm than good. Unless you are sure you can give your plants all the water they require as long as drought continues, give none, and let them take the chances of surviving the ordeal.

In a dry season much good can be done by using the grass clippings from the lawn as a mulch. Spread it abou the roots of the plants to the depth of two or three inches. When it begins to decay dig it into the soil about them, where it will act as fertilizer.

Don't give up the use of the hoe because there is a spell of dry weather. If you allow the ground to crust over, it can absorb no moisture, but if you keep it open and mellow it will act as a sponge and absorb whatever moisture there may be in the air from dew fall and the slight showers which occur occasionally.

Watch the perennials. We often neglect them because most of them have passed their flowering period. Bear in mind that they are now getting ready for next season's work, and feed them well that this work may be carried to a satisfactory completion.

Keep the grass from crowding and choking them. If any of them seem to reqiure division later in the season, mark them, and prepare the ground into which the new plants are to go, so that when the work of division is undertaken there may be no delay in getting the young plants into place. A perennial is always greatly injured if its roots are left exposed to the air.

Decide, while it is summer, as to where you will make your bulb bed, and, as soon as your decision is made, go to work at it. Spade up the soil to the depth of at least a foot, and turn it over and over until it is fine and mellow.

At the same time work into it a generous amount of old and rotten manure from the cow yard if you can possibly get it. If you cannot, use bonemeal in the proportion of a pound to every square yard of soil.

If you prepare your bulb bed early in the season there need be no delay in planting the bulbs as soon as they arrive, and the sooner they go into the ground the better. If you do the work of preparation now, the chances are that it will be done in a much more thorough fashion than it will be if you wait until the bulbs you have ordered are at hand and waiting to be planted.

Crossing a Crowded Street.

My friend once took her sister downtown. It was crowded and her sister was afraid to cross the street. When a chance came she grabbed a hand and said, "Now's our chance. Hurry! Aren't you glad you have me?" With that she looked up into the face of a young man. "Yes, am," he said. It was the beginning of the end.

Not Over the Telephone.

He always referred to telephoning as "giving a ring." One day he told a girl with whom he had been going out that he would give her a ring about 7 o'clock that evening. She took up the remark immediately and asked: "What kind do you mean?" Needless to say, he took the hint and purchased an engagement ring.

Plans All Made.

My friend took tickets in a movie theater and one night as I handed him my ticket he mischievously grabbed my hand. I unconsciously replied, "Well, which would you rather have?" He said, "Your hand, of course." A few nights later he called and our plans were all made for our wedding day.

A Text from Genesis.

He was a young minister with his head in the clouds. She was a daughter of earth, keenly alive to the allurements of "the world, the flesh, and the devil," as her innocent frivolities seemed to him. Would she abandon them to become a minister's wife, he wondered.

He was shy, as becometh a young minister. Verily would he try to propose again and again. In vain. He would falter, flutter, halt, then lift appealing eyes to her which plainly plead: "Please help me." She longed to help him, but what could a modest maiden do? He decided the only thing to do was to go away and forget her, so he accepted a call in a far city. And all the time she was weeping out her heart in secret.

Just before his final Sunday he said to her: "I want my last sermon to be for you—to appeal particularly to your heart. Please select the text." She agreed, and wrote on a slip of paper: "Genesis, XXIVth chapter and 58th verse."

He flew to the Bible to search the reference. And this is what he read: "Wilt thou go with this man? And she said, I will go."

Way to Lose a Friend.

I had been keeping company with a young woman for some time, but had never ventured a proposal until one evening during a conversation on friendship I chanced to make the remark that a good way to lose a friend was to marry him. She said unhesitatingly, "O Jack, don't say that. We want to be friends, too." This was 'nuff said. We are now married and are still friends.

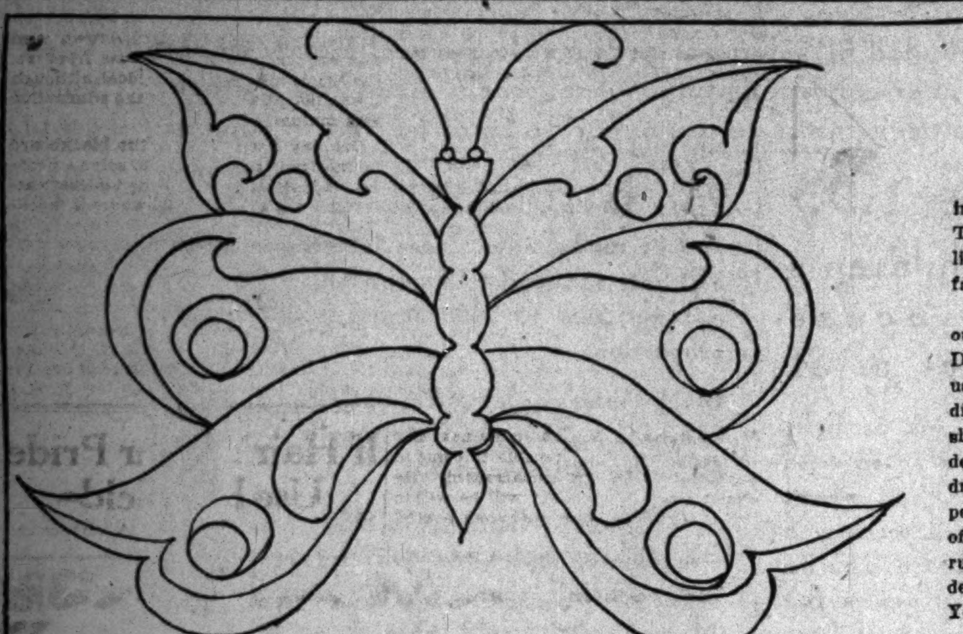
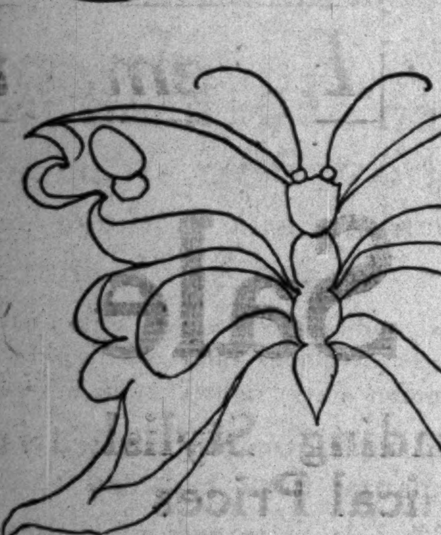
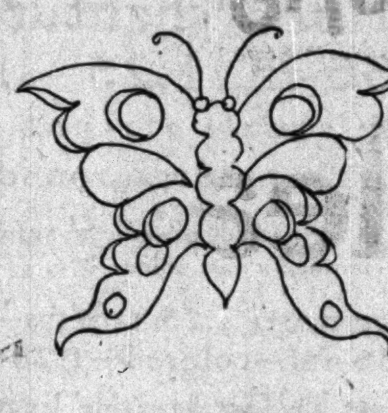
Butterfly Embroidery Design in Three Sizes.

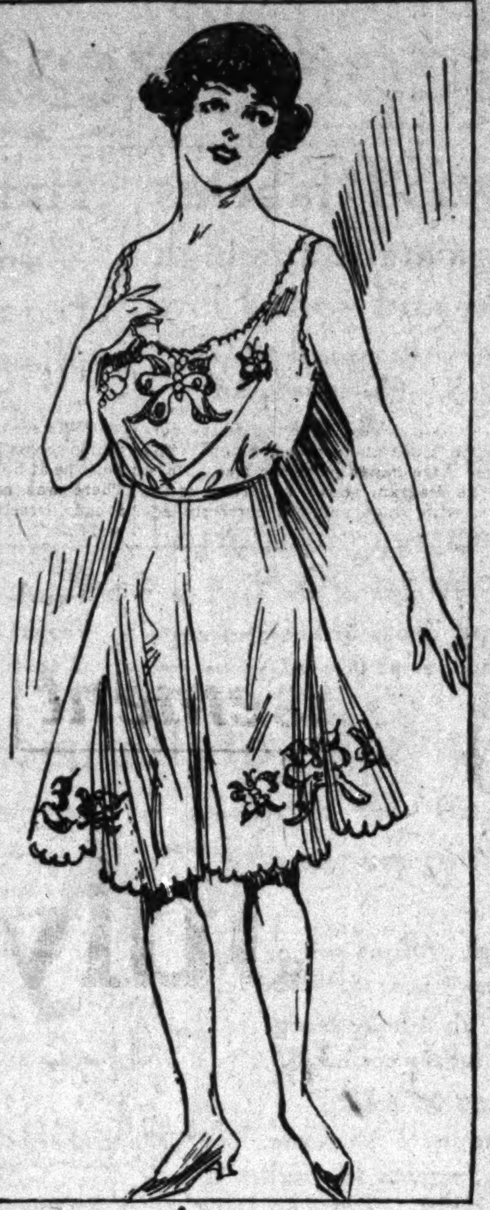






So many requests for butterfly designs come in that several different sizes are run today. These may be used for any and all kinds of lingerie pieces, as well as for other pieces of fancy work for household use.

A satin stitch or a combination of satin, outline, and buttonhole gives excellent results. Detail drawings show method of working. In using the printed design from the paper the directions are as follows: If the material is sheer the easiest way is to lay it over the design, which will show through plainly, and draw over each line with a hard, sharp lead pencil. If your material is heavy, buy a piece of impression paper—the kind that does not rub off—lay it on your material, place the design over it, and trace with a hard pencil. You will find the design neatly transferred.



For and By BUSINESS GIRLS

Mary King.

Miss King will be glad to help business girls solve their problems. If you want a personal answer send a stamped, self-addressed envelope. Address Miss Mary King, "Sunday Tribune," Chicago.

EMPLOYES of large corporations, except those in executive positions, are more often inclined to show their loyalty to an individual rather than to the firm. Especially is this true of women employés. No matter of what their work consists, "the boss" is always the person to whom they are directly responsible, and to this person they usually give their allegiance. The firm is too intangible and impersonal to command their sympathy.

Thus it sometimes happens in case of a conflict between the firm and the man under whose direction she works, in her mistaken idea of loyalty to an individual, the woman employé is often lead into unethical conduct, and even into serious trouble.

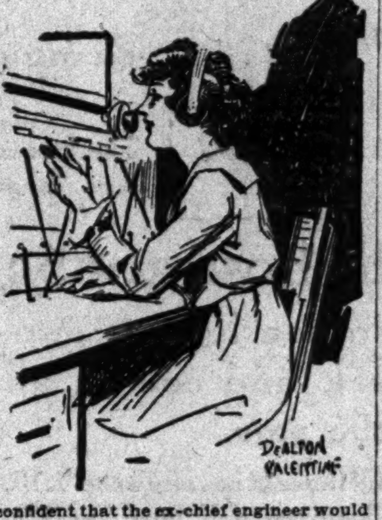
I am prnting the following letter as the knowledge of Miss E.'s experience might possibly be the means of preventing another girl, under similar circumstances, from committing the same mistake:

"Dear Miss King: For three years I acted as secretary to the chief engineer of a large electrical plant. The man was a stern executive, and although his manner toward the men was often blunt and harsh, he treated me always with courtesy and even friendliness.

"I enjoyed the work in his office and willingly did many personal commissions for him. Once in a while, when my work in the department was slack I relieved the telephone operator at the switchboard, and one day while at the board I overheard a conversation between two of the officials of the firm that convinced me that my boss's job was in jeopardy. I took down the entire conversation in shorthand and for two or three days debated whether or not I should tell the chief engineer what I had overheard. There existed a friendly spirit between us and when I discovered that they were contemplating putting another man in his place without telling him in advance all my loyalty to him was aroused and I felt only resentment against my real employers.

"While I was debating as to whether or not I had any right to repeat a conversation I had accidentally overheard, I took every opportunity to relieve the operator without arousing her suspicion and whenever a member of the firm asked for a wire I listened on the line and made notes of any conversation affecting the chief engineer. After several days of doubt a spirit of loyalty to the man I had been so closely associated with got the better of my judgment and I told him what I had heard. He thanked me then, but had little else to say to me.

"He resigned, but not before the man at the head of the plant discovered that I had overheard and repeated their conversations. I was dismissed, but I felt confident that the ex-chief engineer would help me to secure another position, or take me into his new office, as he immediately went into business for himself.



"I waited for several weeks, expecting to have him call me down to his office, but when I did not hear from him I went to see him. His manner was severe and when I asked him if he had a place for me in his new work he said he had not, and that he was sorry, but he could be of no assistance to me in getting another position.

"I was terribly hurt and also furious at him and at myself, and although I did not have great difficulty in getting another job for myself, I made a mighty resolve that hereafter I would keep my own counsel about things which didn't concern myself, and also my loyalty would be to the firm and not any particular individual.

"My humiliating experience might be of benefit to another who is inclined to let her womanly sympathy get the better of her judgment. L. F."

SMALL PIMPLES ON BABY'S HANDS

And Feet. Grew Larger and Spread Rapidly to Limbs. Itched and Burned. Caused Disfigurement.

HEALED BY CUTICURA SOAP AND OINTMENT

"When my baby was about one year old small pimples appeared on her hands and feet. They grew larger and spread rapidly to her limbs until it seemed that her whole body would be covered. The pimples were hard and red, and seemed to have clear watery heads which oozed out water that hardened, and formed scales. They itched and burned and were very much aggravated by her clothing. Wherever the eruptions appeared, it caused great disfigurement.

"We began using Cuticura Soap and Ointment. In a week she was entirely healed." (Signed) Mrs. W. G. Carpenter, Amelia, Neb., July 14, 1915.

I knew a man who was always complaining if his meals were not served the minute he came home from work, so one evening as the whistles were blowing his wife put his supper on a tray and carried it out to the gate, leaving it on the gate post. The Home Harmonious

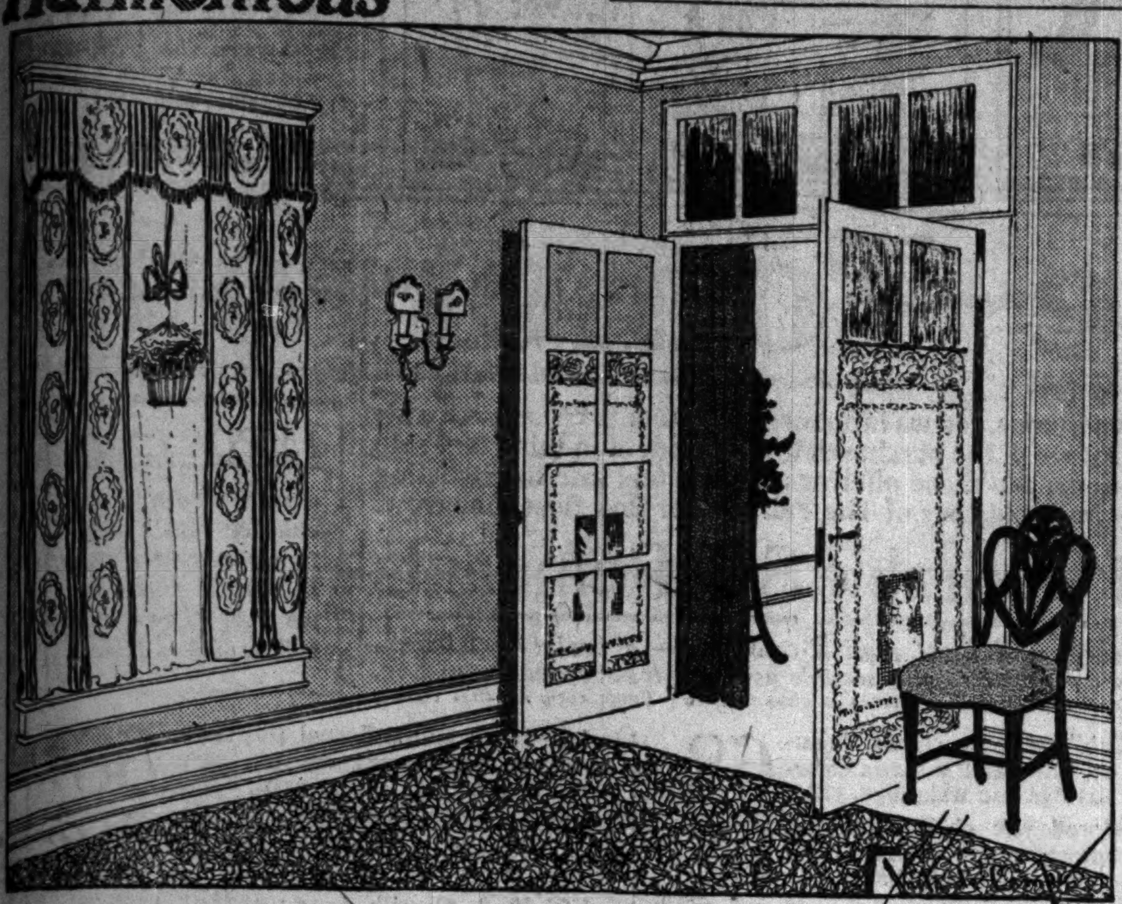
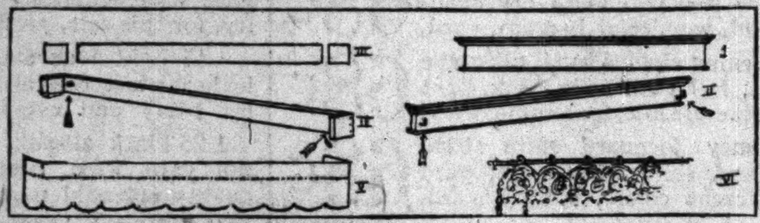
NOTES FROM THE DECORATOR'S WORK ROOM

Anita de Campi



WINDOW CURTAINS AND DRAPERIES.

Miss de Campi will be glad to assist the home maker in any problems pertaining to interior decorations. Address your letter to Miss Anita de Campi, "Sunday Tribune," Chicago. Inclose a stamped, addressed envelope if you wish a personal reply.



In the professional decorator's workrooms the most rigid attention is insisted upon in matters which might to the casual observer seem to be of minor consideration. One visitor may remark to the other: "Did you notice that little clumps of flowers were tacked to the bands that looped the curtains back?" and the other may answer, indifferently: "Were there flowers on the curtain cuffs? I didn't notice."

To the decorator those small bunches of flowers were undoubtedly the keynote to the whole room. They had not been applied by a mere happy chance, but after deliberate study. The three tones seen in the flowers were almost certain to comprise the color scheme of the entire room. They may have been old ivory, coral and chocolate brown, or peacock blue, bronze, and a touch of scarlet or old rose, sage, and baby blue or royal blue, cinnamon brown, and steel gray, or any other of a thousand combinations; but a little triplet of colors somewhere in a room is certain to indicate a color scheme. All of the other colors, if analyzed, will be sure to prove either repetitions or combinations of these three.

The good decorator will have made such an earnest study of color that his results will never be accidental. He will not only know when a combination offers superb satisfaction to the eye, but he will know why as well.

An ignorant or indifferent workman can by poor execution spoil the best planned work. Grievous mistakes, on the other hand, can be easily righted by an accomplished artisan.

You are told, for example, to use casement curtains that will draw back and forth, as inside drapes; to use these at all of the windows, and to dispense with the ugly, stiff, dark roller shades. The casement curtains may be made of silk or linen, and lined with a pretty colored striped lining, so that they look lovely with the daylight glowing through them when they are partly open, and they certainly afford privacy when drawn closed at night.

They are found to do well in the living rooms, but, O, the bedrooms! On the "morning after," when one wants above all things to sleep late, the most ardent devotee of the esthetic fails to appreciate the beautiful light glowing through the draperies, and exclaims, impatiently: "Why in the world did I ever dispense with those dear, delightful, ugly old roller shades, that would have shut out every bit of this tormentingly awakening light? To think that I made these most atrociously annoying things with my own hands, copied them from a picture in the paper, and put them up, to the utter undoing of my early morning comfort!"

But this discomfort is all due to an amateurish oversight. Casement curtains for bedrooms should be interlined with black canton flannel. This is a little secret of the workroom—one of those nothings that professional people have earnestly thought out for the comfort of their clients. It is just one of many things that I have watched in process of construction. Another is the making of lambrequins, and another the trimming of French doors.

Lambrequins look in the pictures as though they were shaped pieces of goods tacked right on to the window frames, but they are not; neither are they made to frames that are nailed to the window frames. But they are made to frames that are adjusted to the window frames by means of hook end screws and screw eyes, so that they may be easily lifted off on cleaning day and brushed and put back.

The skeletons upon which such lambrequins as are shown in the sketch are built can easily be made at home. The wood used is a little less than half an inch thick. The strip across the top measures the exact length of the window frame top just below the molding that finishes the extreme top edge of the window frame. The strip should be about three and a half inches wide. A small piece the same width and thickness as the strip is placed at each end of the strip, making a right angle with it, and this will come around the outside of the window frame right to the wall. Once you get the idea of how it is done you can readily do it.

For the sake of clarity I am making a little diagram sketch of the construction. No. 1 shows the top of the window frame. No. 2 shows the same with screw hooks in place. No. 3 shows the three pieces composing the lambrequin frame. No. 4 shows the inside of the lambrequin frame with screw eyes; this must be turned toward the window and the screw eyes set right to the hooks. But first it must be covered with the cloth. The dotted line in No. 5 shows about the depth to which the skeleton frame comes under its cloth cover.

If the lambrequins are scalloped, be sure that the center of the middle scallop is tacked to the middle of the frame, and then go on tacking to the right and to the left from the center.

In the same way, if the cloth is figured, see, before cutting, that the principal pattern comes to the center of the framework.

Fringe should, of course, be sewn on before the tacking is done. To put on the fringe, after the scallops are cut the desired shape turn and baste the edges of the goods up on the right side and cover these raw edges with the fringe beading. Baste all carefully before stitching, as the work must be neatly done. A puckered, crooked lambrequin is the ugliest thing on earth.

On the French doors in the sketch is shown the latest approved style of door draperies. They are panels made of silk gauze and cluny and filet lace. Each panel is finished at the top and bottom with a wide, scalloped edge piece of cluny. The whole thing is not shirred on rods but left hanging as straight as a towel. It is bordered at either side with narrow cluny insertion, as indicated in the picture. Toward the bottom an oblong piece of filet lace is set in.

The trimmings may vary. Sometimes two oblongs are set in, but the panels in all instances are fitted to the doors so that the upper row of small glass panes is kept uncovered.

The most novel detail of the whole scheme is the manner in which the curtains are adjusted. A tiny ivory ring is whipped to the top of each upturned scallop of the lace and a small rod passing through these rings holds the curtain in place at its proper height. The lower edge hangs perfectly free. No. 6 in the diagram shows a portion of the lace, with rings and rod correctly adjusted.

My Most Embarrassing Moment.

They Were Uninvited Guests.

A friend and myself had intended to call upon another friend, but had never done so. One evening we decided to make the long promised call. We felt sure that our friend would be at home, so did not think it necessary to inform her that we were coming. When we reached the house the blinds were closely drawn, but we could see that there were lights in the living rooms and decided that some one must be at home. Some one was at home! There was more than one; in fact, we found ourselves uninvited guests at a wedding!

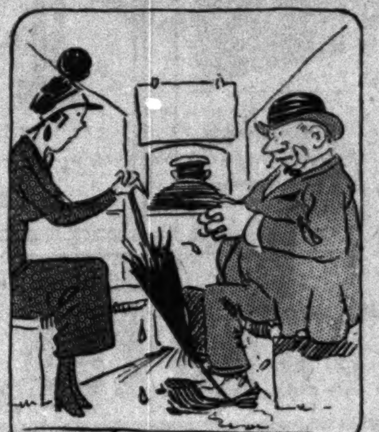
Put It in His Slipper.



I was going out to take my music lesson on the jitney bus. There was a foreigner sitting across the aisle. He had on slippers. It had been raining, so I had my umbrella. I stuck my umbrella down in his slippers. You can imagine my embarrassment when I looked up and he was smiling at me. I took it out and excused myself. By that time it was time to get off.

"Yes, Father," She Said.

I was 16 years of age when I left the Catholic parochial school, and was seeking a position a week after my graduation. We addressed the priest as father, and answered, "Yes, father," or "No, father," as the case might be.

During my first interview with Mr. Stone the manager of the X. Y. Z. company, I was quite nervous, and when he asked me if I would report for work the next morning, I said: "Yes, father." He smiled and I nearly cried.

I was going to call him up the next day and say I would not be able to come to work, for I felt so embarrassed. He wasn't married then, but will be within six months, and I'm going to be his wife.

"D."

Her Shattered Dreams.

I was 16 and third year in high school. A great big auburn haired, brown eyed boy sat just two desks across from me, the boy of my dreams, my ideal, although I was not at all sure that the admiration was mutual.

One day I was sent to the blackboard in the front of the room to solve a problem in algebra. While the teacher's attention was attracted elsewhere a "note" rolled down at my feet. Eager to know its contents, I opened it at once, with heart all a flutter, but found to my utter chagrin a huge safety pin and the words, "A stitch in time saves a multitude."

Upon investigating I discovered a horrible, unaccountable hole in the heel of my stocking. So my castle of dreams was shattered for all time.

20 Years of Wear for only $1.30

Here is a Pure Aluminum Kettle that is guaranteed to wear for 20 years of hard everyday use. This "18-92" Brand 5-quart preserving kettle costs only $1.30 at your dealer's—just a trifle more than 6 cents a year. Too small a cost to figure. That's what makes "18-92" Aluminum ware so economical and so good.

18-92 PURE SPUN ALUMINUM Cooking Utensils

QUALITY FIRST
TRADE MARK MADE IN AMERICA

are the only Aluminum Cooking Utensils that have proved out for 20 years. They are made in one piece from thick, strong sheet aluminum by the originators of Aluminum Cooking Utensils. They won't chip, peel, crack nor rust. They will give you twenty years of unbroken service. There are no "ifs" nor "buts" to our guarantee. If any "18-92" Utensil fails you in any way, we will replace it or refund the price you've paid without argument or quibble.

There's no cooking utensil that's as good as aluminum. There are no aluminum utensils that equal the "18-92" utensils for quality, for looks, for thorough workmanship and beautiful finish. But "18-92" utensils cost no more than others that don't carry a guarantee for 20 years. You will probably never have to restock your kitchen again, once you have equipped it with "18-92" ware. Even if you bought only a piece a month, it wouldn't take long to complete a whole set—and when you've bought your last piece, the first will be as good as new.

Buy "18-92" Aluminum Utensils for economy and long service: for quality, for dependability. Remember there isn't any such thing as a substitute for "18-92" ware, so never accept anything offered "just as good." Look for the "18-92" trademark on the bottom of each utensil and the big tag with red maltese cross trademark attached to the handle.

Third Annual Silk Sale—Tomorrow

IMPORTANT

Because of the great variety of pat erns, we cannot fill mail or phone orders—and none of these silks will be sent on approval.

FOR a time it seemed that we would not be able to hold our Annual Silk Sale. Silks of all kinds were becoming scarcer and scarcer and desirable lots, at big concessions, seemed totally out of the question. But we were determined—and sent representatives into the market to secure every surplus stock obtainable.

OUR concessions were enormous, for we influenced the mills to co-operate with us—and the unusual nature of the purchases will be evident in this great sale tomorrow. So sensational are these offerings that we feel safe in predicting the greatest silk selling day in the history of The Fair, on our 2nd floor tomorrow.

IMPORTANT

Quantities are limited and we must, therefore, reserve the right to restrict purchases. None of these silks will be sold to dealers.

Never Before Have We Offered Such a Vast Variety of Desirable Silk Remnants

THOUSANDS upon thousands of yards will be on sale tomorrow in desirable lengths of high class novelty silks. Those who recollect our previous annual silk sales will remember the crowds and, profiting by these past experiences, will attend this sale early in the day.

HERE are the newest weaves and most stylish colorings—a variety positively beyond description. Here are silks for every possible use—at prices beyond comparison. Lengths are from 2 to 10 yards—and thousands of pieces to choose from. Come early for first choice.

North Shore Adds Good Quota to Army Going South

By Mme. X.

TUESDAY was one of those gray, chill, drizzly June days which have so often this month given the city dweller the laugh on the poor wights summering (save the mark!) in the country. Winnetka is one of the prettiest, sweetest spots around Chicago. It is also one of the greenest and wettest, and last Tuesday its greenness and wetness were raised to the 'nth degree, much to the depression of a temporary inhabitant, when suddenly the landscape became kahki colored.

At the end of a leafy, dripping tunnel appeared a khaki clad figure, with two women walking one on either side. A motor dashed by with Francis Butler in the uniform of Battery C, and his pretty young wife sitting close to him. Another car splashed through a lurid tarvia puddle—they are oiling those streets these days—and Mrs. Howard O'Brien at the wheel was driving her khaki clad spouse home for a final visit before he started for Springfield.

In every direction one saw the youth, strength, and pride of the community, in military array, having a final lookin on their respective families before starting for Springfield and the fateful unknown that lies beyond that.

The young manhood of Winnetka makes a fine showing in this preliminary call of the nation. No other Chicago suburb sends—I was going to say so large or representative a quota, but it is politer to say one larger or more representative—to the defense of the nation.

Gone from the early morning trains, from the Indian Hill golf course, from a dozen tennis courts, from a big round table at the University club, from banks, offices, and marts of trade are Lawrence Houghteling, Joe Husband, John S. Miller Jr., Thorne Taylor, Donald Macpherson, Douglas Stewart, Goddard Cheney, Henry Favill Tenney, Robert Laird, the two Matz boys, Lawrence Howe, young Hale of the Winnetka bank, and the two first recorded, Francis Butler and Howard O'Brien. These are all Winnetka's contribution to Battery C, and join Bruce Smith, Albert Farwell, Newton Perry, Maryn Johnson, N. S. Davis Jr., Willard Kitchel, Lawrence and Perry Smith, and the rest of Capt. Staver's gallant command.

Militia Stops at Border.

It is not perhaps generally understood that they, together with the rest of the I. N. G. and other state militias, can only be used for the defense of the country. To be sent into Mexico they must all reenlist in the regular army. This is a slightly comforting thought to many a young wife and mother whose bread winner has gone to Springfield with probably the Mexican border as the next destination and by so going has interrupted the maintenance of the family. Already steps are being taken by THE TRIBUNE and a committee of women—wives and sisters of some of these volunteers—to take care of these stranded families.

The personal sacrifice which even a temporary national service implies is one more argument against the colossal folly and injustice of a volunteer system, or any system which does not include universal military service and a sharing equally of the responsibilities of fighting for our country. The waste and undemocratic nature of such a system cries out against it.

Winnetka is also furnishing a fine batch of men to the two battleship training cruises which, on the Rhode Island and the Maine, will give American men the same sort of experience of sea service as the various camps gave last summer in military training. Among the Winnetkans going are Ayers Boal, George Massey, Edwin Clark, Dillian Hale, Lloyd Steere, John T. Boddie, Alan C. McIlvaine, and Bowles King.

The spirit animating the men who went last week and the women they left behind them is serious. There is no enthusiasm for "war, glorious war." But there is on the part of some of the women a sense of resentment against the methods, or lack of them, of the organizing powers. One mother was justly wroth because her son, who volunteered to help fill up Battery C, was accepted without examination of any kind and sent to Springfield with no other equipment than an overcoat too large for him; nor were any side arms available for him. His mother was rejoicing that next November she can express effectively her resentment against an administration responsible for such a state of things.

Meanwhile the women are preparing to do their part. Lake Forest women abandoned golf and cards long enough to devote several hours daily last week to rolling bandages and making other hospital supplies in the Aldis playhouse, so that yesterday a big consignment was shipped from there to the front.

In all the suburbs women are organizing societies to supply American war hospitals if the need arises.

More Comfortable in Town.

Those Chicagoans still staying on in Chicago are congratulating themselves on the fact that they are not braving this inclement season in the usual summer resorts. Mr. and Mrs. James Waller are awaiting the return of their daughter, Mrs. John Borden. She took her two small girls to Seattle a week ago to say good-by to their father, who starts about now on his polar fur trapping expedition—if the Mexican imbroglio doesn't make him change his plans.

The Watson Blairs left town only yesterday for a short stay in Cooperstown, N. Y., before going to Murray Bay. The John C. Blacks also departed yesterday for the arctic clime of Bar Harbor. The Edward Blairs are not in such a hurry for the frosts of Maine and are lingering in Chicago before going to this same fashionable and delightful resort.

Mrs. Potter Palmer and the Honoré Palmers, who plan to spend the summer together are still debating as to the rival summer charms of Colorado and the White mountains, and in the interim are enjoying Chicago's bracing air and resources for pleasure.

The Saddle and Cycle is a favorite haunt of townspeople, and the big club dining and dance hall never looked so attractive as now in its new summer dress of cheerful crimson and cream colored cretonnes, which give a most festive air to that rather dark room.

Garden Club Hears Talk.

This is the heyday of garden clubs. Almost every nearby community has such an organization nowadays to the increasing embellishment of the surrounding country. The parent of local garden clubs, the Garden Club of Illinois, had a most interesting meeting in Winnetka last Wednesday afternoon, at Mrs. James Houghteling's, when Frederick Bartlett gave a talk on "Garden Furniture," which he illustrated with views of gardens in Austria and the Tyrol. His interpretation of his title included pavilions, belvederes, teahouses, villas, and arches as part of garden furnishing.

The president, Mrs. William G. Hibbard Jr., presided, and after the talk and tea the company adjourned to the famous quartet of gardens which makes Winnetka the envy of all those outlying districts of Chicago where gardens are a cherished cult.

Not even at Lake Forest, where so much time, thought, and money has been spent on the gentle art of gardening, is there anything quite equal to the exquisite design and floral development of this chain of gardens opening one out of the other through rose embowered arches.

Lying at the foot of a precipitous, grass clad fifty or sixty foot slope, they are so sheltered from destructive west winds that everything planted there seems to grow with a joy and fervor not found anywhere else. Pools, fountains, arbors, tennis courts, lawns, paths, and pergolas are all incidents in as lovely and orderly a wilderness of flowers as can be found in the west.

The authors and administrators of all this beauty are Mrs. Henry P. Crowell, Mrs. James L. Houghteling, Mrs. Hermon B. Butler, and Mrs. Augustus Peabody.

Form National Organization.

Such an important part do gardens play nowadays in the scheme of things that the garden clubs of America have organized to form a national association to exchange data and ideas. This association, which numbers sixty or more clubs, begins its meetings at Lenox, Mass., on Tuesday.

Mrs. William G. Hibbard Jr. and Mrs. Walter Brewster have gone on to Lenox to represent the Garden Club of Illinois, and they will be joined there by Mrs. George Higginson, the club's first president, who is spending the summer at Lenox.

Mrs. Brewster, by the way, is editor of the principal organ of amateur gardeners, a monthly magazine, the name of which has escaped me for the moment, and she is a great authority on the subject. She is carrying out many schemes in her own lovely place at Lake Forest, one of which is a garden of months, each flowering month having a garden to itself. Thus there is a May garden, a June garden, a July garden, etc.

One of the most charming effects achieved in the Brewster place is the wide, flower rimmed pool which, lying to the east of the house, mirrors the main façade of this—is it an Italian, a French, or merely a Howard Shavian chateau? Whatever its period, it is a delightful edifice, both inside and out, and fulfills the main duty of a house in expressing its owners.

This is a mission frequently lost sight of by builders of houses and country places. So much emphasis is placed on houses and gardens that the personality of their owners is lost sight of or entirely merged in the various features of these possessions. After all, gardens and residences are merely means, not ends. They should be considered as frames for the lives of their occupants, and frames should never be overemphasized nor lifted from second to first place in the consideration of a community. To be owned by your possessions is not an uncommon American condition.

Saddle and Bridle Plans Show.

Hard on the heels of last week's horse show at the South Shore Country club will be that held at Hinsdale by the year old Saddle and Bridle club of Riverside, Hinsdale, La Grange, Wheaton, Elmhurst, Aurora, Elgin, and the Fox river valley on Saturday, July 1, and Monday, July 3.

This infant equine association—for we opine that it adheres more closely to its name than the Saddle and Cycle club—holds weekly meetings at lovely Natoma farm near Hinsdale, belonging to Frank C. Butler, and plans this big show as the first of a series of similar annual events.

Active among those getting up the show are Frank S. Peabody, Avery Coonley, Britten I. Budd, Frank C. Butler, L. Raymond, H. Victor Keane, Julian Mason, and the association's president, William Elmore Foster, who has long been prominent in South Shore Country club shows.

Among those making entries are Col. and Mrs. Fabyan of Geneva, Ill., and Valentine Crane, son of the Herbert Cranes of St. Charles.

There was to have been a military tournament with the whole First cavalry as a feature on its way to the Springfield encampment. Also one of the stockyards batteries was to have gone through maneuvers there, but as the Mexicans have spoiled these well laid plans, the Illinois naval reserves with their guns will evolute in the big arena being constructed by B. I. Budd on the old Middagh farm. A hundred boxes will rim this arena, which has been designed to take in all the natural beauties of this picturesque and time embellished site.

An addition to the growing colony of newlyweds in that fast developing district north of Lincoln park will be the young Jerome Eddys, whose marriage took place on June 14 at Grafton, W. Va. The Eddys will live in the same honeymoon apartment building at 3144 Sheridan road that shelters the Carter Harrison Jrs. and the young Alfred Manierres (Mrs. Manierre was Miss Edith Harrison).

Mrs. Jerome Eddy was Miss Mabel Kennedy, a daughter of Mrs. Robert Wilson Kennedy, while Jerome Eddy is the only child of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur J. Eddy of Chicago and a great-grandson of Gov. Crapo, one of Michigan's war governors. He is a graduate of Magdalene college, Cambridge university, England.

The Howard Linns are other additions to this motherly settlement, which bids fair to become an important social district, numbering as it already does the Arthur Meekers, the John L. Shortalls, the Samuel Chases, the Carter Harrisons, the Heaton Owsleys, the Edgar Uhleins, Mrs. Louis Huck, and others.

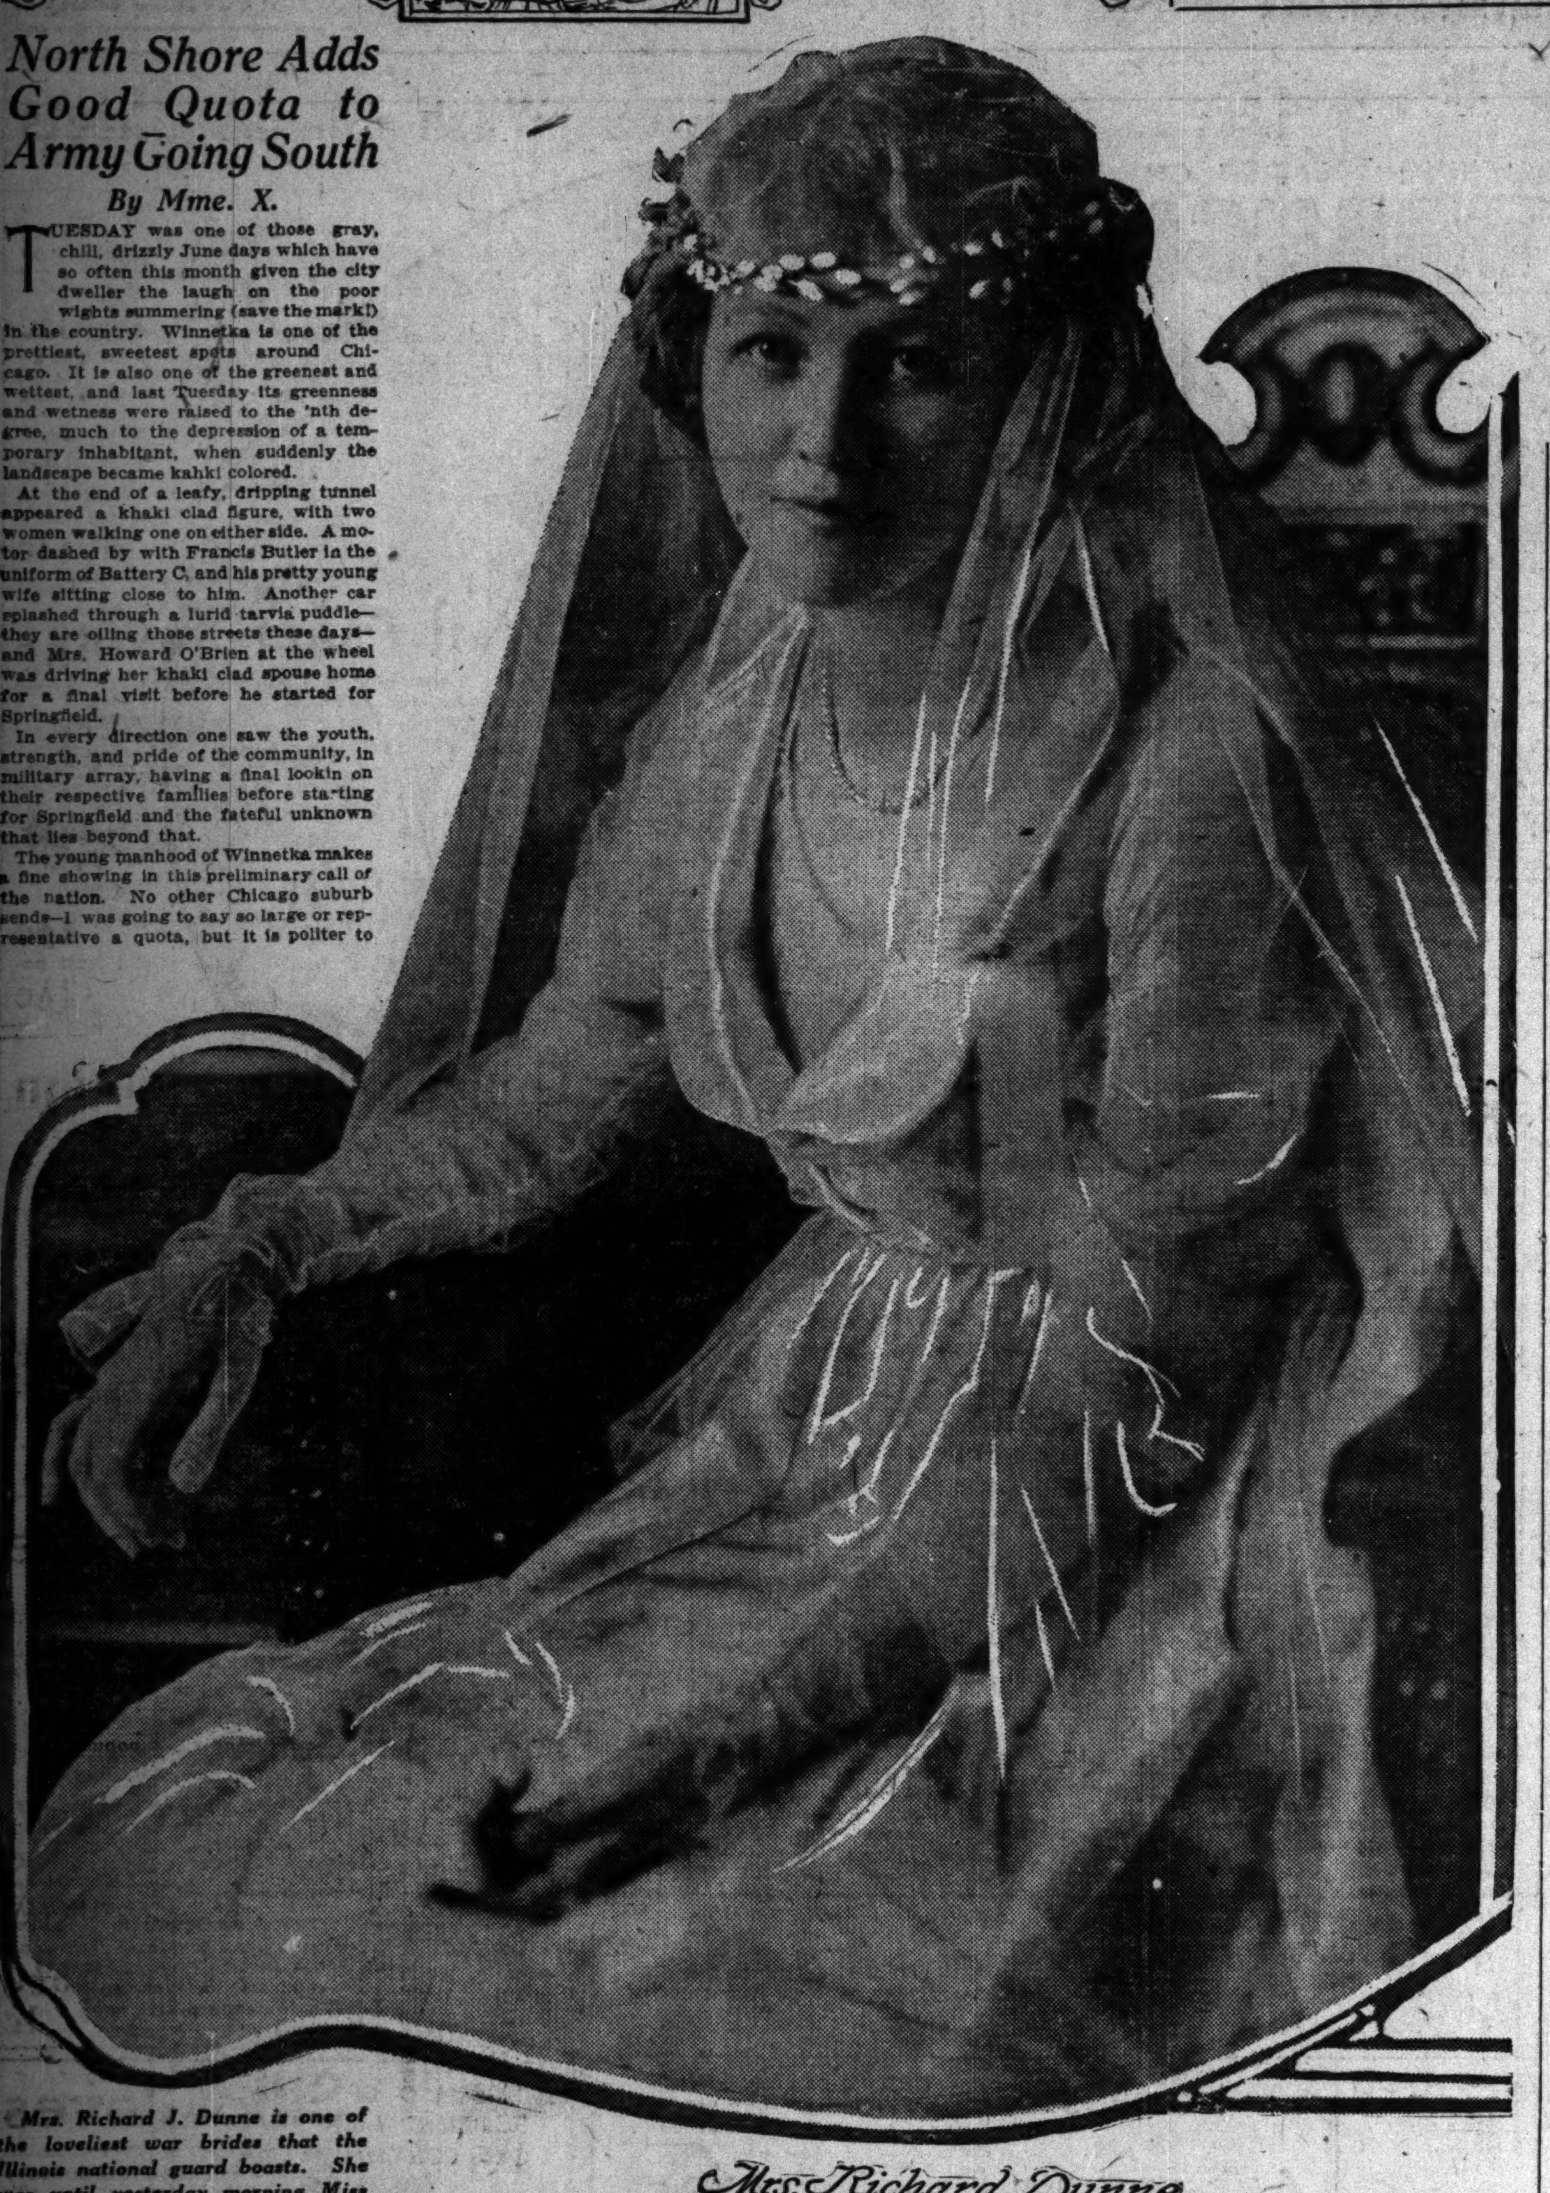
A Lovely War Bride the Governor's New Daughter-in-Law.



Mrs. Richard Dunne

Mrs. Richard J. Dunne is one of the loveliest war brides that the Illinois national guard boasts. She was until yesterday morning Miss Frances Fitzgerald, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry J. Fitzgerald of 3530 Pine Grove avenue. On a five days' furlough from his battery "Dick" Dunne, the governor's son, came from his encampment at Springfield on Friday evening, and Saturday morning at 10 o'clock made little Frances Fitzgerald the governor's daughter-in-law. They have gone off to spend the rest of preir precious five days honeymooning. When his furlough is over young Mr. and Mrs. Dunne will go down to Springfield, he to his command, she to the executive mansion to stay with her parents-in-law until the call to Mexico comes.

NEW YORK SOCIETY By MME. Y

Mrs. J. J. Astor's Marriage Upsets Plans of Friends.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—It was human enough of Madeleine Astor to consider her own romance and her own happiness of paramount importance. It was in all ways reasonable that she should, in the fourth year of her widowhood and the twenty-fourth year of her youth, determine to henceforth trust herself to the care of William Karl Dick.

But none the less the announcement of her intention was a keen disappointment to several socially important individuals hereabouts. Mrs. Orme Wilson for one. Mrs. Wilson has never forgiven Ava Willing Astor for divorcing her brother, the late Col. Astor, and it was her dearest wish—if her closest friends have judged her ambitions truly—to make Madeleine Astor the real social arbiter of New York, the only genuine successor to the late Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish, and thus provide Ava Willing Astor further excuse for remaining in London.

It was Mrs. Wilson who has been given credit for cleverly planning and carrying to a success the first of Madeleine Astor's formal society entertainments in the old Astor mansion a year ago. Those who doubted the possibility of the young woman's ultimate leadership came to the party to judge for themselves, and promptly capitulated. The way was practically cleared for the new leader, and Mrs. Wilson was radiantly happy at the success of her coup.

Loses Prestige of Astor Name.

And then something happened. Largely the something was young Mr. Dick. He became more and more attentive and Madeleine Astor's thoughts of society and what the glories of its triumphs meant to her grew increasingly vague and misty until they faded from her mind entirely. And now, at the very opening of the Newport season, now, with the stage all set, she calmly makes her plans to marry young Mr. Dick, tosses aside her $5,000,000 trust fund, a burdensome bauble withal, gives up the Fifth avenue mansion, from which vantage point Col. Astor's mother for so many years issued the mandates that ruled New York society, and becomes, in place of a spectacularly interesting young widow, a mere matron of the younger set. Her marriage to Mr. Dick does not place Madeleine Astor outside the charmed circle by any means, but it does rob her of the social prestige of the Astor name, and that means a lot.

Now the question is: What will Vincent Astor do? Will he come more than ever under the influence of his mother? And will she, returning to New York for her customary four or five months' annual residence here, take charge of the social campaign? Mrs. Vincent Astor is too young and too frail to meet the exacting requirements of a society leader, even were she the type. But the first Mrs. Astor is socially ambitious. She has the immense advantage of a wide circle of friends in the English nobility. And if she should persuade Vincent to give her the Astor mansion—well, we gather Mrs. Orme Wilson would be a most unhappy woman.

Naturally the Dick-Astor wedding has recalled all the incidents attending the marriage of Madeleine Force to Col. Astor five years ago. Especially the trouble they had finding some one to marry them. The ministers of Col. Astor's church, the Protestant Episcopal, kicked up quite a fuss, if you remember, and it was not until a modest and not overstrict Congregationalist was discovered in Providence, R. I., that the ceremony was performed.

Weather Blocks Summer Exodus.

Nearly every one is still in town. The cool weather and the rain have had literally a dampening and chilling influence on the customary early summer exodus. There are only a few at Newport—Miss Grace Vanderbilt, daughter of Col. and Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, and Mrs. Ogden Goelet being among last week's arrivals. Consequently the plans for the patriotic parade on Independence day still are unformed. This was to have been a preparedness parade, but preparedness has become so common! Even with the elect taking part it would hardly have that air of originality and distinction to which Newport is entitled. So it is to be known simply as a "patriotic" parade. Which is ever so different, as you readily can see. Mrs. French Vanderbilt will march and Corporal William H. Vanderbilt will head a platoon of cadets from St. George's school.

The Allied bazaar, which closed on Wednesday, was another factor in holding society in town. It was the biggest charity of the season, a really wonderful success, and the most startling leveler of social barriers that may easily be imagined. Society for once found itself in the closest intimacy with the common peepul, particularly with the stage.

There was a good laugh at Mrs. George Gould's herculean efforts as the organizer of an auction sale of jewelry. Two million dollars' worth she and her aids were to sell, all the profits to go to the charities.

Mrs. William J. Zeh.

Mrs. William J. Zeh is president of the [illegible] Junior Art and Civic league which is to have a "gala day" on Friday at the municipal pier. The Rev. Frederick Siedenberg and others will speak.

GIRAUD FRERES
PARFUMEURS
GRASSE (FRANCE)

Never before have we heard of such a startling offering of real imported French perfumes from a celebrated manufacturer—the Giraud Freres Perfumery Works are closed down indefinitely, and so their New York office was ordered to dispose of all the perfumes on hand in America at once and close the offices—their perfumes have for years been famous for their rare fragrance that hovers about the person, subtle odors that are as lasting as they are sweet and expressive of delicate taste.

White Lilac, White Rose, Musc, La Riviera, Jasmin, Ess. Bouquet, Mt. Blanc Bouquet, Ylang Ylang.

Whoever admires fine French perfumes should take advantage of this offering, in 4, 8 and 16 ounce bottles; 75c an ounce is what they've always sold for elsewhere—special, while they last (no mail or phone orders filled), in original bottles or by the ounce, at, oz.................... 25c is in most cases the correct corset properly fitted. We harp on this subject so insistently because, odd as it may seem, thousands of women think that they can select the proper corset for their figure. The woman who lets our corsetieres aid her finds not alone figure improvement, but that the corset really can be comfortable and helpful. For this fitting service, a service unexcelled in all Chicago, no extra charge is made. R. & G. corsets are featured so extensively because in them our corsetieres find a model especially designed for every type of figure—a corset that is seemingly made for you. The R. & G. corsets for midsummer bring the slender figure effect, showing the natural curve of the figure at the side, the bust in normal position, with the corset just high enough to touch it, but not to push it up.

The Secret of a Trim Figure

Third Floor—Center

R. & G. corset illustrated is made of dainty pink batiste, low in bust, short in skirt, lightly boned with a generous use of rubber at waist line and at bottom of front steel to allow for the sudden flings and swings of tennis, golf, dancing, etc., at........... $2.50

R. & G. corset featured in a dainty pink dotted batiste, semi-colonial style, with bust medium high and a deep gore to allow the figure to drop instead of being raised when seated, skirt medium long, free hip with a trifle more fullness over hip, which will accentuate the nip at the waist, an unusually dainty garment, sizes to 30, at.. $3

R. & G. corset for the figure that is large above the waist but rather slender through the hip, the high, full bust line supports the bust and the broad, high shoulder braces the back, imparting a degree of comfort unknown during the era of the low corset, white only, sizes to 30, at.. $3

Miss Lisa Behmer and Miss Elsie Lindblom will compete for the position of midsummer queen at the annual festival today of the Swedish National association. It will be held in Oakdell Park, Monee, Ill.

Mrs. Joseph E. Bidwell Jr. is one of the young women who will assist at the luncheon and card party to be given on Wednesday at the Edgewater Beach hotel for the St. Elizabeth Business Woman's club at 1103 North Dearborn street.

Suburban Clubs Plan Picnic for Chicago Children

By Hazel Whitaker.

CO-OPERATION in its most generous sense is being shown in the party which is to be given on Tuesday at Brookfield for about 200 Chicago children, most of whom are utterly unfamiliar with green fields, wild flowers, and running brooks. This custom was inaugurated three years ago by the Brookfield Woman's club, and this year the women's clubs of Hollywood and Congress Park are assisting.

The Chicago end of the responsibility is being shouldered by the Children's Welfare league, which has assembled the 200 children from the Twenty-second street south side district and is paying the half fare rates obtained by the transportation committee—Mrs. G. L. Clough, Mrs. R. D. Berry, and Mrs. W. F. Hoig, the latter president of the league.

Mrs. George La Rue Griswold of Brookfield is general chairman of the affair, as well as chairman of the philanthropy department of the Brookfield club. Mrs. J. E. Clark represents the Hollywood club and Mrs. Robey the Congress Park.

The children are to meet at 9 o'clock at the corner of Eighteenth and Clark streets, then go from there to the Canal Street station, where a special train will be ready to take them out. "The day's entertainment has been carefully planned from all kinds of games dear to children's hearts to plenty of good, wholesome food. There will be prizes for the various events, swimming for the older boys, swings for the younger ones, and best of all, a big grove in which they all can play to their heart's content. And last, but not least, each child will be given flowers to take back home with him. Last year ten mothers came along and there were ever so many "little mothers" who were in charge of wee brothers and sisters. Over 100 of these little folks came from a single block.

All the lunch for the day is prepared and donated by the women from these three neighborhood clubs as well as the prizes and the money for all other additional expenses.

Besides this "pet" philanthropy of the Brookfield club, it is an organization that has been doing things ever since its beginning, which was over ten years ago. From the president's day in the fall, which is celebrated by a luncheon at the Hotel La Salle, to the last meeting in May, these women are active in musical, civic, philanthropic, and educational lines.

Three years ago they were responsible for the building of a public library and have given volunteer service in this work ever since, as well as donating regularly towards the book fund. They have been responsible for the passing of ordinances for the protection of trees and flowers, and this spring the three clubs have united to obtain a law for the better collection and disposal of garbage. During the winter a moving picture benefit performance was given in connection with a general program for the purpose of raising funds to care for local dependent families.

The regular club papers, which are given bimonthly, are all on file with the secretary.

The officers for the coming year are as follows: President, Mrs. William S. Wallace; first vice president, Mrs. W. W. Hunt; second vice president, Mrs. William A. Adams; recording secretary, Mrs. R. D. Berry; corresponding secretary, Miss Jessie McNeil; treasurer, Mrs. S. A. Cooper.

Mrs. F. H. Scott

Mrs. F. H. Scott of 7603 Sheridan road was one of the chaperons for the tenth anniversary celebration of the Nippon Kuradu sorority which was held yesterday at the Edgewater Beach hotel. The committee in charge of the anniversary was Miss Margaret Seville, Miss Sadie Powers, and Miss Mae Norton.

DOWNTOWN CLUBS.

Dr. Clara Ferguson has been elected president of the Medical Woman's club of Chicago. Other officers elected were Dr. Lillian Taylor and Dr. Marie Schmidt, vice presidents; Dr. Rachel Watkins, secretary; Dr. Ione F. Beem, treasurer; chairman of the legislative committee, Dr. Mary McEwen; chairman of the membership committee, Dr. Eleanore Fish; of the courtesy department, Dr. Ethel Rice; of the house department, Dr. Emma McKay Appell. Dr. Sadie Bay Adair is the retiring president. She was made editor of the bulletin which is issued by the club. The next meeting will be in October.

Mrs. Sarah Harwood Darling, who has just completed her year as state president of the Woman's Relief corps, has recently been elected president of the woman's division of the National Bureau for the Advancement of Patriotism. She has inaugurated a vigorous membership campaign among the patriotic women of Chicago. A meeting will be held on July 17.

Mrs. Judith W. Loewenthal, one of the members of the state board of the Illinois Equal Suffrage association, is to edit a new suffrage publication called The National Suffragist. It will be published monthly, the June number being the first. The first issue has articles by Miss Kate Adams, Mrs. Helen Stewart, and Mrs. Kate Wood Ray.

A "gala day" will be held on Friday on the municipal pier by the Perboyre Junior Art and Civic league. The program will include a talk by the Rev. Frederick Siedenberg on "Advantages of Civic Pride," a talk by Miss Mary E. Vaughan on "Philosophy of Art," and a talk by Mrs. J. W. Parker on "Art and the State."

Following are the new officers of the Chicago chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution: Regent, Mrs. Sarah E. Raymond Fitz William; first vice regent, Mrs. Charles Salmon; second vice regent, Mrs. James Augustus Ostrom; recording secretary, Mrs. Amos W. Walker; corresponding secretary, Miss Elsie Joe Fudge; assitant corresponding secretary, Mrs. T. Henry Greene; register, Mrs. Noble C. Shumway; treasurer, Mrs. Harry Clay Ellis; historian, Mrs. William Baden Austin; directors, Mrs. Louis A. Duval, Mrs. Walter C. Nelson, Mrs. Gustave A. Müller, Mrs. James B. Barnet, Mrs. John Shepherd, Mrs. William S. Rabb, and Mrs. Stuart S. Baker.

Mrs. Ella L. Cutler of Evanston was elected president of the Brownleigh club at the annual meeting. Other officers elected at the same time are Mrs. Claire A. Carman, first vice president; Mrs. Ella Morton, second vice president; Clara Louise Hagins, recording secretary; Evelyn A. Seguin, corresponding secretary, and Margaret H. Brown, treasurer. Plans are being pushed to enlarge the club quarters, which will include gymnasium, shower baths, library, and lounging room.

The dramatic entertainment of the senior members' club of the Girls' Friendly society will be repeated at St. James' parish house tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock. The tableaux, scenes, and songs of "An Evening With Shakespeare," will be repeated.

An entertainment will follow the business meeting of Rothschild & Co.'s Employés' Social club on Thursday evening in the Masonic temple. This will be an open meeting.

Tomorrow the philanthropy department of the woman's club of the Allied Drug Trade will give a card party at Garfield park pavilion at 2 p. m.

SOUTH SIDE CLUBS.

Daughters of the British Empire, the Lady Aberdeen chapter, will meet with the Osborne chapter at the home of Mrs. A. Mowatt, 10001 Wood street, on Tuesday to sew for a bazaar.

Tomorrow will be held the regular meeting of the woman's board of the Jackson Park sanitarium at 10:30 a. m., at the sanitarium.

On Tuesday the Sisterhood of B'nai Sholem, Temple Israel, will hold its summer festival at 2 p. m., in the temple, Fifty-third street and South Michigan avenue. The occasion will be in celebration of the tenth anniversary of the sisterhood. The program for the afternoon will be a play by Mrs. Ignace J. Reis, entitled: "A Midsummer's Day Dream." Those taking part will be Miss Ruth Lowenberg, soprano; Miss Melanie Norden, contralto; Mrs. Samuel Kramer, Mrs. Gabriel Lipman, Mrs. Siegfried F. Hirsch, Mrs. Albert Marienthal, Mrs. Julius Baer, Mrs. Charles H. Hefter, Mrs. Manuel Schochet, Mrs. Isadore I. Meyers, Miss Ethyl Levy, Miss Elsie Linnick, Miss Esther Bendheim, Miss Beatrice Goodhart, Miss Florence Marx, Miss Marion Eichman, Miss Helen H. Cohen, Miss Esther Mills, Miss Ruth Livingston, Miss Bertholda Ehrlich, Miss Blanche Grossman, Miss Justine H. Kahn, Miss Mildred Buchsbaum, Mrs. Meta L. Pollack, Mrs. Erna J. Pereira, and Mrs. Leona J. Kline.

WEST SIDE CLUBS.

The Lake View Woman's club, founded by Helen C. Pierce in 1893, has more than fulfilled the purpose for which it was organized—"to know the present time and do what it bids." The first work of the club was the establishment of a free kindergarten which it supported for five years at an annual cost of $500 and which proved so successful that the board of education made it a part of the Prescott school. For several years a sewing school was maintained at the expense of the club and school playgrounds were beautified by the planting of trees, shrubs, and flowers. The Lake View Woman's club is the only one having a public school named for its founder, the Helen C. Peirce school. Through the generosity of private individuals and club donations this school has an unusual art gallery, many reproductions having been copied by students of the Art Institute. The club donates yearly to the Municipal Art league, the Outdoor Art league, the Glenwood Manual Training school, the Park Ridge School for Girls, the Drama league, the School of Domestic Arts and Science, the Chicago Housewives' club, the Juvenile Protective league, the Bonnie Hame association, and the Legal Aid society, besides having an active philanthropy department. The officers and directors of the club are:

President—Mrs. W. M. Hopkins.
First vice president—Mrs. B. F. Bullard.
Second vice president—Mrs. F. E. Hine.
Recording secretary—Mrs. L. B. Sinclair.
Corresponding secretary—Mrs. George Campbell.
Treasurer—Mrs. W. E. Fisher.
Auditor—Mrs. E. B. Whitfield.
Chairman social committee—Mrs. Adam Schneider.
Chairman education department—Mrs. Joseph Frank.
Chairman art and literature department—Mrs. Harry Chamberlain.
Chairman philanthropy department—Mrs. Willett Cornwell.
Chairman economics department—Mrs. Alexander McLean.

The Twenty-fifth Ward Woman's Republican club will hold its regular monthly meeting at 2:30 p. m. on Thursday at the Dixie tearoom. Harry Nubia will speak on "The Presidential Election."

The new home for business women, St. Elizabeth's Business Woman's club, at 1103 North Dearborn street, will be the beneficiary of a luncheon and card party to be given by the Edgewater Beach club at the new Edgewater Beach hotel, Sheridan road and Balmoral avenue, on Wednesday at 1 o'clock. The members of the club who are entertaining are Mrs. Henry J. Briede, Mrs. John T. Connery, Mrs. D. H. Cunningham, Mrs. Rudolph D. Huszagh, Mrs. M. H. McGovern, Mrs. Peter Reinberg, Mrs. Dennis Sullivan, and Mrs. Thomas J. Webb. Mrs. Charles F. Tritschler, social chairman of St. Elizabeth's Business Woman's club, with her committee, will have charge. On the social committee are:

Mrs. Jos. E. Bidwell Jr.
Mrs. Geo. E. Brennam,
Mrs. Julius H. Veder,
Mrs. Daniel Boyle,
Mrs. John Boylston,
Mrs. Theo. W. Buhman,
Mrs. Wm. H. Burke,

Mrs. H. C. Mathison,
Mrs. John H. Powell,
Mrs. James I. Naghton,
Mrs. J. T. O'Connell,
Mrs. M. Pauley,
Mrs. Walter Snell.

On Wednesday the Inter Nos circle will hold its next meeting at the home of Mrs. Wilson C. Auble, 920 Belden avenue. The assisting hostess will be Mrs. W. D. Hallead. Luncheon will be served at 12:30 p. m.

NORTH SIDE CLUBS.

A party will be given by the women in charge of St. Ann's day nursery on Friday at 2:30 p. m., at St. Jarlath's hall, 325 South Hermitage avenue. Mrs. John J. Geraghty and Mrs. Thomas F. Crowe will have charge of the affair, which will be the last party of the season.

This afternoon the civic concert at Garfield park refectory will be under the direction of St. Barnabas' Episcopal church. The Rev. E. J. Randall, the rector, will speak and there will be a musical program by the choir, of which S. T. Bennett is director.

SUBURBAN CLUBS.

Mrs. Josiah Evans Cowles, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, was in Chicago last week, on her way home to California from the biennial in New York. On Wednesday Mrs. Cowles was the guest of the Western Springs Woman's club, the Woman's Club of La Grange, and the Woman's Club of Hinsdale at the Western Springs clubhouse. Mrs. Cowles spent her girlhood in Western Springs and her parents helped to found the village. About 300 women were present at the reception. In the receiving line were Mrs. Louisa H. Darrow, Mrs. C. C. Horr, Mrs. Harriet Merrill, Mrs. Francis Everett, Mrs. Frederick A. Dow, Mrs. John C. Mason, Mrs. H. J. Ilett, Mrs. Kate Williams, Mrs. Fannie Blount, Mrs. Marion Cornell, Mrs. Aurilla Allyn, Mrs. Florence Cropp, Mrs. Mary Graham, and Mrs. Eleanora Young.

An informal dance will be given on Friday evening at the Country Club of Evanston.

On Tuesday the Welfare league will take 200 of the children of the Twenty-second street district to Brookfield, where they will be entertained in the woods by the women's clubs of Brookfield, Congress Park, and Hollywood.

The parliamentary law department of the Brookfield Woman's club will give a luncheon in honor of Mrs. L. Cass Brown at the home of Mrs. William F. Hoig at 12 o'clock on Thursday.

WASHINGTON SOCIETY by MME. Z.

Stories of Hughes, More or Less True, Going the Rounds

WASHINGTON, D. C.—[Special Correspondence.] — Washington is of course fairly humming with Hughes talk. Wonderful how many intimate friends the Hugheses have, all of a sudden, just over night, as it were. And the air is thick with stories of the "interesting if true" variety.

There is one thing that a really intimate friend of the family tells which is rather amusing, and probably true, and that is that Mr. Hughes had never called at Mrs. Hughes' home till after they were engaged. They say, moreover, that it is the one thing that Mr. Hughes likes to tease his wife about, and that when any reference to it is made he just grins, and Mrs. Hughes looks appealing. It certainly must have been an amazing young man, who was so busy at the most impressionable period of life, that he could not find time to call upon his girl until after they were engaged. But that isn't the way Mrs. Hughes explains it.

She had really known her husband for three years before they were engaged. He and her brother had been chums and roommates, and had taken their summer vacations together, and he had plenty of opportunity to meet his future wife. But, you see, he was a clerk in her father's law office, and he was not impressed with the idea of paying marked attention to the daughter of the man who paid his salary.

So it wasn't a case of too busy. Hughes was "too proud to—" O, no, no, no! Not that, at all—too proud to court under the circumstances! Later on, when he was admitted to the firm, it was different.

Protege of Wife's Father.

Mrs. Hughes, you know, was the eldest daughter of Walter S. Carter, a well known New York lawyer in his day, and as another veteran New Yorker put it, "famous for two abiding hobbies—etchings and young men; and in the course of forty years of connoisseurship he assembled an interesting collection of each." Apparently quite a remarkable number of men who later on became distinguished members of the bar in New York and other cities began their careers in that office as protégés of Mrs. Hughes' father.

Among them were William Hornblower, whom Cleveland nominated to the Supreme court; Henry W. Taft, brother of ex-President Taft; Lloyd Bowers, who after a distinguished career in Chicago, died in Washington when solicitor general under Taft; Paul D. Cravath, about the best known corporation lawyer in New York today; Starr J. Murphy and Ethelebert D. Warfield, the one afterwards private secretary to Rockefeller, the other president of Lafayette college, and Charles Evans Hughes. The latter, by the way, has been in some pretty legal fights as opposing counsel in big cases with some of these former office mates of his, notable Taft and Cravath.

It is told also that the late Walter Carter regarded his son-in-law as quite the gem of his collection of young men, though he always had some doubt as to which was his prize etching. He had the most profound respect for the abilities and character of Hughes, whom he was wont to describe as "the brains of the Carter concern" and "the most remarkable man who ever graduated from the law school of Columbia university." Which seems quite likely when it is recorded that at the general examination he received over 99½ on the average marks of three examiners.

On a Visit to Fort Monroe.

A story which the army folk have kept bottled up for seven years has leaked out in these early days of Hughes' reentry into politics. It has to do with a visit which Gov. Hughes paid to Fort Monroe during the Jamestown exposition. The governor of the state of New York and his staff, in all the glory of its beautiful uniforms, arrived to pay a visit of pomp and ceremony, on the invitation, as they understood it, of the major general commanding the department of the east, stationed during the exposition at Fort Monroe. But somebody had blundered and they were not received in the spirit in which they presented themselves. It was very much a case of "nobody home." They marched clanking up to one gate and a sentry chased them away. At the main entrance and armed guard was much more interested in directing a squad of prisoners who were cleaning the road than in receiving distinguished visitors. He waved them over to the office. There was nobody there either.

Nobody met them, nobody paid the least attention to them. They marched past the parade grounds, and a football whizzed so near the governor's head that he ducked and let it knock the wind out of the adjutant general of the state of New York. It took the post twenty minutes to come to life and realize that a visit of ceremony was in progress.

Some one dashed over to the Chamberlain, and dragged Gen. Grant out of the "arms of Murphy," and a lurid dressing gown, to the horrid realization of an awful breach of military etiquette. Then the post was falling all over itself in its efforts to make amends. The governor's glittering staff was the maddest bunch of men that ever took Fort Monroe by storm and was vowing vengeance. What it wasn't going to do was not worth mentioning.

And the governor? He was a good imitation of "laughter holding both its sides." And what is more, he persuaded the only two reporters who were on the job to "forget it," as a personal favor to him, though he knew it was "a peach of a story." There had been a mistake—evidently he was not expected—and not for the world would he embarrass Gen. Grant. And even that beautiful staff had to forget it, overlook the affront to the dignity of the empire state and to the commander-in-chief of its military and naval forces. Whether the reporters or the staff had the worst of it would be hard to say.

Mrs. Hughes Dislikes Publicity.

To a friend who tried to congratulate her on her husband's nomination, Mrs. Hughes responded rather ruefully that while she was of course pleased and proud for her husband's sake, for her own she did not relish the change. "I am naturally averse to publicity, and have been happy in Washington chiefly because our life here has been so quiet, has attracted so little attention," she said. "My life is here, in my home. My husband, my children, my household, fill my days completely. I want nothing more."

Since her husband's nomination Mrs. Hughes has steadily declined to be interviewed. Partly no doubt this is that discretion which is the better part of valor; she realizes how easily, if one opens one's mouth, one may put one's foot in it; how readily some innocent expression on her part might be twisted into something that might seriously embarrass her husband.

She has never allied herself with any feminist movement; she has not been in the least a propagandist, and "this is no time to begin." No one knows where Mrs. Hughes stands on suffrage, for instance, nor yet where her daughters stand, any more than they know where Mr. Hughes himself stands. The impression is that they are inclined to suffrage, but her most intimate friends cannot claim that they have ever heard Mrs. Hughes say so.

Recently it was told that a woman reporter who succeeded in interviewing Mr. Hughes in New York, tried hard to get some expression on the suffrage question out of him. After many approaches that led nowhere she suggested that since the women of his family were so actively interested in that great question, since his daughter had been so identified with suffrage at Vassar, it was reasonable to suppose that he, too, etc.

Washington gasped and then chuckled at the response, "I am intensely interested in my daughter, you may rest assured of that!"

Close Washington Home.

For neither Mrs. Hughes nor Miss Helen has been even remotely identified with the suffrage movement in Washington. Nobody knows of their having attended a single suffrage meeting or taken part in ay sort of suffrage demonstration. The belief that they are inclined to suffrage seems to be based entirely on the fact that they are college women and most college women are suffragists, and as for Vassar, where Miss Hughes graduated, it would be hard to go through Vassar and not become a convert to suffrage.

By the time this gets into print the family will have closed their Washington house and betaken themselves to Bridgehampton, L. I., where they expect to spend July anyhow. Mr. Hughes likes the mountains, but he does not like moving, and, while nominally Bridgehampton is merely a base from which to prosecute the search for a desirable Adirondack resort, it is quite possible that they will "stay put" once they get there.

Mrs. Hughes and Miss Katherine have been busy supervising the family packing, and little Miss Elizabeth has been chiefly concerned over the transportation of her pet—yes, she has one after all—a bird. Miss Helen did not come back to Washington, but stayed on in New York with her sister-in-law, who was one of her chums at Vassar, by the way, until she could join her mother and sister on Long Island.

Mrs. I. J. Reis is the author of a play called "A Midsummer Day's Dream" which will be given Tuesday afternoon by the Sisterhood of B'nai Sholem Temple Israel in the temple at Fifty-third street and Michigan avenue.

News of the Religious World

Dr. Milburn Ends Pastorate at Plymouth.

By the Rev. W. B. Norton.

THE REV. JOSEPH H. MILBURN, for the last fifteen years the pastor of the Plymouth Congregational church, will preach his farewell sermons today before leaving not only the Plymouth church but the pastorate. Service at 11 o'clock.

Plymouth church is now located at 935 East Fiftieth street, but at the time Dr. Milburn became pastor in 1901 it was located at 2535 Michigan avenue. The encroachments of business on Michigan avenue and the removal south of so many of the members of the church led to the selection of the present location.

Dr. Milburn and wife will go to Suanee, Tenn., the seat of the University of the South, where he will engage in literary studies. Dr. Milburn expected to terminate his pastorate last Easter, but the congregation persuaded him to remain until today.

The Rev. Thomas F. O'Gara is the pastor of the Corpus Christi Roman Catholic church, Forty-ninth street and Grand boulevard, which will be dedicated at 10:30 o'clock today by Archbishop G. W. Mundelein. Father O'Gara has been pastor of the church since 1905.

The church property, including the priest's house and the parochial school, cost $500,000. It is perhaps the finest and most expensive Roman Catholic church in Chicago, not counting the cathedral. It is built of white Bedford stone. The buildings form a square, the priests' house on the south, the parochial school on the west, the church on the north, and a covered cloister connecting the priests' house and the church on the east.

Following the dedication solemn high mass will be sung, the Rev. J. Nawn being the celebrant. The deacon of the mass will be the Rev. E. L. Dondanville, pastor of St. John's, and the subdeacon will be the Rev. J. K. Fielding. The Rev. D. J. Riordan, pastor of St. Elizabeth's, will preach the dedication sermon. The parish choir will sing Marzo's mass.

In the evening vespers will be sung by the Rev. D. J. Conway of Woodstock, Ill. The sermon of the evening will be preached by the Rt.-Rev. P. J. Muldoon, bishop of Rockford.

The music for the dedication services will be supplied by the Corpus Christi choir.

The Rev. C. R. W. Kegley, pastor of the Epiphany Evangelical Lutheran church, Sacramento boulevard and Lexington avenue, has been granted the privilege of traveling throughout the Chicago synod of the general council to solicit funds for the building of a new church. The synod which granted the privilege was held in Detroit, Mich., and adjourned last Tuesday. Another action of the synod was the decision to place a field missionary in Chicago at an early date and to elect a permanent president of the synod and furnish him with a salary, so that he can devote all of his time to the work of the church. The Rev. Dr. G. H. Geberding of the theological seminary, Maywood, was appointed fraternal delegate to the synod of the northwest, now in session at Oshkosh, Wis. The Chicago synod will meet next year in the Lutheran church in Elgin, of which the Rev. B. F. Hoefer, former president of the synod, is pastor.

Rev. William Chalmers Covert

The Rev. William Chalmers Covert is pastor of the First Presbyterian church, Forty-first street and Grand boulevard. He will preach an historical sermon this morning at 10:30 o'clock in connection with the unveiling of a tablet commemorating the organization of the church in Fort Dearborn June 26, 1833. The church was incorporated in 1835, two years before Chicago received its charter as a city.

The church was organized in the carpenter shop of Fort Dearborn by the Rev. Jeremiah Porter at a time when the town had only twenty-eight voters. The congregation has occupied church buildings in several different locations in the city, but the church organization has been continuous and regular services have never ceased to be held.

Dr. Covert has made a specialty of the church history of the Presbyterian denomination. He is chairman of a committee which is arranging for the observance of the 100th anniversary of the founding of the Presbyterian denomination in Illinois. The celebration will be held next October in Springfield.

The tablet will be unveiled by E. H. Porter M. D., the grandson of the Rev. Jeremiah Porter. Gen. Thomas H. Barry and Col. H. O. L. Hiestand of the United States army have promised to be present as representatives of the military aspects of the celebration in connection with old Fort Dearborn.

At 2:30 o'clock today the Corpus Christi procession will take place at Techny, Ill., ten miles north of Chicago, in which Archbishop Ruiz of Michoacan, an exile from Mexico, will officiate. The archbishop will be assisted by 100 priests, and it is expected that 200 nuns will be in the procession. There will also be numerous societies from Chicago, including the Knights of Columbus. Special trains will be run on the Chicago, Milwaukee and St Paul railroad at 9:20 and 1:10 o'clock.

The Congregational, Methodist, and Presbyterian churches of Canada are now certain to unite under the title of "The United Church of Canada." The Presbyterians at their last general assembly voted to join by a vote of 404 to 89. The other denominations had previously voted in favor of the union by equally large majorities. This is generally regarded as the most conspicuous instance of large bodies so doctrinally unlike as the Methodists and Presbyterians coming into organic union.

The Baptist ministers will meet in the German building tomorrow at 11:30. The families of the ministers are invited. The meeting will be followed by a basket luncheon. It will be the last meeting before the summer vacation.

The Presbyterian daily vacation Bible schools will begin tomorrow to continue for six weeks. There are twenty-five churches and missions in which the schools will be located. During the last week preparatory training courses were given for teachers and on Friday evening Dr. Charles F. Wishart of the Second Presbyterian church gave the address.

One of the unique features of the work of the pupils on the first day will be the making of drinking cups. The sanitary necessity for individual drinking cups will be explained. Printed on the cups are the words: "I made it myself," a hint that it is American made. The announcements of the schools are also printed on the cups.

While under Presbyterian denominational control, children of all creeds and of no creed are enrolled in the classes and care is taken not to make the teaching sectarian but simply Christian. The maintenance of the schools cost last year $1,571.74 and it is hoped to increase the facilities this year.

The Rev. W. Clyde Smith is the secretary of the executive committee. The other members of the committee are: The Rev. George J. Searles, chairman; the Rev. R. D. Scott, the Rev. Bertram G. Jackson, Alfred Bentz, Miss Ora Edmunds, Miss Carrie B. Wilson.

The Rev. William H. Ferris, New Haven, Conn., will lecture at 4 o'clock today at Douglas center on the subject, "The Beacon Lights of Negro History." Mr. Ferris will be introduced by Prof. Richard T. Greener of Harvard university. The Rev. Mr. Ferris has received degrees from Yale and Harvard universities and is regarded as a special authority on questions pertaining to the Negro.

Bishop Thomas Nicholson of the Methodist Episcopal church will preach today at 11 o'clock at the dedication services of the Albany Park church. The Rev. C. K. Carpenter of Oak Park will preach at 3 o'clock and the Rev. L. F. W. Lesemann, district superintendent, at 7:45. The Rev. John Thompson, superintendent of the Home Missionary and Church Extension society, will have charge of the offering. The church cost $28,000. It will take the place of a portable church, which was constructed six years ago in the space of twenty-four hours. The Sunday school children will meet in the old church at Sunnyside and Albany avenues and march to the new structure, a block away.

The Wabash Avenue Methodist Episcopal church, Wabash avenue and Fourteenth street, will be reopened today after having been redecorated and altered in order to meet the building ordinances as to exits and fire escapes. Bishop Thomas Nicholson will preach at 3 o'clock. The Rev. J. L. Walker, district superintendent, will preach at 10:45 and the pastor, the Rev. W. H. Pierce, will preach at 7:45. At 5 o'clock there will be lunch and a social reunion. Some months ago a survey was made of the First ward, in which the church is located, and the reopening of the church auditorium is the beginning of an advance movement in many lines of church activity.

FUTURE EVENTS.

Lake Forest society is taking an unusual interest in Ravinia this season. For the opening night dinner parties have been arranged by Mrs. H. C. Chatfield-Taylor, Mrs. C. M. Ely, Mrs. Charles Garfield King, Mrs. George McKinlock, Mrs. A. Watson Armour, Mrs. Lawrence Armour, Mrs. William Martin, Mrs. George McLaughlin, Mrs. Ezra Warner, Mrs. Stanley Field, Miss Lolita Armour, and Mrs. Leeds Mitchell.

The Summer Players at Wheaton are an established fact now. Tuesday parts were given out and Tuesday night at Mrs. Will H. Lyford's there was a reading rehearsal of the plays which will be given Fourth of July eve with portable scenery in the Jarvis Hunt garage. Mrs. Frank Murphy, chairman of the dramatic committee, with the aid of Miss Margery Harvey and Mrs. Alfred Martin, chose a program composed of three short plays, "Phipps," "The Dear Departed," and "Rosalind."

The charming little playhouse which Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Aldis of Lake Forest have made a center of much of the progressive dramatic art of the summer for Chicagoans will today be filled with workers with quite as dramatic an occupation as treading the boards of the tiny stage.

A group of women, so many in number that the playhouse cannot accommodate all of them at one sewing, will gather every day during the summer to work for the war relief association which has been formed in Lake Forest by Mrs. Aldis, Mrs. C. Morse Ely, Mrs. Charles Atkinson, Mrs. R. R. McCormick, Mrs. Charles T. Atkinson, and Mrs. Joseph Cudahy.

Mrs. Robert G. McGann is chairman of the governors of the Lake Forest country fair to be held on the polo field of Onwentsia club July 14 and 15 for the benefit of Alice home, the Lake Bluff orphanage, and the contagious hospital of Lake Forest. The governors include:

T. E. Wilson.

J. Allen Haines is executive chairman of the event.

A bridge tournament will be held each Friday afternoon of the season at the Chicago Yacht club. The first one was held last Friday with great success.

On Wednesday morning at the residence of Mrs. Keene H. Addington in Lake Forest M. Leon Barreau will give a talk on lace work in France, under the direction of M. Gustave Rolland. This is the second of a series of eight French matinees.

SUMMER PLANS.

In August Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Whitman of Beverly Farms, Mass., will visit Mrs. Whitman's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Hobart Chatfield-Taylor, at Fairlawn, Lake Forest.

Mrs. James T. Harahan of the Blackstone hotel has left for Manchester by the Sea, Mass., where she has taken the Justus Hemenway place for the summer.

Mr. and Mrs. George B. Nichols Jr. returned from their wedding trip Monday evening. Mrs. Nichols was formerly Miss Margaret Billings, daughter of Dr. Frank Billings of 242 East Walton place, a bride of June 3.

Milward Adams of the Chicago club has opened his summer place at Shawnee, Colo., in the Platte canyon.

Mr. and Mrs. R. Hall McCormick of 660 Rush street have opened their summer place at Bar Harbor, Me.

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Atherton have closed their apartment at 3122 Sheridan road and have gone to Dublin, N. H., for the summer. Mrs. Atherton will return from the east to be present at the Lake Forest country fair.

Mr. and Mrs. L. Harry Freeman of 451 Oakwood boulevard left last week for Nantucket, where they have taken a cottage for the summer.

Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank is to pass the summer in the east. The Fairbank country place at Lake Geneva has been rented for the season to Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Carpenter. Mrs. Fairbank will leave early in July.

Mrs. F. J. Allen, president of the Women of the Empire State, has left for Montana and Washington, where she will spend the summer.

Mrs. S. M. Felton of 1866 Dearborn street is at Watch Hill, R. I., for the summer.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Burrall Mason of 150 East Superior street have taken the Miller house in Winnetka for the summer. Miss Rosalind Mason has gone to Ephraim, Wis., to remain most of the season.

Mr. and Mrs. George Manierre of 100 Bellevue place have taken a cottage at the Chicago Golf club, Wheaton, for the summer. Their son and daughter-in-law, the Francis Manierres of 751 Lincoln parkway, will be with them.

Mrs. Everett Millard of Highland Park and her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles G. Boynton of Ravinsoak left last Sunday for a six weeks' trip to California. They will return via the Canadian Pacific, stopping off at Banff for a few days.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles C. Curtiss and their family of 1404 Astor street will go to Wequetonsing, Mich.

Mrs. Charles M. Hewitt has taken for the summer the Sanwood cottage at Smith's Point, near Beverly Farms, Mass.

Mrs. Clinton Locke, 2825 Indiana avenue, has left for her summer home at Wequetonsing, Mich.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard H. Spaulding Jr., 221 East Walton place, are at Hyannisport, Mass., where they have rented a place for the summer.

Robert W. Roloson, 2100 Prairie avenue, will leave soon for Charlevoix, Mich., where he has a summer home.

PERSONALS.

Mr. and Mrs. William D. McJunkin, who have been living at the South Shore Country club since giving up their apartment in Sheridan road, are in the east and will return about July 1.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur R. Jones of 5212 University avenue, accompanied by Miss Dorothy Thomas, have motored east and are now at New Haven attending the graduation of their son, Arthur R. Jones II. They will motor from there to the Adirondacks and White mountains.

Mrs. Charles L. Allen and Miss Dora Allen have taken the apartment occupied for the last two years by Mr. and Mrs. Howard Linn at 2142 Lincoln Park West. This apartment has a charming roof garden, which was designed by Mrs. Linn and decorated by Mrs. John Alden Carpenter. Mr. and Mrs. Linn have moved to Surf street to an apartment with a view of the lake and a roof space which Mrs. Linn is converting into another roof garden.

Mrs. G. J. Case of Decatur, Mich., formerly of Glencoe, is visiting her daughter, Mrs. E. B. Cook of 4335 Oakenwald avenue.

Mrs. Sadie Baer of 5210 Ingleside avenue leaves today for Ann Arbor, Mich., to attend the commencement exercises of her son, Felix S. Baer.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph T. Delfosse, with their son, are touring the New England states.

Mrs. Leo Levy of Memphis, Tenn., formerly Miss Elsie Frank, is the guest of Dr. and Mrs. Louis L. Buehler of 4848 Indiana avenue.

BALDWIN
WHERE THE GAME FISH ARE

The favorite haunt of Michigan sportsmen for thirty years. Its brooks and lakes teem with trout, bass, pike, pickerel, bluegills and perch. Though fished by thousands, they are never depleted, because the natural hazards have been left untouched, providing perfect breeding grounds; and 3,000,000 fry are planted annually. 27 lakes and 12 trout streams within six miles of town, including the famous Pere Marquette river and its branches, Michigan's most noted trout waters. Motor boating, rowing, bathing. Good gravel roads, fine water, dry air; 460 feet above Lake Michigan. On West Mich. Pike. Camping sites free. Get away from the fashionable centers and back to nature, where your vacation means rest, health, pleasure and less expense. Hotels, farm homes, furnished cottages. No fancy prices. Write

The Haskell Trunk Co., which signed lease No. 100 in the Stevens Building and opened their excellent shop of trunks and bags last week, are meeting with a splendid reception from their old friends and patrons. This shop occupies a large space on the 11th floor and contains one of the most attractive stocks of trunks and bags to be found in Chicago. The quantity of goods that have gone down our elevators for delivery to their customers for the past few days would indicate that the public is well pleased with the values they are offering. Music as a Debtor Art: "Boosting" a "Knocker."

By Percy Hammond.

It may have occurred to you, in casting up your accounts with the art of music, that it is not a particularly satisfactory debtor. Auditing (whimsically) your adventures with its various phases you may have found that the ratio of its discomforts to its pleasures is as the proportion of sack to bread in Falstaff's tavern bill. The delectable infant in Mr. Carpenter's "Perambulator Suite," admiring the product of a hurdy-gurdy, described music as "the most insidious form of noise." She might have said also that it is the most inevitable, encountering you in all the hours. No other art, save that of architecture, is so unavoidable or so unprincipled in its attitude toward its obligations.

You may not dine in public without its disquieting accompaniment. The man with whom you play golf probably hums or whistles between shots, and your neighbor customarily operates a pianola. A late sleeper, perhaps, your slumbers are made unsteady by the matutinal outcries of the embryo prima donna, pursuing across the way the chromatic though irksome scale. A London essayist, Mr. Filson Young, I think, once bemoaned the fact that Dvorak's "Humoresque" was played in the Savoy restaurant, while fat men and rouged women ate meat, a performance which he considered an impiety

But you restrain your anger over this desecration of a noble muse when you recall that the said muse is responsible for the xylophone, for Irving Berlin, for "Ten Baby Fingers and Ten Baby Toes," for male quartets, for the Courtney Sisters, for the tunes of the "Follies" and "A World of Pleasure," for theater orchestras, and other items in a long litany of distresses which are not to be evaded. Books and pictures belong to silent and unobtrusive arts; the bad ones do not pester you if you do not want them to. You can leave a dull play, discard a stupid novel, or remain distant from the grievous effigies in the parks. But music is an insolent invader, fleeing from whose oppression you may find no sanctuary save the heart.

These cowardly lines of disparagement are penned behind the æolian back of Mr. De Lamarter, the oracle and organist. Upon reading them, he will say, among other things, that they indict not an art but the abuse of an art; that Irving Berlin is not a musician but an infernal noise-monger, and that "My Mother's Rosary" is merely a spurious chaplet of mercenary drool. He will view with regret the mechanical pianos and the fledgling song-birds, but he will point with pride to the opera and the Symphony orchestra, to Kreisler, Ysaye, and Cassals, the Flonzaley quartet, and Fannie Bloomfield-Zeisler. Thus will he put me down; not, however, without leaving me a suspicion that our payment is not too little for so great a debt.

Mr. De Lamarter's permission is beseeched to include among the assets of music an institution in which I take more than an esthetic interest. This is Ravinia park, and the preceding remarks were suggested by the announcement that the summer season of opera is to begin there next Saturday evening. Of this opera and the beauties of the lovely wood which will environ it the music critic has written eloquently, and will do so again. Portraits of some of the singers are near by on this page, while on another the plans of the initial week are printed in full. It is, as has been said in the editorial columns of this journal, our most salubrious establishment, and gratitude for its beneficences has not hitherto been one of our notable virtues.

Which brings me reluctantly to a consideration of the unfavorable remarks of Mr. Russell Havens, a reader of THE TRIBUNE, concerning me and my acquaintance of "The Line-o'-Type." Writing to the Voice of the People, Mr. Havens deplores my propensity and that of Mr. Taylor to "knock" Chicago. He asks if it is not possible for THE TRIBUNE to be published without our calumnious references to the imperfections of this metropolis. Mr. Havens, with the characteristic naïveté of one who reads this column, infers that I and Mr. Taylor ought to be ashamed to find fault with a city which, he boasts, is "spineless" and which has "lost almost completely the last generation's spirit of 'I Will.'"

Upon consultation with Mr. Taylor I discover that Mr. Havens is right about us, though wrong about our city. My own unjust derogations have been confined to the lunch counter terminal of the Illinois Central, to the burlesques of Shakespeare and Goethe in Lincoln park, to the statuas of Gotch and Hackenschmidt upon the city hall, to the Rush street bridge, and to Messrs. Leonard I. Budd and Burton I. Busby, the transcendental geniuses of our local livery stables. May I be shriven of my black past by admitting my errors? Chicago is the faultless rose without a thorn, even though Dubuque, Iowa, may have a subway before it does. My apologies and those of ~~Mr. Taylor~~ are therefore proffered to Mr. Havens and to others of his peculiar turn of mind.

The initial week's program at Ravinia is as follows:

SATURDAY NIGHT—"Lucia," with Mabel Garrison, Orville Harrold, Millo Picco, and Henri Scott. Mlle. Galli and Sig. Bonfiglio will dance.

SUNDAY—In the afternoon there will be a concert by the Chicago Symphony orchestra, and in the evening "Pagliacci" will be sung by Mr. Kingston, Miss Wentworth, Mr. Picco, and Mr. Dua.

MONDAY—Mlle. Galli and Sig. Bonfiglio will dance and there will be a concert by the orchestra with Mr. Scott as soloist.

TUESDAY AFTERNOON, INDEPENDENCE DAY—A concert, and in the evening a double bill, "The Secret of Suzanne," with Marguerite Beriza, and the garden scene of "Faust," with Misses Garrison, Jarman, and Messrs. Harrold and Scott.

WEDNESDAY EVENING—A concert with Miss Wentworth and Mr. Adkins as soloists and Mlle. Galli and Sig. Bonfiglio dancing.

THURSDAY—In the afternoon a children's concert, and in the evening "Trovatore," with Misses Wentworth and Jarman and Messrs. Kingston and Picco.

FRIDAY—A concert in the afternoon and in the evening a Wagnerian program by Mme. Beriza and Mr. Harrold, with dancing by Mlle. Galli.

SATURDAY—An afternoon concert, with "Rigoletto" in the evening sung by Misses Garrison and Jarman and Messrs. Harrold, Picco, and Scott.

Mlle. Rosina Galli
Matzene Photo
Miss Estelle Wentworth
Miss Margaret Jarman

IN THE PICTURE.

Mlle. Galli, the premier danseuse of the Metropolitan opera, was a season or two ago the leade. of the Chicago opera's ballet.

Miss Wentworth is an American prima donna who has sung in the Wagnerian repertory at Freiburg, Mannheim, and Frankfurt. She will sing at the Metropolitan next season.

Miss Jarman, contralto, begins her American experiences at Ravinia. Hitherto she has sung with the Lombardi and Bevanni Opera companies.

News of the Theaters.

Clifton Crawford, being tired and homesick, will forsake "A World of Pleasure" before long and return to Town. William Norris will be his successor at the Palace.

Miss Wanda Lyons is now the prima donna of "A World of Pleasure," succeeding to the rôle played by Miss Venita Fitzhugh and Miss Irene Jonani. Miss Lyons, who until last week was Al Jolson's leading woman in "Robinson Crusoe Jr.," comes from Salt Lake City, the beginning place of Maude Adams, Sallie Fisher, Joseph Santley, Viola Gillette, Hazel Dawn, and Margaret Romaine.

Miss May Irwin plans to leave Chicago today for her home in the Thousand Islands, via automobile. It is said that en route she will address the inhabitants of Toledo, Cleveland, Buffalo, and Rochester on the topic of woman's right to vote.

That the New York run of "The Boomerang" may not interfere with the summer week end parties of the actors, Mr Belasco will omit the Saturday performances of that play during July and August.

Miss Elsie Janis is about to embark for London. Her visit will be philanthropic, since she will contribute her services exclusively to entertainments given for the benefit of the British soldiers.

Miss Louise Mink, prima donna last year in "Maid in America," will succeed Miss Frances Cameron tonight in "So Long Letty" at the Olympic. Burrell Barbaretto will take the rôle hitherto played by Jack Henderson, and Miss Julia Ralph, late of Miss May Irwin's company, and Jack Pollard will join the cast.

The play written by Booth Tarkington for Otis Skinner is to be called "Mister Antonia." It is about the experiences of a foreigner in a small Pennsylvania town.

Miss Rose Stahl, it is said, will try her luck next year with "Our Mrs. McChesney."

Cyril Maude next season will act as a barber whose shop in a Canadian village is the forum of all the neighborhood's scandal and politics. The play is called "The Barber of Mariposa," and its author is Stephen Leacock, the Canadian educator, essayist, and humorist.

Burns Mantle's New York Letter

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—Just to the right of the entrance to the Allied bazaar at the Grand Central palace last week stood the Serbian booth. It was a modest exhibit of dolls dressed in the native costume of the busy little trouble makers who started things across the way, flanked by more expensive donations to be sold for the good of the cause.

Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt was interested in the booth, and several ladies had done what they could to attract the attention of the crowds to it. Still it was behind in receipts, as compared with the other booths. And then Marie Dressler arrived. Miss Dressler did not exactly leap the ramparts. She is not of a pole vaulting build. She gracefully ducked under and came up on the other side of the counter, bringing with her a cut glass pitcher chased with silver.

"I am selling this vase," Miss Dressler shouted in a voice that is accustomed to arresting attention; "I am selling this vase, which is worth $75, for $15. I am selling it to that genial gentleman over there with generosity shining from his handsome face. I am selling it for $15, though it is worth $75—and if he doesn't take it I shall be greatly disappointed. So will Serbia, So will all Serbia's allies. So will——"

The genial gentleman advanced laughingly and dug for the $15. The glass vase was wrapped and delivered.

"I am selling this bon-bon dish for $5. It is worth $20. I am selling it for $5 because I have to go presently to dance the tango with Monsieur Maurice in the tea garden on the third floor. If you have ever seen Maurice dance you know what to expect—from Maurice. I am selling—— Thank you, sir. You are kindness itself."

The bon-bon dish went to another genial gentleman in the crowd fringing the booth. Several ladies stepped up and became interested in the dolls and trinkets made by soldiers. Before Miss Dressler left to keep her engagement with Maurice (which she did a half hour later, tangoing before a crowd of uncrowned heads at 50 cents a head) the little Serbian booth had doubled the amount of its receipts for any one day.

At this writing this wonderful bazaar has collected approximately $1,200,000 for allied charities. Its enthusiastic promoters started with an advance sale of $400,000 and were up to $1,000,000 in donations and receipts the first week. For how much of this sum Miss Dressler is responsible, directly or indirectly, we have no way of telling. But any story of the charity that fails to place her name high on the honor list will not be a true story. Also that of MargaretMayo, who gave up acting and wrote "Baby Mine" and later "Twin Beds."

Just beyond the Serbian booth was Miss Mayo's "Ballyhoo Theater." We glanced over the heads of the crowd as Miss Dressler left for her tango engagement. On an elevated platform Elsie Janis was making rag dolls of her handkerchief and doing a breakdown whenever any one contributed a dollar to the "net." The net was an awning four feet square, stretched from four poles in front of the stage, into which the crowd was invited to throw its money. At this stage of the evening it was sagging heavily with much silver, some gold, and half a peck of currency.

On the stage with Miss Janis was Irving Berlin, offering to sing a song for any man's $5, or $4, or $3, or $2. Jack Hazzard, comedian, was shouting an invitation to all within hearing to gather closer. A young man was poking a landing net lined with silk beneath the noses of the curious, inviting nickels, dimes, or dollars.

Across the way pretty Christine Norman, assisted by a young man and a megaphone, was offering chances on a brand new $10 bill for 25 cents each—a drawing every hour and a winner at every drawing. For ten days the players have fairly thronged Miss Mayo's booth, and money has rolled into them. There has been no passing them by, so fervid have been their appeals and so genuine their enthusiasm. They have done ever so much more than merely to volunteer entertainmnt.

There probably never has been another charity bazaar just like this one. If you can imagine all the church fairs you have ever attended rolled into one monster fair and then stir its people and its patrons to their emotional depths with patriotism you might have a picture of it.

For instance, the crowd is now shuffling along the corridors past the booths, trying good naturedly to pass the insistent young women selling chances on automobiles and pianos, diamond pendants, platinum bracelets, and boxes at next November's opera; trying to shake

COVENT GARDEN.

A new musical entertainment by Will J. Harris called "Cheer Up" will be presented this afternoon at 2:30 at Covent Garden.

OUTDOOR AMUSEMENTS.

White City—Dancing, roller skating, the musical piece "The Review of Revues," and other diversion.

Riverview—Dancing, bicycle races, rides, and frolics.

Theater Notes.

Emmerich Kalman, who is to Budapest what Irving Berlin is to New York, will have two operettas in America next fall—"Little Miss Springtime" and "The Czardas Princess."

Miss Desmond Kelley, sometime a player in the Frohman companies, announces her marriage in Honolulu to Frederick Ohet, described as a "wealthy engineer."

A farce is to engage Miss Margaret Illington's talents next season. Its name is "Just for Tonight." Its author is Avery Hopwood, and in its cast will be Walter Jones, C. Aubrey Smith, and Robert Fischer.

When Miss Ann Murdock plays the English comedy "Please Help Emily" next month Ferdinand Gottschalk will be in her company.

Messrs. Selwyn & Co. will present "Betty, Behave," a comedy, by Ralph Renaud, with Miss Jane Cowl as Betty, in Asbury Park, N. J., on July 17. The play will be staged by Richard Ordynski and the cast will include Henry Stephenson and Orme Caldara. After a preliminary season Miss Cowl will return to "Common Clay" until Thanksgiving, when she will appear in "Betty, Behave" again.

MATZENE PHOTO

Miss McMahon is the intrepid young woman in "A World of Pleasure" who, as a rag doll, is thrown about with such indifference to bruises and abrasions by her agile associate, Mr. Diamond. She and her accomplice form one of the many "punches" of the exhibition.

off other young ladies, and old ladies, who insist upon pinning badges on coat lapels and dress fronts and charging anywhere from 5 to 50 cents for the badge; trying to convince importunate boy scouts that they (the passers-by) have already pasted innumerable dimes and quarters on long strips of adhesive tape that are later to be turned into the fund for the relief of the permanently blind; trying to prove to the young man selling miniature silk flags that one of each of the battling countries is enough to decorate what used to be the den but is now the guest room—when suddenly a cheer breaks out from the back of the room, followed by the sound of a chorus singing.

Gradually the shuffling is in that direction, and here you find Sybil Vane waving a flag and leading two or three hundred people singing "Keep the Home Fires Burning" and later "The Star Spangld Banner" and "The Land of Hope and Glory."

On another night the bugles sound at 9 o'clock and everything is hushed and silent for a mightily impressive two minutes, and then from a far corner the intoning of a prayer to the dead Kitchener or a few words spoken by a reverend visitor in honor of the men who have fallen.

Have you ever heard a patriotic French woman singing "La Marseillaise"? Can you imagine Emma Calvé, with her beloved tri-color in her hand, thrilling as many thousands as can get within sight of her with this most stirring of all battle hymns? There was no affectation in the patriotism of the crowd the day this happened at the bazaar. Men and women frankly wept with the thrill of it. And when Calvé, still in splendid voice, had finished, and grabbed a French helmet to pass among those nearest to her, it was soon heaped with bills.

There have been a number of inspiring incidents of like character. One night a middle aged woman in mourning visited the French booth and handed Mrs. Charles Alexander a ring. "I want to give this," she said simply. "It is all that is left now." It was a pear shaped diamond, surrounded by emeralds. Mrs. Alexander next day had it appraised, and the jeweler said it was easily worth $15,000. It was later sold to a man who had read of the incident and who had never seen the ring, the bargain being closed over the telephone.

Another day Marie Dressler created a lot of fun by jumping in a barrel and insisting that she would not get out, even though she had to have her meals brought to her, until she was completely surrounded by money. The crowd good naturedly began chucking change at her—and soon she was literally packed in money, or seemed so. But there was so much of Marie that there was not a great deal of space left to fill.

One pretty actress told us she did not know whether to count one man she met fresh or witty, or both. "Can't I sell you a chance on a combination?" she purred sweetly, coming up out of a crowd directly beneath his chin.

"Lady," he said, "I don't wear combinations."

An honest lady, buying books at the authors' and artists' booth, where Montgomery Flagg made sketches at $10 each and Peter Newell and A. G. Larned did the same for whatever they thought they could get—an honest lady here bought a copy of one of Theodore Roosevelt's books for 50 cents. When she discovered that it was an autographed copy and marked to sell for $75 she brought it back.

MOTOR CYCLES PATROL BANKS OF RIO GRANDE.
In the Mexican section of El Paso, Texas, and along the banks of the Rio Grande, the army has started to utilize motor cycles for the first time in patrol duty and the chug chug of their engines is a comforting sound to worried citizens.

MEET MRS. ASTOR FACE TO FACE.
There have been many events in the life of Mrs. Madeleine Force Astor, widow of the late John Jacob Astor, to arouse public interest, and the announcement of her intention to marry William K. Dick, thereby forfeiting $5,000,000, is something else to arouse a storm of comment. In this issue you meet the lady "close up."

MILITIA ANSWERS CALL TO ARMS!
In response to President Wilson's call for militia mobilization for possible Mexican service, the troops are pouring by car loads into concentration camps, where for several months they will train. The pictures are of the Illinois troops at Springfield, Ill.

SYRACUSE BOATMEN WIN.
At the regatta at Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Syracuse won the Intercollegiate Varsity eight oared race in 20:15. Cornell was the close second.

Feature Films of the Week.

"A Matrimonial Martyr"—Five reel Gold Rooster production, in which Ruth Roland is featured. Comedy and pathos intermingle.

"A Traitor to Art"—Three reel Essanay production, featuring Ann Kirk and Edward Arnold. A story of a girl artist in a big city.

"Far from the Madding Crowd"—Five reel Mutual picturization of the novel by Thomas Hardy. Florence Turner is featured.

"Susie Snowflake"—Famous Players' comedy-drama, featuring Ann Pennington. A musical comedy success and a disapproving family form the motif of the picture.

"The Ancient Blood"—Three act Knickerbocker star feature, in which Virginia Norden takes the leading part in a tale of the great northwest.

"The Criminal Thumb"—Three reel Gaumont drama, featuring Alexander Gaden and Iva Shepard. A spatulate thumb proves a dead give away.

"The Crucial Test"—World Film production, featuring Kitty Gordon—she of the beautiful back.

"The Flower of No Man's Land"—Five act Metro drama, starring Viola Dana.

"The Lotus Woman"—Kalem drama, featuring Alice Hollister and Harry Millarde.

"The Sign of the Spade"—Mutual feature, with Helene Rosson and Allen Forrest playing the leads. The picture is based on the expose of the lottery evil.

"The World's Great Snare"—Famous Players' picturization of the novel by E. Phillips Oppenheim. The elemental life of a western mining town is the subject dealt with.

"Would You Forgive Her?"—Vitagraph drama with Leah Baird in the lead.

Stationary Photoplays.

Castle—On Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday, "The Making of Maddalena," Oliver Morosco production, featuring Edna Goodrich. Thursday, Friday, Saturday, and Sunday, "Silks and Satins," Famous Players' production. Marguerite Clarke plays the lead.

Colonial—"New Britain Prepared."

Fine Arts—"The Whirl of Life," Cort Film production, featuring Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Castle.

La Salle—"The Little Girl Next Door," Essanay drama.

Strand—"Flirting with Fate," Fine Arts-Triangle production, featuring Douglas Fairbanks.

Studebaker—Eighth installment of "Gloria's Romance," George Kleine's serial, starring Billie Burke and Henry Kolker. "The Crucial Test," Brady-World Film production. Kitty Gordon is featured.

Ziegfeld (V. L. S. E.)—"Sherlock Holmes," seven reel Essanay picturization of the play. William Gillette plays the lead. "The Wonderful Wager," Lubin comedy, featuring Raymond Hitchcock.

The Latest News from Movie Land.

By Mae Tinee.

THRILLS IN "CIVILIZATION."

MUSIC rehearsals are going on daily in Cohan's Grand Opera house preparatory to the coming opening of the Thomas H. Ince production, "Civilization." Those who were thrilled by "The Birth of a Nation" may, we believe, anticipate the thrills from "Civilization."

Nona Thomas of Ince fame is a famous candy maker.

"The Fall of a Nation" shows the dangers of imperialistic influences in our own country. It is an appeal for adequate defense against foreign invasion.

Helen Holmes and her hubby director, J. P. McGowan, shudder when they think that they were almost absorbed in the hot crumbling mouth of the Kilauea volcano. They went on an excursion when the crater was unusually active and if they hadn't shown a great burst of speed—well——?

Hazel Dawn's favorite gown is—a pair of overalls.

Last week's best sellers in a leading Chicago book store:

WAR.

"Our Military History" (Reilly & Britton), by Gen. Leonard Wood.

FICTION.

"Nan of Music Mountain" (Scribner), by Frank Spearman.

"Seventeen" (Harper), by Booth Tarkington.

"Cappy Ricks" (Fly), by Peter B. Kyne.

"The Fall of a Nation" (Appleton), by Thomas Dixon.

"The Lightning Conductor Discovers America" (Doubleday-Page), by C. N. and A. M. Williamson.

"The Border Legion" (Harper), by Zane Grey.

NONFICTION.

"How to Live" (Funk & Wagnalls), by Irving Fisher.

GLEASONS RETURN TO WAR.

MR. AND MRS. ARTHUR GLEASON have gone back over the seas to the war, Mr. Gleason stopping off for a while in England to investigate the conditions of English labor and discontent as affected by conscription, and Mrs. Gleason going straight to France to continue her work in the Red Cross.

They're a hard working family, these Gleasons. Last year in Belgium, Arthur Gleason was a stretcher bearer in the Hector Munro ambulance corps, that famous little organization of a dozen volunteers which operated in Belgium under the famous London nerve specialist, and which was under the military leadership of the son of the Belgian prime minister. He wrote then "Young Hilda at the Wars," a tale dealing with his wife's work in the Red Cross. She was decorated by the Belgian king for gallantry under fire, and she is so far the only American woman to receive such a decoration.

They came back to the United States for a brief rest while Mr. Gleason published "Golden Lads" [Century], which gives eyewitness accounts of the atrocities suffered by the Belgians. Again Mr. Gleason received a signal honor. His testimony of the German atrocities is the only American testimony which has been incorporated in the Bryce report, and he is, likewise, the only American whose reports have been adopted by the French government for use in writing its future official history of the war. Mrs. Gleason has contributed a chapter to "Golden Lads" which is called "How War Seems to a Woman," and Theodore Roosevelt has written an introduction to the book.

Arthur Gleason
Helen Hayes Gleason

After his investigations in England, Mr. Gleason will go on to France and join his wife in volunteer Red Cross service.

Breaking his sequence of novels of the industries of his native land which he proposed when he wrote "Brunel's Tower," Eden Phillpotts has written a new story, "The Human Boy and the War" [Macmillan], which has nothing to do with industry, much to do with the psychology of the English schoolboy in war time, and which is pleasant reading, though not especially Phillpottsesque.

In his volume on "The Magazine in America," Prof. Algernon Tassin tells of the once famous Atlantic dinners. "The Atlantic was always feeding itself," he says, "but its ladies were not even allowed in at dessert. Lowell, it is remembered, once declined a poem of Mrs. Howe's with the assertion that no woman could write a poem. He said, however, he would gladly accept a prose article; and this would have seemed lamentable to Hawthorne, to whom all 'ink-stained women were detestable.'" Slowly, however, women began to be admitted to the sacred precincts. At first they were condescendingly allowed to come in after the dinner was over to listen to the speakers. Finally the great feminine triumph was reached in the seventeenth anniversary dinner to Harriet Beecher Stowe.

Miss Marie Carroll in "Nothing but the Truth"

Haven't you, whenever you saw a Shaw play, said, after the curtain went down: "What next?" The characters all seem to be in even deeper water as you slip into your coat than they did when the asbestos curtain creaked up on the first act. In his new volume of plays, which contains "Pygmalion," "Androcles and the Lion," "Overruled," and a hundred page preface on "Why Not Give Christianity a Chance?" G. B. S. has written a prose sequel to "Pygmalion" which tells us, in the case of that apotheosized waif, what happened next.

Yes, in answer to a correspondent, Agnes Repplier has written something lately. "Counter Currents" [Houghton-Mifflin] is her latest book of essays, nine in all, on subjects from "The Cost of Modern Sentiment" to "Americanism."

While visiting our country recently Mr. and Mrs. C. N. Williamson—the C. N. and A. M. combination—toured through Long Island, the White mountains, the Adirondacks, New Jersey, and Pennsylvania, and as a result Jack Winston, once the lightning conductor, now of the British army, discovers America. The book relating his adventures is called "The Lightning Conductor Discovers America" (Doubleday-Page).

In "Above the Battle" [Open Court] Romain Rolland sets forth his theories about the war and replies to his critics. In one paragraph he declares: "I have been insulted. I knew that I should be and I went forward. But I did not know that I should be insulted without even a hearing. For a year I have been rich in enemies. Let me say this to them, they can hate me, but they will not teach me to hate them." The book comprises sixteen articles, letters, and essays, most of which were originally published in the Journal de Geneve during the latter part of 1914. Since the beginning of the conflict M. Rolland has been in Switzerland engaged in the work of the Internationa Agency for Prisoners of War, and has maintained a mental neutrality which has brought down upon him the most vituperative condemnation from his fellow Frenchmen.

"Awake! U. S. A." [Doran], by William Freeman, has eighty—exact count—diagrams which tell in black and white more convincing than words what our chances are against German invasion. They remind one of the comparative wealth charts that used to adorn the old-fashioned civil government text books.

Mr. and Mrs. John Martin wrote their new book, "Feminism" [Dodd-Mead] at their camp in the Adirondacks in the same house where Maxim Gorky wrote "Motherhood" while he was their guest. The camp was originally established by Mrs. Martin as an imitation of Brook Farm, that famous coöperative experiment of the days of the Alcotts. For a dozen years some of the most radical spirits in America were found at the Martin camp during the summer—Charlotte Perkins Gilman, Rose Pastor Stokes, Anson Phelps Stokes, Morris Hillquitt, and many others. In those days Mr. and Mrs. Martin were counted among the supporters of the most advanced ideas for feminism. They came to believe, however, that the feminist movement was losing balance, and they detached themselves from it. This book is the result of their later attitude toward feminism.

From the "Frontiersman's Pocket Book," edited by Roger Pocock, is this useful bit of "useful information." It was discovered by "The Librarian" on the Boston Transcript, who, incidentally, writes charmingly and often pleasantly frivolously about library things, and quoted this paragraph as a silencer of his accusers that the column offered so little of "useful information": "3. Death In Camp, etc.—When a man dies in camp or on an expedition, his friend or one of his officers should take charge of his property, especially his papers, medals, etc. He should find out if necessary from his papers the name of any relation, and should communicate the fact of the death to that person. He should break the sad news as gently as possible. The following example will show that this advice is necessary: 'Dere Sur. The coyotes has et yure Sun's hed off. [Sd] Bill.' This thoughtless mode of expression no doubt caused the father an unnecessary and cruel shock."

An American correspondent who was stationed at St. Omar some time ago writes an American friend of dining at mess with the Prince of Wales. After dinner his host, an officer in the Grenadiers, handed him a rain stained, battered book, saying: "If you don't know this, you must read it. The prince himself brought along this copy and urged us to go through it at once." The book was Patrick MacGill's "The Rat Pit" (Doran). I never had a particularly chummy feeling toward the Prince of Wales before, but if he has a literary taste for things like "The Rat Pit" he must be a real person.

To silence the accusations that England is taking the war "lying down," Mrs. Humphry Ward has written a series of letters which are grouped in a new volume, "England's Effort" (Scribner's). She had the assistance of employers, government officials, and the workers themselves in gathering facts about the vast munitions and equipment factories, the way the men—and, when they stopped, the women—have been working for their country. In addition to her investigations at home Mrs. Ward obtained permission to follow the munitions and supplies to the front in France. Joseph H. Choate has written a preface to Mrs. Ward's book emphasizing the importance of its information in setting right public opinion in this country and bearing testimony to the weight of Mrs. Ward's authority.

A correspondent in the London Times gives this bit of interesting information about the library of Shakespeare's first editor:

Nicholas Rowe, playwright and poet laureate, whose edition of Shakespeare, brought out in 1709, was the first which can in any way be said to have been edited, died in 1719. I recently came across in the British museum the "Catalogue of the Library of Nicholas Rowe, Esq., deceas'd. . . . To be sold . . . at Exeter Exchange in the Strand, on Wednesday, the 26th of this August, 1719. N. B.—There's a large collection of MSS." It is interesting to note what works by Shakespeare Rowe possessed. Of course he may in 1709 have had others, which were not in his library when it was sold.

Among the folios was the 1632 or second folio Shakespeare. In the list of quartos we find "Four Volumes of Plays by Shirley, Heywood, Shakespeare, Massinger." Unfortunately, no details are given. The octavos included the seventh volume of Shakespeare's works (the poems), 1710.

Though the Shakespeare collection is small, Rowe had an excellent library. The English books in folio included "Jonson's Works," Spenser's Works," 1679; "Chaucer's Works," 1602; the quartos, "Jonson's Plays," 1601 (sic), and "Dryden's Plays," fourth volume, 1693. Among the numerous octavos were "Swift's Miscellanies," 1711; "De Foe's Works," 1703; "Drayton's Poems," 1610; Phillips's "Cyder" (large paper), 1708; Gay's "Trivia" (large paper); Pope's "Rape of the Lock" (large paper), 1714; Milton's "Paradise Lost," 1711; Dryden's "Miscellanies," 1702; "Donne's Poems," 1630; "Hudibras," three volumes, 1710; Pope's "Temple of Fame," 1715; and Locke "On Education," 1699.

The newest campaign biography is "Woodrow Wilson, the Man, and His Work" (Appleton), by Henry Jones Ford. The author begs that you do not omit the Jones.

Hamlin Garland has another western story, "They of the High Trails" (Harper's). Since he shook the dust of Chicago from his feet forever last yeear and joined the N' Yawk lit'rary crowd this is his first book, I think.

"A Diplomat's wife in Mexico" [Harpers], by Edith O'Shaughnessy, wife of Nelson O'Shaughnessy, who was American chargé d'affaires in Vera Cruz, gives intimate personal recollections of those dramatic months in Mexico City and Vera Cruz before the breaking off of relations between the United States and Mexico. The library of authentic books on the Mexican situation is small indeed and the addition of a book at the same time interesting and truthful is worth noticing.

The fifth volume of George Middleton's plays will be "The Road Together" [Holt]. The dramatist and his publishers have just made the final arrangements for its publication

THAT'S A GIFT.

"Observe my bean," the Stranger said,
  "O slant the bulge of yonder brow."
"You have," said I, "a noble head,
  A sterling coco, I'll allow."
"Within that dome," the Stranger cried,
  "Are countless gems of lambent lore,
A flock of wisdom, true and tried,
  A mine of wit, a sapient store.

"Behind my altitudinous brow
  A corrugated thinker sits.
It's in a state of coma now,
  But, gosh, it throws sagacious fits!
For it is crammed with all the dope
  Of ev'ry book on ev'ry shelf.
You get my modest view, I hope?
  I hate to talk about myself.

"I know more art than any Taine,
  More Rome than Gibbon, Greece than Grote,
More law than old Sir Henry Maine,
  More poetry than any pote;
I've delved as deep as Darwin did,
  Beside me Euclid is a sham, and
Socrates a weanling kid,
  I know more words than Percy Hammond!"

"From which remarks I glean," said I,
  "You are a shrewd and wise gazook,
A keen and perspicacious guy,
  A shining light, a gumptious gook."
"You're right," he sighed. "My wondrous brain
  Is hep indeed to all the ropes,
But still my heart is full of pain:
  I cannot pick good canteloupes."

Answers Every
Gasoline Question

Before the Stewart Vacuum System came on the market the question of gasoline feed was a most serious and annoying one.

The car owner had to choose one of two evils.

Either the unreliability of the old gravity system plus the noise, smell and danger of a gas tank under the front seat or in the cowl.

—or the 10% to 20% wastage, the bothersome hand pumping and the futile attempt to keep out air leaks, with the complicated pressure system.

The Stewart Vacuum System insures an even positive, regulated flow of gasoline to the carburetor under all conditions.

The gas tank is placed at the rear of the car where it properly belongs.

Is it any wonder that already 60% of all car manufacturers are using the Stewart Vacuum System as standard equipment and that thousands of car owners are taking out old, wasteful, bothersome, unreliable systems and installing the Stewart Vacuum System?

Can be readily installed on any car now in use. Only $10 complete.

Take this tip when buying a new car. You want a car with liberal quality and service built in every part and every accessory. You can be sure that any car having Stewart Products: Stewart Tire Pump, Stewart Speedometer, Stewart Warning Signal and Stewart Vacuum System as standard equipment is made by a liberal car manufacturer.

ASTRONOMY

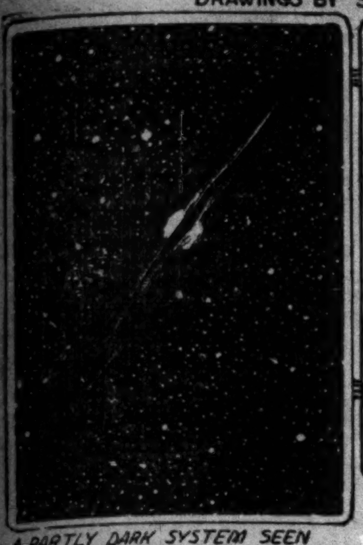
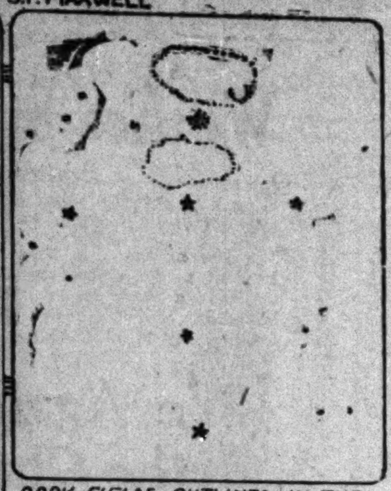
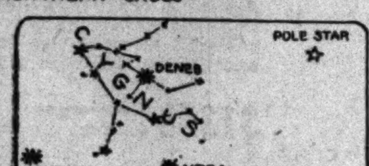
DARK STAR FIELDS
DRAWINGS BY S. F. MAXWELL



A PARTLY DARK SYSTEM SEEN EDGEWISE AGAINST A FIELD OF BRIGHT STARS



DARK FIELDS OUTLINED IN THE NORTHERN CROSS



THE CONSTELLATION OF CYGNUS CONTAINING THE NORTHERN CROSS

DARK STAR FIELDS.

In the Milky Way are a number of spots known as "coal sacks." They are spots without suns. They are dark gaps, as if they were windows into infinity. It does not matter what astronomy indicates as the distance of the remotest visible body. It at least is within perception. It is there and the region it tenants is filled.

A coal sack seems to indicate a void. It seems to have no tenants. Through it the eye looks beyond to nothing. It presents the void. An infinite void fascinates the imagination.

The Milky Way itself is a wonderful band of celestial phenomena, composed of the most distant stars showing in swarms, clusters, streams, nebulous clouds, and masses.

The coal sacks are dark holes in this luminous band, the casements upon eternity and infinity. Two of these openings may be found in the constellation Cygnus. The principal star in Cygnus is Deneb. It is a part of the figure known as the Northern Cross. Deneb lies in a dense part of the Milky Way and is conspicuous amid the more distant suns. Deneb, with the pole star and Vega, forms a triangle.

The Northern Cross, of which it forms a part, is not a conspicuous figure, but it may be found and identified, and the above illustration shows where its famous coal sacks are located.

Opinion once was that these were voids, as has been said, but now it is astronominal judgment that they represent dark star fields.

The absence of stars is unusual, for telescopes which reveal millions in regions nearby show few points of light here from what is beyond.

These conspicuous black places may easily be seen on any clear summer night when there is no moon. They are not unique, for the Milky Way is filled with them, large and small, and they appear on every photograph of a thick star field. The explanation is that they are fields of dark stars.

In a few cases, such as Algol, Spica, and Polaris, the spectroscope shows the presence of a dark companion nearby. In others, such as Sinus, the dark star has actually been seen. But we need only look at our own solar system to see the types of dark stars which people the universe. We live on a dark planet. All the rest of the sun's attendants, from the hot, seething Jupiter to the cold, dead moon, are dark and shine only by reflected light. They are all quite invisible from our nearest stellar neighbor. The sun is also surrounded by a vast swarm of dark meteoric matter, the zodiacal light, as well as by planets. Were space filled by many such systems, the aggregate would be as a dark cloud through which no light could pass.

A star is bright only a small part of its total life. By far the most of its existence is passed as a dark, dead sun, surrounded by cold frozen satellites. These black fields in the sky are regions where most of the stars are too cold and dark to send us any light. The only way we can be sure of their presence is to have them interposed between us and some bright star field. Then the light they stop is noticeable by contrast and we see them.

The TRIBUNE'S WEEKLY ALMANACK

JUNE-JULY

The Wild Rose.

In MEADOW rue and bracken, flowering viburnun and full berried wild currants, where the violets have bloomed and where the helianthus will bloom, in the sweet clover and at the edge of wych hazel thickets the wild rose is in flower.

With red bud and pale flower it specks or fills the brush, like the shad bush blossom an evanescent thing of beauty, but colored to the fuller ripeness of summer just arrived, whereas the shad bush flower is virginal in spring just certain of its processes.

Honeysuckle berries are full formed and false Solomon's seal is in delicate white bloom. Young birds in the nests are appetent and exacting. The chewink makes the early morning gay. Sundown brings chill, mornings are brilliant, afternoons overcast. The wood thrush sings in the evening after a drenching; garden truck promises comfort to Esau and the wild rose blooms.

It spreads its petals for the welcome of summer, modest garlands for a conqueror, a blushing tribute to the power which shall compel fecundity and fill the granaries of the earth with riches. The wild rose bows and blushes as the bride of July and a cat bird in the brush sings songs to the beauty of created things.

July comes sweet to smell and see, fit for the modest offerings of the most radiant and delicate of the briars.

The Guard
by Edwin Balmer

In the piping times of peace, when the fools said war must cease,
And anyway could not reach us again,
Through our country here and there men still gathered to prepare
And drill themselves to sterner regimen.
They were
The guard; the national guard! Tin soldier boys parading; just the guard.
When they marched by with a band sometimes they'd get a hand;
But otherwise why bother 'bout the guard?

They were farmer boys and clerks, trainmen—everything but shirks,
And they met and drilled as often as they could,
For they knew when trouble came they'd be called to play the game
And give their lives for our foolhardihood.
They were
The guard! Our neighbors doing duty as our guard!
While we blabbered of our might they just got in trim to fight,
So when our showdown came we'd have a guard.
Thus they're going now for us, and you don't hear any fuss,
Though they've wives and babies home like yours and mine.
They had no more call than you, except they chose to do
And were ready to fight in the battle line.

So honor to
The guard! For trouble's come; we know it. They're our guard!
Hell's loose upon the border! Mr. President, give the order!
Right away! Quick! Men! We need 'em! Call the guard!

A Roadster—with Plenty of Room for Four

This is a new type—one that's different, yet exceedingly practical.

Built on the famous Abbott-Detroit Six chassis, it is just the car for anyone not requiring a big touring car body.

It's a companionable arrangement—and one that's very convenient.

A wide aisleway between the front seats gives easy access to the roomy rear compartment, where two adults can ride in perfect comfort.

There's plenty of leg room—plenty of room to stretch and relax.

Even on an extended tour you'll never be cramped. The wheelbase is 122 inches.

The four passenger roadster makes a trim, snappy, racy car.

In style, lines, finish and performance it is an advance over anything yet produced.

ART by Louise James Bargelt

This is the second of a series of three articles dealing with modern Swedish art.

THE FIRST PAINTER OF SNOW.

IN Sweden there is a great similarity between art and sport. Gustaf Adolph Fjaestad, who is the first painter of snow in the world, was once a champion skater also. The Swedes say he was born with a pair of skates on his feet, and when still in school had the reputation of the wizard of the ice. Temperamentally he is a descendant from the Vikings, with their worship of outdoor sports and their passionate love of beauty and color.

When Fjaestad grew to be a man he wanted the open and all that went with it—long winters, vast wildernesses, and immense freedom. He found a woman like himself, a sportswoman and an artist. In 1898 they went far north and built a home within the arctic circle, where the nights of winter are fearfully long and lonely and the days of summer longer still and full of beauty.

As an artist Germany first recognized him, and it was Germany that was instrumental in bringing his work to this country. Now every country in Europe pays tribute to his genius.

"Is Spring Never Coming?" is perhaps the most famous of his water colors. All the forest swathed in billowy crests is marvelously illusory in the pale moonlight. Among his best known oils are "Frost on the Ice" and "Tracks in the Snow." His snow effects are little short of marvelous at times. One particularly inspiring picture is a whirling mountain stream. It seems human in the way it is resisting the huge arms of ice which are reaching out to choke and throttle it.

Fjaestad has devoted himself quite extensively to the applied arts as well, and in his rustic furniture has endeavored to produce true Scandinavian decorative motives. In these latter creations as well as in the designing of such articles as candlesticks, lamps, and other household decorations and utilities his wife has always been of great help.

Contemporary with Anders Zorn, however, and closely associated with the wonderful Swedish period of 1886, stand out the names of Carl Larsson, Ernst Josephson, and Bruno Andreas Liljefors.

Of these, Liljefors is the greatest, having been placed at the head of animal painters of Europe by continental critics. He lives with his wife the life of a solitary hunter in the inaccessible wildernesses of the rocky Baltic coast. He hunts to paint and paints to hunt, and those who know him best find it hard to decide which is the greater passion in his heart.

In his youth he traveled the world over, although he has been little influenced by other painters. He does not, like Landseer, idealize his animals or give them the emotions of mankind. He paints the animals as brutes and makes them fascinating in their frank barbarity. His coloristic talent is great, but if another comparison be permitted, it is not the important feature of his work that Zorn's color is of his. It serves his intentions but demands no especial attention.

Among his best known are his "Winter Hare," his crows perched in the pine boughs, his "Foxes," and his "The Hunter." He is an extremely prolific painter, his works numbering up into the hundreds, and his interpretation is as rich and varying as nature herself.

"Vallkulla," an Etching by Anders L. Zorn, Now Hanging in the Art Institute

Ernst Josephson's name stands out distinctively among those of the earlier artists. He became insane as early as 1887, however, and so is known to posterity only by the work which he did in his young days. His most famous picture, "Water Sprite," is now owned by Prince Eugen and is, more than any other work, the quintessence of his genius. "Saul and David" is another important piece of work, done something after the portrait groups of Rembrandt.

The water colors of Carl Larsson are another addition to the modern art of Sweden. They were the medium by which he was first recognized in Europe. As an illustrator he attained a still higher excellence, but his consummate achievement was in mural decoration. He has a tremendous ceiling piece in the Dramatic theater in Stockholm and six fine frescoes in the National museum.

Among his fine paintings are "My Wife," "The Love Park," "In the Snow," and "Kersti at the Window."

Other names stand out prominently in the category of Swedish painters. There is Eugene Jansson, absorbed in penetrating nature's secrets; Karl Nordstrom, a strong influence in holding the artists of the "Artists' association" together, and Nils Krueger, accurately and calmly painting domestic animals in the open.

There are few artists of the figure in the current art of Sweden. Richard Bergh is a portrait painter who has done some significant physiological work in likenesses. His studies of Strindberg and Froding call forth the admiration of the physiologist as well as the art lover. Carl Wilhelmson is a faithful depictor of the life of the Swedish people, producing pale, thin peasant girls with unspeakabe woe in their eyes.

In striking contrast to this are the orgies in color of Gosta von Hennings. He seems fairly intoxicated by color, and his subjects are for the most part vivid creatures outside the pale of conventional society—clowns and dancing girls and bareback riders of all descriptions.

Sweden at present is not only an art producing country but an art loving country as well, and a country where a great deal of fine art is bought.

Next week the work of the prominent Swedish sculptors will be described.

The Swedish collection, which will be in Chicago on July 11, has just left the Carnegie Institute of Fine Arts, Pittsburgh, and been sent to Detroit. It was on exhibition at the Canegie institute for twenty-four days and attracted 17,456 visitors during its stay.

The galleries of the Art Institute are gay now with the work of the students of the institute. They are lively, interesting studies in portraiture, in mural painting, in still life, and in landscape. There are skitches of numerous types, models in sculpture and in ceramics, and an excellent handicrafts show.

There are some attractive pieces of portraiture by the students of Mr. Clarkson's atelier. One striking place is that of a girl in blue serge with soft brown hair and eyes that match. Among the work shown by the students of Mr. Wolcott's atelier is one of an alluring girl in pink. She is blond with a delicate beauty and the picture is flooded with sunlight.

There are some fine magazine and book illustrations by pupils of Mr. Forsberg and some exquisite lace and jewelry designs by second and third year pupils.

The exhibit will last until July 5.

Exhibitions at the galleries:

Abbott gallery—Paintings in tempera by Alfonso Iannelli.

Moulton & Ricketts—Collective exhibition of paintings by George Joseph Seideneck.

Anderson's Art gallery—Paintings and water colors by Sydney Adamson.

Roullier's Art gallery—Collection of engravings and old mezzo prints.

Exhaust Echoes

The motor car dealers of San Francisco, led by President W. L. Hughson of the Pacific Kisselkar branch, have shown their sentiment for preparedness by pledging the use of 118 automobiles for the transportation of citizen-soldiers to the first annual encampment at Monterey, beginning July 9. Mr. Hughson agreed to furnish twenty-five Kisselkars for the purpose, five of which are trucks, other dealers offering from five to twenty vehicles.

The Deitz auxiliary carburetor presents an interesting possibility with the slogan: "A rainy day on a dry road." This device moistens the hot air entering the carburetor, which gives in intensified degree the effect of damp weather on the explosive mixture. "Gasoline and water will not mix," says Murray Shandal, manager of the Deitz Sales company, 1428 Michigan avenue, "and when carburetion is effected with damp air the molecules of gasoline are prevented from uniting under compression in the cylinders. This permits thinning of the mixture, and I always turn off part of the gasoline supply at the carburetor after installing our device. This proves to our users a saving of gasoline before they leave our floor." A clever feature of this device is that it is designed to go on a car without drilling any holes in the manifold, radiator, or engine, which will appeal to lots of owners.

Preparedness propaganda is taking visible effect in increasing the efficiency of the aeronautic service. The navy department has recently installed a motor truck tender service at aeronautic stations for transportation of knockdown aeroplanes, supplies, and ammunition. The extremely wide range of traction conditions necessitated exhaustive tests by United States engineers, who finally adopted the Little Giant one ton chain drive truck as the best adapted to deep sand and mud, and because of its performance on rough roads and steep grades.

In addition to the service performed by cars actually in the fighting zone, the famous nonstop Maxwell, the car that ran 22,000 miles without a single stop of the motor, has proved an efficient auxiliary to Uncle Sam's fighting force. The car was used recently by United States officers at Douglas, Ariz., which is the western center of military activities along the international boundary. The efforts of the nonstop Maxwell have been supplemented by a fleet of Maxwells, none of which has seen less than 10,000 miles of Arizona stage service. When a new camp was established out of Douglas the Maxwells transported the soldiers over the rough roads, nine troopers to a car.

"American motorists do not realize how lucky they are," says W. G. Tennant of the Tennant Oakland company. He has just received word that in Australia American made cars are selling for more than twice as much as they are in this country. In fact, he has seen an advertisement in the Adelaide Mail for the Oakland dealer in that city and the price of the Oakland Six is quoted at £335, which is equivalent to $1,625 in American money. The high freight rates, the war tax, and additional duties have caused this increase, but in spite of the high prices Australians are buying practically nothing but American made cars and find them more economical and better built than those coming from their parent country.

Previous records for two consecutive days of car sipments were recently broken by the Studebaker corporation when 747 Studebaker cars were loaded from the factory shipping platforms.

A detail of petty officers from the navy aeronautic station, Pensacola, Florida, in charge of Lieut. R. T. Young and Lieut. J. C. Monfort, visited the Packard factory recently to study the twin six motor as to its suitability for use in navy aircraft. C. M. Burt of the motor inspection department was detailed to instruct the visiting detail as to the various features of the motor and to explain its principles of design. The men devoted two days to this study. During their visit in Detroit several other automobile plants were inspected and some time was given to the study of other types of motors. Because of the continuous, even flow of power, the absence of vibration, and the ability to endure long periods of sustained speed, Lieut. Young was favorably impressed with the twin six type of engine and predicted America will follow the lead of England and France in making it standard for aircraft.

W. H. Cahall of Pasadena, Cal., recently demonstrated the flexibility of the new Mitchell model in a novel manner when he took his prospect out in a seven passenger stock car and showed him the car could be driven on high slower than a man could walk on his hands beside the machine. The prospect was skeptical, so a thirty foot course was laid out and Earl Morris, a well known coast athlete, walked the thirty feet in eight seconds. The Mitchell car traveling on high gear made the same 30 feet in twelve seconds. This means that the car was traveling on high speed at the rate of a mile an hour or less, whereas Mr. Morris went on his hands at the rate of a mile and a half an hour.

There is at least one branch of transportation in which the cost of gasoline is negligible, according to H. C. Hart, manager of truck sales for the Thomas B. Jeffery company. That is in municipal fire service. Mr. Hart quotes scores of cities where this is being proved every day. In Zanesville, O., for example, gasoline for the motor fire apparatus costs the city 24 cents a week, as against Chief Tanner's estimate of $12 a day for feeding horses to do the same work with hay and feed at the present high prices.

Last Sunday's motor derby at the Chicago speedway was another sweeping victory for Silvertown cord tires, as all ten cars to finish inside the money were equipped with this make of casing. In fact, Silvertown cords were first in all of last year's major league events and have a clean record so far this season.

"My Work is Done"

The Mid-Year Mitchell, and the plant that builds it, embody in full my ideas of efficiency. The car is my 17th Model. I have spent 13 years on the factory. I submit the result to all men as marking the best that lies within me.—John W. Bate

Every man, in any line of business, should study this Mid-Year Mitchell.

It matters not what car you own, or what car you favor. Or if you want no car at all.

The New Mitchell, in a thousand details, typifies efficiency. It is the product of a model efficiency plant. It is the creation of a genius in efficiency. Every man can gain some inspiration from it.

A Car to Rule

John W. Bate, the efficiency engineer, came here to build the master car. And to found a plant to build that car at the lowest cost.

It has taken him long. The industry was new. The very machinery had to be invented. It took ten years to evolve the Light Six type, which seems finality.

But the results you see in this Mid-Year Mitchell will win your deep respect.

Big Safety Factors
Lifetime Service

Mr. Bate's great aim was to build a long-lived car. And to build a reliable car, practically trouble-proof.

He has dealt with part by part. He has almost wiped out castings. In this New Mitchell, 440 parts are either drop forged or stamped from toughened steel.

He has used a wealth of Chrome-Vanadium. He has made parts oversize. His margins of safety are at least 50 per cent. In the car itself, Mr. Bate has made more than 700 improvements.

Six of his Mitchells have averaged 164,372 miles each—over 30 years of ordinary service. And they are still in active use.

Cost Reduced 50%

Despite his high standards, he has in six years reduced Mitchell costs 50 per cent.

He has done this by building a model plant. By equipping that plant with 2092 up-to-date machines. And by training our army of workers.

Probably no other plant could build this New Mitchell within 20 per cent of our cost.

26 Extras—Free

The results show in the car. It is the most complete car that was ever built.

$1325 F. o. b. Racine
For 5-Passenger Touring Car or 3-Passenger Roadster
7-Passenger Touring Body, $35 Extra
High-speed economical Six—48 horsepower—127-inch wheelbase. Complete equipment, including 26 extra features.

It is big, powerful, roomy, luxurious. It is the highest-grade car ever sold at a modest price.

It has 26 extra features. That is, features other cars omit, or list at extra prices. Some of them are costly—all of them important. In the Mitchell they are paid for out of factory savings.

Luxury in Extreme

This Mid-Year Mitchell embodies 73 new attractions. All the new touches are in it—all the luxuries and beauties which our experts found in 257 Show cars.

It has a 22-coat finish. It has French-finished upholstery. It has Bate cantilever springs. It has a power tire pump, a locked compartment a light in the tonneau—scores of things you want.

Do yourself the justice of inspecting this car. We know you will say that Mr. Bate deserves the thanks of Motordom.

At the showroom you will see how great engineers regard him. You will find the proof that they regard this car a mechanical masterpiece. And it is, as you know, the most talked-about car of the time.

Let us show you why you pay $250 to $400 LESS for a Studebaker!

Studebaker

Understand at the start, we don't mean that you pay less for less value. Not at all. What we'd like to do is to have a few minutes of your time to show you how and why you can get POWER, roominess, comfort, luxury, every quality that you expect in a car in the SERIES 17 Studebakers—at $250 to $400 LESS than the price of other cars that equal them.

Detroit's judgment has testified to the mechanical superiority of Studebaker design. Detroit makes three-fourths of the cars produced in the country—knows cars from the technical side as no other city does. And Detroit registrations during the year of 1915 showed Studebaker far in the lead of any car selling at over $500.

Likewise the State of California showed Studebaker at the top of its 1915 registrations for cars selling at over $500. And California knows cars from the performance—having more miles of good roads and more days of good driving weather than any other State.

With such testimony back of the cars—and a price $250 to $400 LOWER than any other cars of equal quality—can you safely decide on any other car? Come in and let us show you the cars.

WITH the settlement of the Resta-De Palma feud at the Chicago speedway last Sunday and after the running of the third annual 100 mile race at Galesburg Tuesday, Mercury followed the course of the "star of empire" and pitched his camp west of the Mississippi river.

By the middle of July the speed fans of four transmississippian cities will have experienced the thrills that traveled up and down the spines of local racing enthusiasts the last two Sundays, for within the netx three weeks races will be run in Des Moines, Sioux City, Minneapolis, and Omaha.

The Des Moines event is the first on the calendar, being scheduled for tomorrow afternoon. On the Fourth of July the speedways at Sioux City and Minneapolis will be the scenes of Mercurian strife. Omaha will stage its 1916 race on July 15. With the exception of Sioux City, these contests are A. A. A. championship events, being classed with the Metropolitan trophy race at New York, the Indianapolis international sweepstakes, and the Chicago motor derby.

The 150 mile race at Des Moines has attracted all of the stars that competed in the Chicago classic last Sunday, with the exception of the winner, Dario Resta, who probably will rest upon his laurels until the starting bomb explodes at Omaha the middle of next month.

1916 Bosch Trophy

The absence of Resta in the June 26 event will be offset by the appearance on the starting line of Earl Cooper with the Stutz. The Des Moines race will be the debut of the Californian in competition this season east of the Rockies, because of the edict of Harry Stutz that none of his cars should participate in speedway contests held this side of the Mississippi.

Fourteen cars—the limit allowed on a one mile track by the A. A. A. rules—will start in tomorrow's race at Des Moines, the field being as follows:

Car.	Driver.
Mercedes	Ralph De Palma
Sunbeam	Josef Christiaens
Stutz	Earl Cooper
Hudson	Ralph Mulford
Maxwell	Eddie Rickenbacher
Duesenberg	Eddie O'Donnell
Duesenberg	Wilbur D'Alene
Crawford	Billy Chandler
Maxwell	Pete Henderson
Duesenberg	Tommy Milton
Crawford	Dave Lewis
Clergy Special	George Barndollar
Sunbeam	Frank Galvin
Duesenberg	George Muzane

The Twin City speedway probably will attract the majority of the stars on the Fourth of July, as it has been awarded an A. A. A. title event, while the rival attraction at Sioux Ciy has no been so classified. All six of the cars owned by the Indianapolis sepeedway—the two Peugoets, the two Premiers, and the two Maxwells—have been entered in the Minneapolis meet, which will consist of 150, 50, 20, and 10 mile races, as well as De Palma's Mercedes, the Duesenbergs, the Sunbeams, Ralph Mulford's Peugeot, and Ira Vail's Hudson.

The Independence day meet at Sioux City will be watched with interest, however, as the Hawkeye promoters will introduce the innovation of giving the drivers 50 per cent of the gate receipts instead of hanging up a stipulated amount of prize money.

The drivers' share of the gate receipts will be divided in the three races to be run as follows: Ten mile event, 20 per cent; twenty mile event, 30 per cent, and 100 mile event, 50 per cent. These sums, in turn, will be distributed to the place winners on the following graduated point basis:

Ten mile event—First, 40 points; second, 25 points; third, 15 points; fourth 10 points; fifth, 7 points, and sixth, 3 points.

Twenty mile event—First, 40 points; second, 20 points; third, 15 points; fourth, 9 points; fifth, 8 points; sixth, 4 points; seventh, 3 points, and eighth, 2 points.

One hundred mile event—First, 50 points; second, 20 points; third, 10 points; fourth, 8 points; fifth, 6 points; sixth, 3 points; seventh, 2 points, and eighth, 1 point.

The Sioux City meet should not suffer because of the conflict with the Twin City races, as there are sufficient cars and drivers of class to furish competition at both places. Fred Duesenberg will probably divide his team the Fourth of July, and Ralph Mulford is planning to send Fred McCarty with the Baby Hudson to the Hawkeye speed carnival.

Omaha will have an all star field this year. Last season the race at the Nebraska metropolis suffered because of its proximity to the Sioux City event, several of the drivers that competed at Sioux City on July 3 being unable to get their cars in shape to start at Omaha on July 5. De Palma and Resta will both be on the starting line at Omaha on July 15, and will have for challengers Ralph Mulford, Josef Christiaens, Eddie O'Donnell, and Eddie Rickenbacher.

After one race in May and two in June there will be no more events on the Chicago speedway until August, when President David F. Reid plans to run an all star event in which the cars must make a lap of the two mile course at an average speed of 100 miles per hour or better in order to qualify.

There are twelve or fifteen cars now being campaigned that should be equal to the elimination test, including Dario Resta's Peugeot, Ralph De Palma's Mercedes, Ralph Mulford's Peugeot, Josef Christiaens' Sunbeam, Eddie Rickenbacher's Maxwell, Johnny Aitken's Peugeot, Eddie O'Donnell's Duesenberg, Earl Cooper's Stutz, Gil Anderson's Premier, Tom Alley's new Ogren, Howdy Wilcox's Premier, Jack Gable's Burman Special, Charley Merz's Peugeot, Frank Galvin's Sunbeam, Wilbur D'Alene's Duesenberg, and Pete Henderson's Maxwell.

Application already has been made to the A. A. A. contest board for a sanction for this event, President Reid requesting Saturday, Aug. 12, to be reserved. This date will conflict with the Pike's Peak hill climb and is the Saturday previous to the Elgin road race.

The distance of the all star event has not been definitely decided upon as yet, the promoters talking of either a 200 mile race or three heats of fifty miles each, the first three cars to finish in each heat being credited with 50, 30, and 20 points, respectively, and the total points scored in all three heats to determine how the prize money shall be awarded.

President Reid also is planning to hold another nonprofessional race on Labor day. This event will be open to foreign and American cars from any part of the United States. Last month's amateur race was confined to the middle west and mounts bearing a transatlantic nameplate were barred.

TRIBUNE MOTORING MAPS.

In addition to supplying route information, "The Tribune" has a supply of automobile maps for distribution that will be sent upon request provided 6 cents in stamps is inclosed to cover cost of mailing. The maps, which were prepared by Automobile Blue Book experts, show all the main routes within 150 miles of Chicago, the principal automobile roads in the central states, the important highways of northeastern Illinois, southeastern Wisconsin, southwestern Michigan, and northwestern Indiana, and the links in Chicago's boulevard chain. In writing for route information for your summer tour you may find it profitable to have "The Tribune" motoring maps sent you in addition.

Questions and Answers

I desire a route from Chicago to Tomahawk, Wis., and as I have heard a great deal about the Yellowstone trail and the thorough manner in which it is marked, would like to follow that road as far as possible. Kindly state intermediate mileages. C. K. M., Chicago.

It will be possible for you to follow the Yellowstone trail as far as Stevens Point, Wis., and you will find most of the route good. Leaving Chicago pass through Evanston, Waukegan, Kenosha, Racine, South Milwaukee, Milwaukee, 90.5 miles; Richfield, Schlesingerville, Addison, Theresa, Lomra, Fond du Lac, Van Dyne, Oshkosh, 80.7 miles; Medina, Dale, Fremont, Weyewega, Waupaca, Sheridan, Amherst, Stevens Point, 79.1 miles. At this point you would leave the Yellowstone trail, going due north through Knowlton, Mosinee, Rothschild, Wausau, and Merrill to Tomahawk, 78.5 miles.

Will you please give me your opinion regarding carbon removing preparations? What do you consider the most effective method for removing carbon? NEOPHYTE, Edgerton, Wis.

Some of the carbon removers are quite good, but the majority of them leave considerable silicon and metal dust, which, when mixed with the oil, has a grinding tendency. After using carbon removing preparations, be sure and see that all trace of the stuff is blown out and that the piston carries none between the top edge of the top ring and the top outside wall of the piston. The most common method of disposing of carbon is to have it scraped out by a mechanic, who should grind the valves at the same time, but the quickest way, and at the same time a most satisfactory one, is to have the carbon burned out. It is unlikely that you will find anybody in your town that can do this, but the next time you drive to a large city you can find plenty of garages where four cylinders could be cleaned out within forty-five minutes.

Why does Harry Stutz refuse to race his cars east of the Mississippi river? H. D. M., Chicago.

At the close of the 1915 season Stutz announced that he would retire from the game until the record of 102 miles per hour, made by Gil Anderson with a Stutz in the Vincent Astor cup race, was equaled or broken. At the request of Earl Cooper, who has campaigned a Stutz for several years, he loaned him a car with the provision that he should not start it east of the Mississippi river, claiming that with the exception of Chicago he receved unfair treatment from the speedways located in this territory.

Will you please publish the best route to Grand Beach, which, I believe, is located near Michigan City, Ind.? K. C., Chicago.

Take Michigan avenue, Garfield boulevard, Washington park, Midway, Jackson park, South Shore drive, Eighty-third street, and Burley avenue, through South Chicago, Hammond, East Chicago, Calumet, Gary, Miller station, East Gary, Porter, Furnaceville station to Michigan City. At Franklin and Michigan streets keep ahead with trolley in Franklin street, turning right around hotel in Second street, and leaving trolley. Cross railroad and iron bridge, turning right beyond—still in Second street. Cross railroad, coming onto macadam. Follow railroad to next left hand road, turning left across railroad to Grand Beach, 60.4 miles.

Can you inform me where I may obtain a road map covering nearby points in southeastern Wisconsin, northeastern Illinois, southwestern Michigan, and northwestern Indiana? TOURIST, Chicago.

"The Tribune" has a supply of such maps on hand and will be pleased to furnish you one if you will call at the automobile route department, room 342.

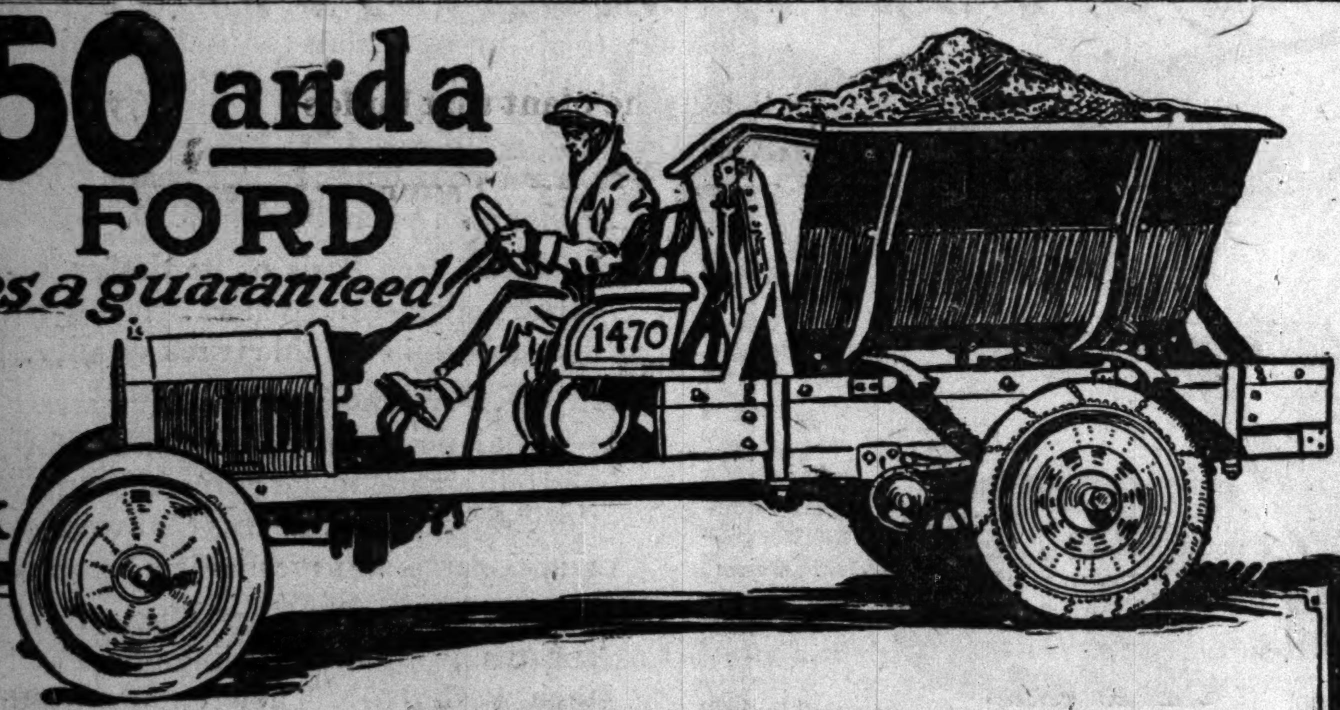
$350 and a FORD makes a guaranteed One Ton Truck



This Lee Dumping Body Shows Four to One Saving in Time and Money

CONTRACTORS and builders on excavation work, road building and all forms of construction requiring sand, gravel crushed stone or rock can use a Smith Form-a-Truck equipped with a steel dumping body at a lower cost for hauling than any other type of truck transportation.

SMITH Form-a-Truck

The E. T. Towar Transportation Engineering Co., of Detroit recently demonstrated a four to one saving in time and money over horses in this same work. Because it is light in weight, the Smith Form-a-Truck can be used in the soft soil of excavations where heavier trucks sink in and get mired. If you are a doubter write to Towar.

There is no place where horse drawn dumping bodies can go that the Smith Form-a-Truck cannot be used; and in many places where other trucks cannot be used with safety, the Smith Form-a-Truck is in service every day. And the Smith Form-a-Truck chassis is built to stand up under the hard work required by contractors.

The Smith Form-a-Truck attachment itself is a Four inch channel section steel frame and heavy rectangular section drop forged steel rear axle: artillery type wood wheels with extra heavy spokes, chain drive, Firestone solid truck tires, with the rear axle of the Ford chassis used as a jackshaft.

The loading space is nine feet long, allowing for the use of a steel dumping body of big capacity.

Ninety percent of the total load is carried by the Smith Form-a-Truck rear axle, reducing the strain on the Ford chassis to a point where it actually carries less weight than when used as a touring car. The Smith Form-a-Truck is built for long, hard service.

It is strongly reinforced where the strain comes to protect against necessity for repair charges. It is built for the kind of work you will require of it.

It is quickly installed on any Ford chassis.

Two men can do the work in a few hours, and when installation is complete, you have a wonderfully strong, wonderfully economical, wonderfully adaptable, complete truck unit.

Save 25% on Gasolene, with Silvertown Cord Tires

MOST flexible of all Tires!
Least Traction-Wave resistance!
Most Resilience!

Because,—

—There are only TWO LAYERS of Cords in ANY SIZE of Silvertown Tire.

This, as against 5 to 7 layers in all Fabric Tires, and all Thread (so-called "Cord") Tires.

It is Friction and Heat, (between layers) that WEARS OUT Tires internally.

Therefore, when you reduce that Friction and Heat to but ONE Friction-Centre (between 2 layers only) instead of FOUR to SIX Friction-Centres (between 5 to 7 layers) you reduce these Tire-destroying influences to about ONE-FOURTH, or ONE-SIXTH.

* * *

THIS TWO-LAYER feature is feasible, however, in NO OTHER Tires than those of the strongly-patented SILVERTOWN Cord construction,—in which each single Cord is STOUT enough, and STRONG enough, to lift a Man's weight.

Because.—

No other Tire construction would "stand up" under the tremendous strains of Load and Speed,—with LESS than the usual 5 to 7 layers of Fabric, or Thread.

The extreme RESILIENCE, and FLEXIBILITY, which results from the use of TWO LAYERS of giant CORDS only, gives you,—in Silvertown Tires,— —30% further "Coasting" capacity!

—25% more Mileage, per Gallon of Gasolene!
—17% more Speed, from same Car.
—50% more Comfort, in riding.
—as actual Test will prove.

Silvertowns are easily, and inexpensively, repaired.

'Made in Straight-side, as well as "Clincher."

And, no other Tires,—of any kind, average "LARGER."

Miss Alice Jergens.

Nineteen years ago the Corbett-Fitzsimmons fight pictures were shown at the Grand Opera house. Not since then have movies been shown at that playhouse. Next Friday the second cinema invasion will take place with the showing of the eleven reel photoplay, "Civilization," one of this season's crop of big spectacular moving pictures which have followed into the feature field opened by Griffith's "Birth of a Nation." Miss Alice Jergens will play one of the leading rôles.

Lured by a nice fat contract, Marguerite Snow has gone to Ivan.

Wheeler Oakman has joined Mabel Normand's company.

You can sort of imagine the sort of a director George L. Sargeant is from what a recent visitor at the American studio said after watching him work a few moments. Remarked the visitor: "He looks like Teddy Roosevelt and acts like Billy Sunday."

Cleo Madison of Universal announces that she will direct no more, but will confine her working attentions to her acting.

Funny Ralph Herz is married again! Miss Frances M. Logan of Washington, D. C., daughter of the late Maj. William Richard Logan, is the bride.

Rather a novelty is being introduced by the Metro company in the "Metro Travelogue." It will be released weekly beginning last Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew calmly disregard the laws of movie "make-up." Mr. Drew rarely makes up at all and Mrs. Drew often uses rouge, which is unusual, as red photographs dark and often black.

Bessie Barriscale, in common with a great many other stars, does not send her photograph out unless she receives 25 cents for the same. She made an exception not long ago, however, when a little country girl living near the Mississippi wrote that she would save up this summer 25 cents by selling "wild flowers to the rich women I see in automobiles." Right away quick a big, beautiful picture of Miss Barriscale was hustled to the framer's and, with a delightful letter, dispatched on its way to the home of the little admirer.

Mary Miles Minter has joined the Mutual forces.

Louis Tracy, the English novelist, has been engaged to write for Pathé.

J. L. Lasky, president of the Lasky Feature Film company, spoke on "Clean Motion Pictures" before a gathering of delegates at the biennial convention of the national federation of women's clubs in New York last week.

Courteney Foote has joined the Selig forces and will play opposite Kathlyn Williams in forthcoming productions.

E. K. Lincoln has gone to the World Film company.

The New York Motion Picture corporation has secured the services of Cameron Coffey, 4-year-old champion child swimmer, to do "water stunts." It is the little boy's first appearance before the camera.

Duncan McRae, for so long director of Edison pictures and recently affiliated with the Arrow brand of Pathé productions, has gone to Metro, where he will be leading man with Viola Dana.

Here's 'igh diplomatic society come to the fillums! Miss Louise Daniels Wirth, the niece of Josephus Daniels, secretary of the navy, has been engaged by the Thanhouser-Mutual studios. Miss Wirth will make her first appearance as a cinema player in "Her Uncle Sam's Navy."

J. W. Kerrigan, who is still in a California mining town taking pictures, sends back word that one evening he, assisted by others, landed 250 fine trout. Some fisherman!

Ammonia is said to have much to do with that puzzling art of weeping real tears.

The Last Barrier Is Out of the Dixie Highway.

The last barrier to the construction of the Dixie highway between Nashville and Chattanooga along the originally designated route has been removed, and there is nothing apparently now in the way for the speedy construction of this important link in the highway. With the highway built through Hamilton and Marion counties, this provides for the construction of the road between Nashville and Chattanooga, which is the last barrier to be removed to through travel from Michigan to Florida.

Franklin county, under the direction of R. S. Lander, is now at work constructing its section of the highway from the top of Cumberland mountain at Sewanee, through Winchester, to the Coffee county line. The citizens of Tullahoma are already at work on the section of the road in Coffee county. Contracts for the construction of two concrete bridges have been awarded. Tullahoma citizens have subscribed a sufficient amount to build their part of the road, and they have the machinery with which to maintain it. Provision has been made for construction of two miles through Moore county. The citizens of Bedford county are under bond to free their toll road. The money is subscribed for a bridge and provisions made for the completion of their road from Shelbyville to the Moore county line. The money has been subscribed for the purchase of the toll road through Rutherford county, and they are under bond to do this and to improve the old turnpike, which has been allowed to run down from the heavy traffic during the last year.

With the passage of a $200,000 bond issue in Boone county, Ky., and a $300,000 bond issue in the fourth road district in Brevard county, Fla., and the excellent prospects for the passage of the $1,500,000 bond issue in Polk county, Fla., the Dixie Highway association headquarters in the last ten days has been the recipient of a veritable landslide of good reports of results accomplished from the work the association has been carrying on in counties in every state from Michigan to Florida.

The association confidently expects to begin routing tourists straight through over the Dixie highway from the north to Florida this fall, according to V. D. L. Robinson of the association.

Gossip of the Auto Trade

Dr. J. D. Parks of Duluth, winner of the 1913 Glidden tour and vice president of the Minnesota State Automobile association, is the latest to enter the sociability automobile tour that starts from the Twin Cities for Yellowstone National park on July 20. He will man the same car that was driven in the national durability tour three years ago. North Dakota devoted two entire days last week to making repairs on the National Parks highway. It is estimated that fully 400 miles of roads were put in good condition for the trip and that over 6,000 enthusiasts were engaged in these improvements. It has also been arranged that drags and rollers will go over the route on the day before the tour is scheduled to pass over them.

The government appropriation bill contains an item of $5,000 for the benefit of the Yellowstone trail, to assist in improving that transcontinental highway across the Standing Rock Indian reservation in South Dakota. This item is there because of the recognized value of the Yellowstone trail as a transcontinental road, and the money that counties and states and individuals are putting into the improvement of the road.

FOUR WHEEL DRIVE

COLUMBIA EXPRESS CO.
General Cartage

1926 North Uber St., Philadelphia, Pa., Nov. 20, 1914.
Mr. Fred H. Cozzens, New York City.

The following is a complete report of my Four Wheel Drive Car:

Purchased Feb. 16, 1914.
Days worked............204
Days idle for repair..None
Miles run 12,240
Tire expense.........None
Gasoline consumed, 1473 Gallons
Oil consumed...43 Gallons

Truck used in my business as above.

Having used this truck alongside of a White truck and a Gramm truck and having used two other makes of rear drive trucks, I will say that the FOUR WHEEL DRIVE saves some thirty to forty per cent on running expenses and is the most dependable and efficient truck I have ever used. It has never given me any trouble and the repairs on it have been $18.15, which included breakage, repairing same and adjusting.

The truck is still in fine running condition and the original tires are still on and appear to be only about two-thirds used. They are Goodrich 38x6 inch single tires all around. My truck is three ton capacity and often carries one ton overload, without any apparent distress. (Signed) GEORGE H. KAY. (Owner.)

This shows a mileage record of 8.3 plus miles per gallon of gasoline and 284 plus miles per gallon of oil.

The above record is certified to as follows:

"State of Pennsylvania, County of Philadelphia, } ss.

On the Twentieth day of November, A. D., 1914, before me the subscriber, a Notary Public for the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, residing in the City of Philadelphia, personally appeared the within named George H. Kay, who, being duly sworn according to law, did depose and say that the facts set forth in the within statement are just and true to the best of his knowledge and belief. (Signed) GEORGE H. KAY.

Sworn and subscribed to before me the day and year aforesaid. (Signed) ALEX C. KNORR, Notary Public.

My commission expires Feb. 21, 1914."

GRAND RIVER CANNING CO.

Markesan, Wis., April 22, 1915.

A report on our three, three-ton, Four Wheel Drives.

Started work June 18, 1914.
Days worked 38
Idle for repairs, days. None
Miles run, all on country roads 9,020
Tire expense ....None
Gasoline consumed....1,412

Did not keep account of lubricating oil used.

We use our three trucks for drawing in green peas from our viner stations. The loads we carry vary from 3 1-2 to 4 1-2 tons.

The trucks have given us the very best of service, and have done the work of fourteen teams during the canning season.

The expense for repairs of the trucks has been so very small that we do not mention it at all, for there has been less than $15 expense on the three cars. Our cars have never been in any garage for adjustment of any kind. Our tires are the single tires, 36x6, and do not show hardly any wear at all.

GRAND RIVER CANNING CO., C. H. Smith.

State of Wisconsin, County of Green Lake. } ss.

On this 22d day of April, A. D. 1915, before me, a Notary Public in and for said county and state, appeared the above named C. H. Smith, to me known to be a member of Grand River Canning Co., who, being duly sworn according to law, says that the above facts set forth in the foregoing statement are just and true to the best of his knowledge and belief.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 22d day of April, 1915.

My commission expires January 26th, 1917.

STEVENS POINT BREWING CO.

Stevens Point, Wis., Dec. 15, 1914.

A report on our Four Wheel Drive purchased April 15th, 1914.

Days worked 174
Days idle for repairs. None
Miles run 10,200
Tire expense $40.00
Gasoline consumed, 2,940 Gallons.
Oil consumed..59 Gallons.
Grease ....180 lbs.

We use our truck for hauling beer to neighboring towns; our loads average from 2½ tons to 3 tons, with loaded empties on their way back; two-thirds of our roads are very sandy, some places five to six inches sand. The truck has given us the best of service and has done the work of four teams in the summer months. Our tires are the Goodrich single tires, 36x6; we expect the tires to run another season.

STEVENS POINT BREWING CO., By Nicholas Gross, Sec'y.

State of Wisconsin, County of Portage } ss.

On the 15th day of December, A. D. 1914, before me, a Notary Public in and for said County and State, appeared the above named, Nic Gross, Sec'y of the Stevens Point Brewing Co., who, being duly sworn according to law, says that the above facts set forth in the foregoing statement are just and true to the best of his knowledge and belief. NICHOLAS GROSS.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 15th day of December, 1914.

To Truck Salesmen—Present and Future

You men who are today selling trucks, and you who are planning to, do you realize the bigness, the importance of the industry you represent?

Consider this!

NO TRUCK OWNER EVER GOES BACK TO HORSES.

Even the truck that is not quite right is still so much better than horses that the owner gets another truck—a dependable one this time.

Two ideas you should get from this:

First: The tremendous scope and volume of the truck business everywhere. Horses are GOING surely and rapidly. You can see why the truck business of this country and your community hasn't been scratched.

Second: The necessity of connecting yourself with the permanent truck. Don't waste time with a truck that is merely a stepping stone to the real truck. Get the representation for the F. W. D. just as soon as you can. It's the truck owners stick to. The F. W. D. has fought its way upward by sheer merit. It forces recognition, approval, SALES. A good agency the first year—a good agency the rest of your life.

Long Years of Service from the truck that withstands these tests

F. W. D. owners prove F. W. D. power and efficiency in the daily work that the truck does.

Endurance—The F. W. D. is constructed to go through trials thousands of times that some trucks wouldn't go through once.

You want your truck to last years. That means you want the F. W. D.

Because the very basis of its design and construction—four wheel drive—gives it almost unbelievable truck vitality.

The F. W. D. method of equalizing strains—of balancing the power—neutralizes and eliminates a large percentage of the wracking movements that wear out truck frame and mechanism.

With all four wheels pulling, frame, springs, gears and bearings have only their work to do. They're not continually subjected to twists and wrenches that first lessen their efficiency and finally end in their destruction.

Don't accept these statements blindly.

Make us prove by letters from owners, by government tests, by definite data that the F. W. D. not only serves faithfully every day but that it—

Has long life—stands up—performs at 100% efficiency for years beyond what you'd ask.

Drop in and see the F. W. D. at 918 South Michigan Avenue, or telephone Harrison 682 and arrange a demonstration.

Gossip of the Auto Trade

French army transports are moving all of the troops, food, and ammunition used in the defense of Verdun. Since the German offensive was launched against the Verdun positions over two months ago, it has been impossible for trains to get anywhere near the city. German guns are in a position to drop shells on all of the railroads leading into Verdun, and the French forts have been entirely dependent upon motor trucks for transporting soldiers as well as supplying them with food and ammunition. Several hundred White trucks are in the service of the Verdun motor transport corps, operating in conjunction with trucks of Italian manufacture.

John Nicol, local distributer of the Federal motor trucks, has added to his line the "Old Hickory," a new light delivery car brought out by the Kentucky Wagon company of Louisville, Ky. "The Federal company," Mr. Nicol explains, "when it originally entered the truck field specialized on trucks of a capacity of three-quarters to one ton. At that time the field was not ripe for a truck of this size, and the Federal people discontinued their manufacture and commenced building the larger size trucks with which they have since made such a name for their concern. In fact, so rapidly has the output of this factory grown, they have not found it possible to get back to the manufacture of the smaller sizes of trucks, now that there is a real consistent demand for this kind of delivery car." Mr. Nicol has, therefore, selected the Old Hickory truck to serve this part of his business. Its construction, while somewhat different from that of the larger Federal, shows advantages in the light delivery car line that are marked. The Old Hickory is so constructed that a six or eight foot body may be placed upon it and still maintain the balance of the chassis and the pleasing appearance of the vehicle. In order to keep down gasoline expense the Old Hickory has been provided with an electric starter. The chassis price of $825 should make this delivery wagon instantly popular.

The New Era car is now being exhibited by the Chicago Auto Sales company at 1424 South Michigan avenue. Specifications of the New Era show an extraordinary assembly of efficient parts. At the price of $685 this car is said to have set a new standard in automobile values.

Motor trucks have solved that "extra hour of daylight" discussion as far as business is concerned, in the opinion of W. O. Duntley, pioneer builder of trucks. Compared with the horse drawn method the motor truck adds an hour to each end of the day, he says, with the result that "motorize" has become the transportation watchword and the motor truck an industrial necessity. Mr. Duntley speaks with a definite knowledge of conditions, for he is president of the Chicago Pneumatic Tool company, manufacturer of Little Giant trucks.

Police Records of Street Accidents.

FIGURES contained in the classified tables of highway accidents soon to be published in the annual report of the police department of New York City for the year 1915 are interesting. The tables show that of 10,653 accidents of which the causes were given, 8,661, or more than 81 per cent, were due to the fault or incapacity of the injured person, and only 700, or 6½ per cent, to the fault of the driver.

Horse drawn trucks and wagons caused 100 fatalities and injured 2,341 persons, while motor trucks and delivery wagons killed 105 during the year and injured 1,107. Passenger automobiles caused 177 fatalities and injured 4,688.

The total number of persons fatally injured during the year was 649 and the number less seriously hurt was 21,891. These figures, however, include 4,401 persons who sustained injuries in no way related to vehicles. They also include 955 persons hurt by running into or in front of vehicles, 1,290 injured when improperly boarding or alighting from street cars, 417 when stealing rides, 1,271 when skating or playing in the street, 330 while intoxicated, etc.

The record is taken to show the fallacy of attempting to reduce accidents materially by requiring all operators of motor vehicles to be licensed while no such regulation is applied to drivers of horse drawn vehicles.

Even more evident is considered the uselessness and unfairness of enacting ordinances requiring the fitting of safety fenders to motor trucks, which caused less than half as many accidents as horse drawn wagons. Street cars, which are equipped with fenders, killed seventy-seven and injured 1,694 persons during the year, as against 105 killed and 1,107 injured by motor trucks, although there were only 12,000 electric street cars in operation in the city, including subway and elevated cars, as compared with 12,575 commercial motor vehicles which were not fitted with fenders.

ANNOUNCING THE NEW SERIES

$635 75 B Overland $635

TRADE MARK REG

f.o.b. Toledo f.o.b. Toledo

This newest Overland is the world's most powerful low-priced car.

It has a 31½ horsepower en bloc motor that is a perfect marvel for speed, power and endurance.

By increasing the bore of the motor from 3⅛ to 3⅜" we are able to offer a power plant which at 1950 R.P.M. develops full 31½ horsepower.

Tests under every condition in all parts of the country demonstrate that it easily develops better than fifty miles per hour on the road.

Speed of course varies under different conditions, but in practically every instance it has been getting fifty miles an hour and with ease.

We have scores of telegrams showing that eighteen to twenty-five miles per gallon of gasoline is not unusual.

The performance of this car is almost beyond belief.

Take any other low-priced car on the market. Pit it against this new Overland. Compare them for sheer speed, for abundance of power, for riding comfort and economy, and you'll find this car will back anything else clean off the boards.

That's a strong statement, but a fact nevertheless.

Try it yourself and see.

Here are more important facts.

It has four-inch tires which are more than generous for a car of this size.

Not only has it a large and roomy body, but it has an attractive, up-to-date streamline body.

It has the latest and most improved system of ignition.

It has the cantilever springs—the easiest riding springs in the world.

What's more, it's complete. Not a thing to buy. You get the finest Auto-Lite electric starting and lighting system, magnetic speedometer, one-man top, demountable rims and practically every accessory found on the highest priced cars.

From a driving standpoint, the new car is ideal. It's light, easy to handle and anyone can drive it.

Take one look and be convinced.

And mark these words—the car is destined to be regarded and referred to as one of the really great achievements of the great automobile industry.

Yet it only goes to prove how big production can cut cost and save you money.

First come, first served. Place your order now.

WHY? Because in its two sizes it provides all that 90% of the American people need and want in a motor car.

We could give a little more and charge much more. But there is a point beyond which you merely merge into extravagance.

We could give less and charge less. But there is a point which borders on, if it does not reach into, the field of expensive cheapness.

The MARION-HANDLEY stands between these two extremes.

So well conceived—so masterfully designed—so skillfully built—so finely balanced; so exquisitely and scientifically blended are all the parts that enter into it, that we boldly proclaim it "the Six pre-eminent."

A year ago they said "it can't be done." Today it is a recognized and applauded reality.

NO. 11—ART KLEIN, KLEIN SPECIAL.

WHEN Art Klein, who made his first start of the 1916 season in the Chicago motor derby two weeks ago, brings home the bacon he does not partake of it. He is the Charley Herzog of the automobile racing game.

Finding that testing cars for the Peerless company was not exciting enough for him, Klein started in pursuit of fame and fortune as a race driver in 1911 when he joined the Stoddard-Dayton team and learned the rudiments of speedology on dirt tracks in county fair meets. His teammates were Bert Miller, Jap Clemons, and Tony De Hymel, the latter a full blooded Aztec who turned over and suffered fatal injuries three years ago.

In deference to the wishes of his mother Klein quit racing in 1912 and for two years worked in his brother's cigar store at Youngstown, O., but in the winter of 1914 he found the call of speed irresistible and at the request of the King company designed and built a car for the Indianapolis classic. In practice the King showed a lot of speed and verified the predictions of the dopesters that it would be a dangerous contender at the outset of the race when it was up fighting the leaders and running in fifth place. A broken valve at the completion of 220 miles forced Klein to dock the car permanently at the pits, however.

Klein and the King made a much better showing in their next appearance. The car was second in the 200 mile Potlatch trophy event at Tacoma, losing to Hughie Hughes' Maxwell by only four and two-fifths seconds. In the feature event of the Tacoma meet, the 250 mile Montamarathon, the King was third to get the checkered flag despite the fact that Klein changed a carburetor and eleven tires in the last fifty miles of the race.

In a dirt track meet at Seattle that same season Klein captured seventeen out of eighteen races, defeating such an all star cast as Earl Cooper, Hughie Hughes, Billy Carlson, and Teddy Tetzlaff. He also finished second to Cooper's Stutz in the 100 mile dirt track race at Phoenix and led the field at Corona for the first 100 miles, when his car cracked a cylinder.

Last season Klein and the King, which he rebuilt and rechristened the Kleinart, ran afoul of a jinx. At San Diego the car twisted off a pinion shaft at the tape and did not start; in the Vanderbilt cup chase Klein was in fourth place on the last lap, when he ran out of gasoline; at Venice a broken crankshaft put him among the also rans when he looked to have third money clinched; and in the Indianapolis classic mechanical trouble forced him to withdraw.

In hopes of shaking his jinx, Klein turned outlaw and joined Alex Sloan's barnstorming troupe. He broke records on every track he was on with the exception of Pittsburgh and won over 90 per cent of the races he entered. This year, however, he decided to go after the rich purses that the promoters of speedway events weer offering, and, asking the A. A. A. contest board for reinstatement, received an immunity bath so soon before the local classic that the whitewash was still wet when he started on the 300 mile drive.

How are the roads?

IF the Jazz band will kindly oblige, thousands of motorists will rise and sing: "What do you want the rest of June? Days of sunshine, we want you." The continued rains have put the roads in bad condition for touring and scores of trips are being postponed until more auspicious weather.

Following are the road bulletins sent in by the Automobile Blue Book road scouts during the last week:

ILLINOIS.

The Milwaukee avenue exit from Chicago is now closed. Detour through Norwood and Park Ridge, four and three-tenths miles. Two miles of the detour, which has been posted, is bad.

St. Louis to Terre Haute—The old National road, via Greenville, Vandalia, Effingham, Casey, and Marshall, is in fair condition with a few rough spots.

The Egyptian trail from Effingham to Mattoon and from Effingham to Salem has several rough stretches because of recent rains, but is in fairly good condition nevertheless.

IOWA.

River-to-river road—Tourists going west from Davenport are advised to turn right at eastern edge of Atalissa, first town west of Moscow; two miles further, turn left and follow road seven and one-half miles; then turn north to Centerdale and left onto river-to-river road four miles from Iowa City. Road repairs west of West Liberty and paving work at West Liberty make this detour necessary.

All east and west tourists are advised to follow the White Pole route via Muscatine, Columbus Junction, Washington, and Des Moines.

The Chicago, Kansas City, and Gulf route should be picked up at Washington after following the White Pole route west from Davenport. The C., K. C. & G. is the best route from Davenport into Chicago. The Davenport-Chicago road via Geneseo and Ottawa is only fair.

MISSOURI.

St. Joseph reports all roads in first class condition.

Chillicothe reports general road improvement going on in northern Missouri. The Jefferson highway, from Kansas City to Des Moines, through Excelsior Springs, Chillicothe, Trenton, Lineville, and Chariton, is in fine condition.

Chillicothe to Ottumwa, via Osgood, Newtown, and Seymour, is good.

St. Joseph to Chillicothe, via Pike's Peak highway, is good.

Hannibal to Keokuk, on west side of river [Red Ball route], is still under water in many places between Palmyra and Keokuk.

NEW YORK.

Albany to Pittsfield is closed from New Lebanon to Pittsfield until Nov. 15. Concrete is being laid and probable detour is via Lake Queechy, Richmond, and West Pittsfield.

Oneonta to Albany, via Cobleskill, being worked from East Berne to New Salem. Detour provided.

Rochester to Syracuse, via Canandaigua, Waterloo, and Auburn under construction between Rochester and Canandaigua. Detour marked via Honeoye Falls, East Bloomfield, and Bloomfield.

OHIO.

Cincinnati to Columbus, via Lebanon, Xenia, and London is in good condition.

Cincinnati reports Reading road out to Lebanon has a bad two mile stretch. Best detour is to go to Glendale [14.5 miles], then cross over to Sharon. Later this road to Glendale will be torn up for repairs.

WISCONSIN.

Rains have roughened the roads in Lake Geneva section, but a few days of good weather should put them in fine shape.

The southwest exit out of Madison for Beaver Dam, Waupun, Watertown, Oconomowoc, and Milwaukee will be under construction as far as Sun Prairie.

Madison to Portage will be under construction.

Madison to Janesville and Lake Geneva via Stoughton will be under construction as far as McFarland.

All construction work around Madison is expected to be completed by July 1.

Eau Claire reports construction work, but roads are wide so that detours will be unnecessary.

Fond du Lac to Portage is being worked from Fond du Lac to Waupun.

Fond du Lac to Milwaukee, via New Fane and West Bend, is being worked from Thiensville to Cedarburg [detour via Green Bay road] and also near Campbellsport and Kewaskum.

Fond du Lac to Green Lake is being repaired between Ripon and Green Lake.

Wausau to Abbotsford, detour between Marathon and Wausau, via Stettin.

Rockford to Milwaukee, via Beloit and Mukwonago, is being worked from Delavan to Elkhorn, but a side road is being maintained.

Milwaukee to Madison, via Oconomowoc and Watertown, closed from Pewaukee to Hartland until Sept. 1. Detour posted.

Stevens Point to Oshkosh, via Waupaca and Medina, being worked from Amherst to Weyauwega until July 1. Detours posted.

Kilbourn-Friendship road will be completed July 1.

THIS GETS A LAUGH FROM SOME IN VAUDEVILLE

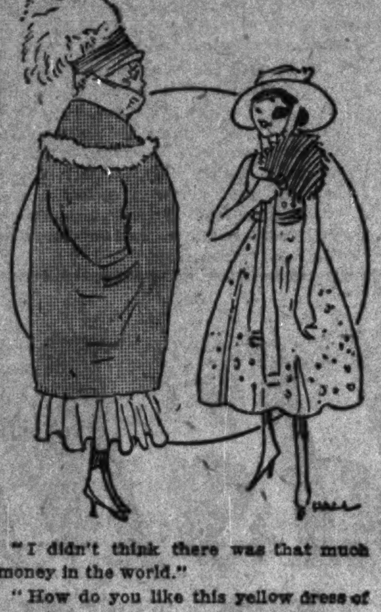
MAJESTIC.

Watson sisters:

"You're jealous of my figure."

"That's no figure; it's a number."

"I've got a beau who says I'm worth my weight in gold."



"I didn't think there was that much money in the world."

"How do you like this yellow dress of mine."

"Extremely becoming."

"Yes, I wear it 364 days out of the year."

"Why not the three hundred and sixty-fifth?"

"That's St. Patrick's day and I want to live."

"What do you think of a man who will constantly deceive his wife and get away with it all the time."

"What do I think of him? I think he's a wonder!"

"We'll take our flowers now. There's no fun at the graveyard."

MAJESTIC.

Medlin Watts and Townes:

"Where's the party you married?"

"I didn't marry a party—I married one."

"Did you marry well?"

"Yes, she has a fine job."

"Are you going to sing?"

"Yes, a little ballad entitled, 'Don't Worry About the Wood, Mamma, Father Will Bring Home a Load.'"

"You pull another con like that and I'll close your eye for you."

"You do and there'll be singing at your house, but you won't hear it."

"How do you like married life?"

"Great! You know, I'm king in my house."

"Yes. I was there the night she crowned you."

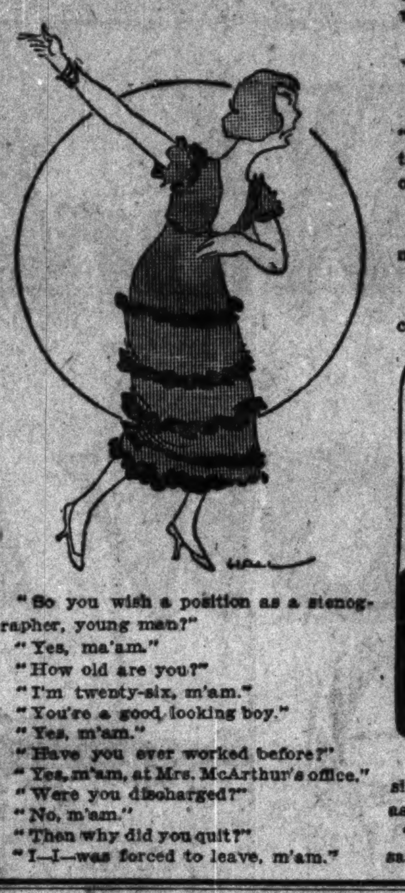
"Well, I must be getting on. I'm going to treat my wife."

"How?"

"O, I'm going to take her up to her mother's."

MAJESTIC.

Marie Nordstrom: "Twenty Years From Now."



"So you wish a position as a stenographer, young man?"

"Yes, ma'am."

"How old are you?"

"I'm twenty-six, m'am."

"You're a good looking boy."

"Yes, m'am."

"Have you ever worked before?"

"Yes, m'am, at Mrs. McArthur's office."

"Were you discharged?"

"No, m'am."

"Then why did you quit?"

"I—I—was forced to leave, m'am."

"For what reason?"

"I—I'd rather not state."

"Did Mrs. McArthur make love to you?"

"Yes. But I'm not a bad man, m'am. I had to leave."

"Very well. You may go to work here. Hang up your hat."

"Yes, m'am."

"Now as to your duties: Frequently you will have to stay downtown to work late, and in that case you will take dinner with me."

"O, I beg you, m'am, to be as lenient as possible. I always go home to dinner. I'm father's sole support."

"Nevertheless you may have to work late sometimes. Perhaps till 10, then we can go out and have a spin in my car and a little drink."

"O, I couldn't do that, m'am. Father doesn't like to have me running around with strange women."

MAJESTIC.

Lydell & Higgins:

"My father is quite a runner."

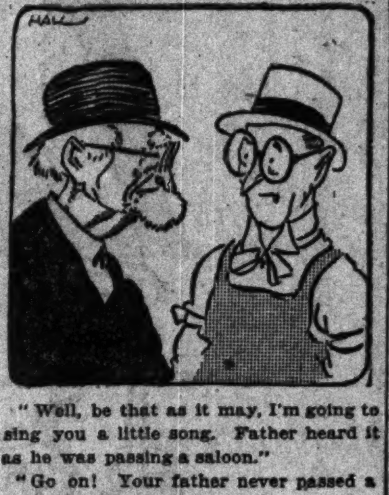
"I know it; we went through the war together. In one way I am under great obligations to your father."

"How's that?"

"Well, when he was a doctor he saved my life."

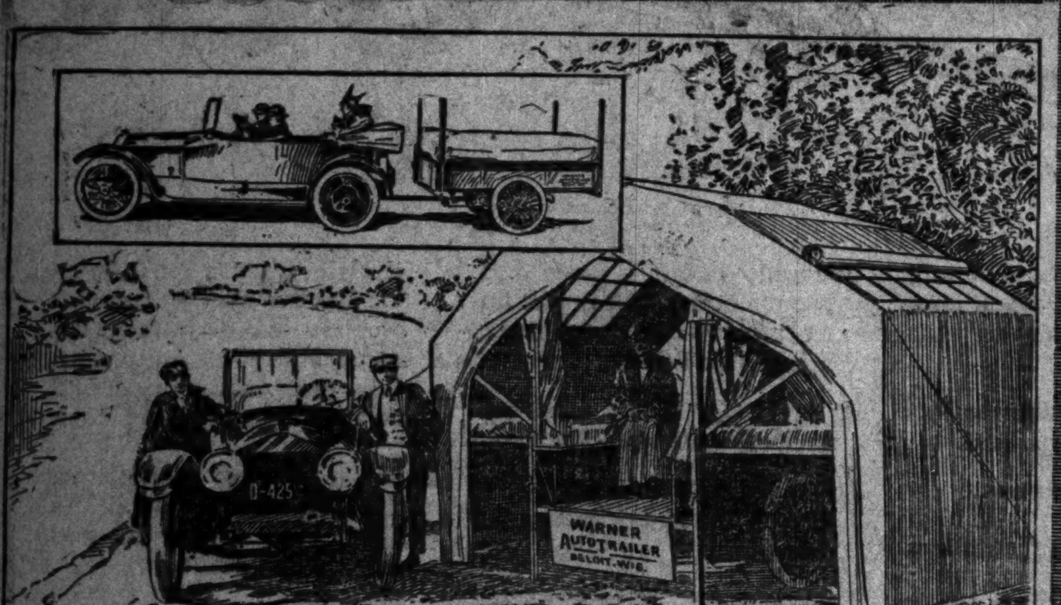
"O, is that so?"

"Yes, I sent for him and he didn't come."



"Well, be that as it may, I'm going to sing you a little song. Father heard it as he was passing a saloon."

"Go on! Your father never passed a saloon in his life!"



WARNER AUTOTRAILER BELOIT, WIS.

Ride all day over the country roads in the ease and comfort of an automobile, free from bags and baggage.

Stop whenever and wherever you wish, uncouple the trailer, and have a tent in ten minutes, complete with folding beds, table, stove, ice chest, and everything you could possibly want for a night's comfort.

This is what A. P. Warner, the auto meter man, now makes possible for you.

Warner Prairie Schooner

All Outdoors Is Yours

Here is the equipment that gives you the freedom of all outdoors, and the run of every road, as free as a gypsy. You never have to worry about reaching a town. You never have to pass up an alluring by-way because you are not sure whether you can find accommodations if you take it. You have your bed and board with you, hitched on behind. Whether it is a trip across the continent, two weeks' tour for the summer vacation, or a little week-end run out into the country with the wife and kiddies, the prairie schooner adds joy to life.

A Folding Camp

The Warner Prairie Schooner is a folding camp on wheels. It consists of a heavy duck khaki colored tent, 14x7½, with a high, roomy roof; two three-quarter size folding beds with sagless springs and comfortable mattresses; folding table; ice chest; folding chairs; folding stove; etc., etc. By day all this folds into a compact little package which fits snugly in the trailer box, leaving plenty of room for steamer trunk, suit cases, provisions, hunting outfits, or anything else a camper ever needs. The box is mounted on three springs and runs on pneumatic power automobile wheels.

Keeps Up with Any Car

The prairie schooner can travel as fast as your automobile can go over country roads without any harm to the contents or any strain on your car. Coupling device is one of A. P. Warner's personal inventions. It makes the auto track truly and prevents tipping or snapping. This little package on wheels can be transformed into a completely equipped tent in ten minutes. The prairie schooner is as highly developed in its construction as an automobile, and has an appearance which makes it suitable for any car. Some of the first users were owners of cars like the Packard, Pierce-Arrow, White, etc. When you do not wish to use your trailer, leave it home. There is no sign on your car to show where it couples on—no disfiguring contrivance. Because this is one of Mr. A. P. Warner's devices, remember, and he does things right.

See One Here

Come in and look at the Warner Prairie Schooner. See how convenient it is. See how superior it is in construction. See how different it is from any other contrivance that has ever been brought to your attention.

Then get one and have a fine summer.

What to Expect of Your Battery

IF your battery is a good one to begin with, and you don't give it the care it deserves, pretty soon your lights grow yellow and your starter loses its "pep." That's natural.

IF you are the most careful person in the world, but have a poorly made battery in your car, it won't be long till you must lay out some good money for a new battery. That's inevitable.

IF your battery is the best obtainable—a Willard—and you follow the advice of a Willard Service Station regarding its care, good starting and lighting are assured. That's certain.

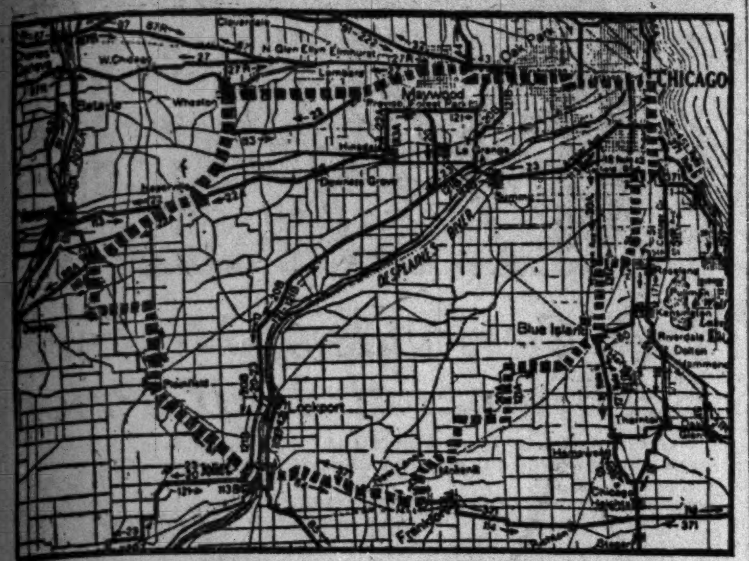
Where Shall We Drive To-Day?



[Copyright by the Blue Book Publishing Co.]

CHICAGO TO JOLIET AND RETURN.

[Data furnished by the Automobile Blue Book touring bureau.]

SOME people seem to think that the rainy days of the last week are going to keep up and spoil the possibilities of touring this season, but when we keep an accurate record of the rainfall we find that it is not so excessive, although the cloudy and showery days do materially interfere with giving us the clear fine days that we like at this season. We have had a good many bright days and our Sundays for the most part have been pleasant, and the following trip is outlined with the idea of making an almost ideal one day run and practically all of it is on hard roads. In fact there is only a couple of miles of dirt and this is never in bad shape except in exceedingly wet weather.

Starting from Jackson boulevard, go south in Michigan avenue to Garfield boulevard, where turn right to Halsted street, then south to the intersection of Vincennes avenue, where bear right instead of going up to the railroad, and follow Vincennes avenue to Ninety-fifth street, then turn right through Lawndale to Western avenue, where turn left, going straight south into Blue Island. This is following the Blue Book route 20A, in fact this routing is followed all the way to Joliet.

Go through Blue Island in Western avenue until just after crossing the canal, where turn right on Broadway to western edge of town, where jog left and then right; at fork just beyond bear diagonally left, avoiding road to right; nearly half mile beyond, go two miles to four corners, where turn right straight past southern edge of Midlothian Country club.

Three miles beyond country club turn left around blacksmith shop, go a little over two miles and turn right with poles. to end of road about three miles beyond, where turn left a mile and a half to end of road and there turn right and follow road with one or two turns to just after crossing railroad to first four corners, where turn right, recrossing railroad about a half mile beyond. Go to first left hand road and turn left into Mokena.

Go through Mokena westward to just beyond the station, where turn left. Go straight south to end of the road, here turn right on Lincoln highway, follow same direct into Joliet, coming into the city in Cass street.

Unless it is desired to go down into the center of the city keep ahead in Cass street across the Desplaines river, same thoroughfare becoming Western avenue. Go up grade to Center street, a little over two blocks beyond river, where turn right in Buell avenue, following same up winding grade to Raynor street, where turn right and follow Lincoln highway markings, keeping left at Six Corners small garage, following fine road with some long stretches of concrete direct into Plainfield, nine miles from Joliet.

Keep straight ahead through Plainfield, passing large school on right, going directly north about five miles to four corners, where turn left with gravel, turn right with road three and one-half miles beyond, use caution for trolley and railroad crossings, about two miles after last turn, and go to first cross road a little less than a mile beyond and turn right.

Road straight ahead is direct into Aurora, from where the motorist follows the Naperville road through Naperville. Downers Grove, Hinsdale, Maywood, and Oak Park into city.

ARGUMENT has persuaded car owners by the thousands to try out a single Quaker Tire. But the service the "test tires" rendered has induced these motorists to replace other makes with Quakers.

Here are characteristic records made when two or more Quaker Tires were used on the same car:

Respective mileage, 3 tires, 14,000, 12,085, 13,000; 4 tires, 10,183, 10,281, 10,213, 11,000; 4 tires, 11,000 each (still in use); 4 tires, 9000 each (still in use); 2 tires, 12,500 (still in use), 12,500; 2 tires, 8,200, 7,387 (still in use); 2 tires, 7,000 each (still in use); 2 tires, 11,227 each (still in use); 2 tires, 14,000 each (still in use).

Such results ought to settle the question for you. At least to the extent of making the "Quaker Test"—the use of one tire—on your car.

Urges Signaling Device on Cars.

THE use of mechanical or electrical signaling devices on automobiles so as to indicate the course of the car was one of the important recommendations adopted at a meeting of the street traffic committee of the Safety First Federation of America held recently in Cincinnati.

Such devices were considered by the police officials of many important cities who were in attendance at the meeting as a necessity upon closed or curtained cars and their use on automobiles generally was commended in view of the traffic congestion in the larger cities and in consideration of the enormous production of automobiles announced by the manufacturers for the present year.

In the belief that automobile signal devices will increase in popularity, a plan was considered to provide for uniformity in their location and attachment to motor vehicles, preference being given to a combination of the signal with the tail light and license number, the signals to be visible at least fifty feet from the rear of the car, the design of indication to be by word or pointer. The mechanism substantial and positive in action, all operating parts protected from rain, mud, snow, and ice, the control to be by hand or foot, with an automatic control for a stop signal. Approval was given for the location of these signals on the rear left hand fender so as to be in direct vision of the driver of any following vehicles and unobscured by extra tires usually carried on the back of the car.

In the interest of safety and to expedite the movement of traffic, it was contended that the signals should be shown both on the front and rear so as to indicate clearly and in a positive manner to traffic officers, pedestrians, and drivers of other vehicles exactly what movement the car will make.

It was contended by the committee that signals to indicate the course of a car formed as necessary a part of the equipment as the lights, horn, chain, or fire extinguisher, this being especially true owing to the use of closed or curtained cars, during rainy weather and in wintry months, when it is impossible to signal by hand.

6¼ tons with a 2-ton truck

2½-ton Troy Trailer "in daily service with these loads since July 1915—on same tires—no repairs of any kind"

at plant of Southwestern Portland Cement Co., El Paso.

This is because the REAL CAPACITY of any truck is not only what it can carry, but, the fact that it can CARRY its full rated capacity, and PULL as much again, and more, at the SAME TIME.

The economy of transportation by gasoline trucks is only just being solved. Concerns having occasional loads of 5 tons have supposed that they had to buy a 5-ton truck so as to be able to meet their extreme requirements.

But they never figured their average load might only be one ton or less, and that when their load was only one ton it was costing them almost three times as much to transport, because of the relatively fixed cost of operating their 5-ton truck.

TODAY, where a concern has loads averaging around two tons, they buy a 2-ton truck. This means that their cost of delivering a 2-ton load is only the cost of operating a 2-ton truck. They are also keeping their operating expenses DOWN by always keeping their loads UP.

And, to meet the requirement of transporting larger loads, they are purchasing Troy Trailers. They have learned that the capacity of a truck is not what it will CARRY, but, its REAL CAPACITY is what that truck will carry, when fully loaded, with what it can also PULL at the SAME TIME.

"Troy Trailers" will cut your delivery costs in ½

The largest concerns in the country have cut their truck operating costs by purchasing Troy Trailers. Such automobile concerns as Ford, Cadillac, Saxon and Studebaker are using Trailers. The Ford Company say that since purchasing two Troy Trailers "they have done the work with three trucks that formerly required five."

The Saxon Motor Co., Detroit, write: "We have been using a 5-ton Troy Trailer with a 3½-ton G. M. C. truck and are handling from 7 to 9 tons a trip with this outfit, and find it a very cheap way to reduce the cost of freight hauling."

Riker-Hegeman, New York, say their Troy Trailer saves them "somewhere about $100 a week."

The Rapid Transit Co., Kentucky, write: "By using our Troy Trailer we can double our capacity at an actual daily outlay of $2, whereas the daily cost of operating truck alone is $15."

And so it goes, all over the country. An entire list of users will be furnished if you desire, or we can give you the names of other concerns using Troy Trailers with the same kind of truck you are operating.

Troy Trailers range in capacities from 1 to 5 tons. We also make a complete line of Trailers of smaller capacity to be operated with small trucks or pleasure cars.

Put it up to us. Write us today, telling us just what your hauling problems are; what trucks you now operate; and we will advise you as to ways and means to very largely reduce your transportation costs. This assistance will place you under no obligation.

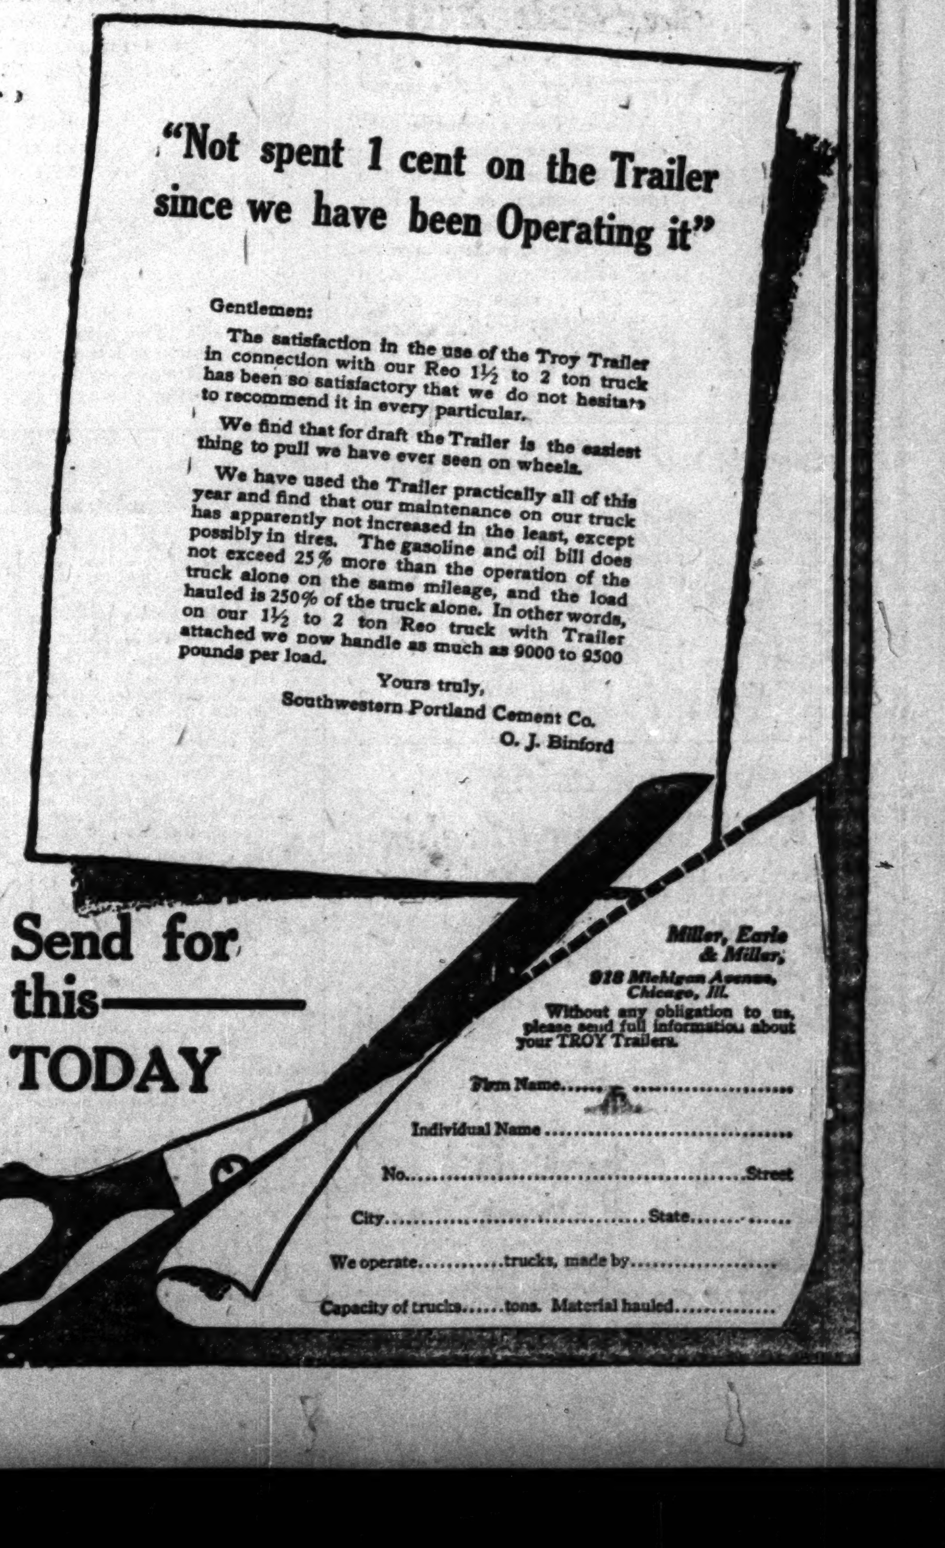
We Want Dealers	Come in and See the Troy Trailer
The greatest opportunity is open to live men in all cities where we now have no dealers. Some one in your City is going to see the money-making possibilities in this proposition. Are you the man? Write or Wire.	We want an opportunity to go over it thoroughly with you and then show it to you in actual operation.



"Not spent 1 cent on the Trailer since we have been Operating it"

Gentlemen:

The satisfaction in the use of the Troy Trailer in connection with our Reo 1½ to 2 ton truck has been so satisfactory that we do not hesitate to recommend it in every particular.

We find that for draft the Trailer is the easiest thing to pull we have ever seen on wheels.

We have used the Trailer practically all of this year and find that our maintenance on our truck has apparently not increased in the least, except possibly in tires. The gasoline and oil bill does not exceed 25% more than the operation of the truck alone on the same mileage, and the load hauled is 250% of the truck alone. In other words, on our 1½ to 2 ton Reo truck with Trailer attached we now handle as much as 9000 to 9500 pounds per load.

Yours truly,
Southwestern Portland Cement Co.
O. J. Binford

The story of Creation was written in a few hundred words in the Book of Genesis. A little thing like the story of the Orpet trial has taken about six hundred thousand words so far.

There is a surplus of a great many useless things in this world, and about the greatest surplus of the most useless thing is—"words."

We have about six pages of remarkable bargain news, if it were to be written as State street advertising usually is. We are going to put it into these few columns. A lot of adjectives and other useless words will lose their heads. Otherwise the news is all here. And the woman who doesn't shop at this end of the Loop tomorrow will lose a lot of perfectly good money by not doing so.

BOOKKEEPERS AND CLERKS,
STENOGRAPHERS AND BOYS.
We have over 400 good positions open in our office today. Now you can bum around town for the next few days or weeks, losing many times what we would charge you for a job. Now, why not be a young business man. It costs nothing to come in and look at these positions. We have been in business for thirteen years and are dealing with thousands of the best concerns. Don't waste your time. Come to us in the first place. We are very glad to co-operate with you. We are especially anxious to get high school boys and graduates of grammar school. We have over 150 jobs open for boys. That is, young fellows to enter the best offices to start in and learn the business.

PARENTS.
Send that boy to us. Don't let him wander around. The little commission we charge amounts to nothing in comparison to placing him properly. It is all in the start. WHAT ARE YOU GOING TO DO? School boys under 16 years of age must bring a school or working certificate.

HOW ABOUT YOUR FUTURE.

Are you piking along in a rut and making yourself like it, or are you willing to let this "AD" sink in and at least arouse your ambition to the extent that you will at least have enough "gymp" to come in and look over these hundreds of good jobs we have open. Business is great and you ought to be getting your share. Now, don't figure out what we can't do for you. Figure out what we can do. Remember, it costs nothing to come in and talk it over, and you owe it to yourself and those depending upon you to at least TRY to improve your conditions. Now this applies to you whether you are just starting in the world or whether you are a five, ten, or fifteen thousand dollar man. Your case is no exception. The jobs listed are not advertising or "bunk." They are real live open jobs with the best concerns in the country, but we are obliged to list them in a wholesale way. Don't pike it any longer. Come in and see for yourself. We have stood the test for thirteen years, and have placed over 200,000 people in satisfactory positions. WHAT ARE YOU GOIN TO DO?

We have five large departments with the following jobs listed in a wholesale way:

SALES MANAGERS.
In the following lines $2,000 to $12,000 per year: Publishing, $2,500 up; Packing, $3,000; Implements, $10,000-$12,000; Advtg. Employment Agencies.

HIGH GRADE WOMEN.
YOUR SUCCESS.

Regardless of your ability depends entirely upon having the proper chance to show that ability where it will be appreciated.

Now here is the point. We have several hundred good positions open with the most exclusive firms in and around Chicago—that is, the smallest concerns where there is a chance to work into an important position where your individuality counts. We want you to come in and look over these good jobs, as we know we can place you in a better position. It would take two columns to list the positions we have open, therefore we must mention them in a brief way. Remember we have stood the test for thirteen years, and through our two institutions we have placed over 200,000 people in satisfatory positions. All interviews strictly confidential in private offices, and it don't cost you a cent to talk it over. We have the finest business located right here on the corner of State and Adams. You can drop in noon, evening, or any time during the day, but don't let this "AD" slip by without coming in and seeing us.

STENOGRAPHERS—We have over 100 good positions open for stenos. and pri. secys., from beginners at $8-$10 per week up to the private secretary at $20-$25 per week. We have even filled positions as high as $35.00 per week. Send all your friends to us. We also have temporary jobs, but most of them are permanent. We are also shy on typists. Now these stenographic positions are not the ordinary workhouse jobs. They are with the most exclusive firms. If you are out of the city get in touch with us at once.

BOOKKEEPERS—We have a great many orders for Bookkeepers and Ledger Clerks. That is, from the assistant bookkeeper to head bookkeeper. These positions will pay $10-$20 per week.

CLERKS, CLERKS, CLERKS.

We have a big department placing young women with and without experience. We place several hundred each month, and we have fifty to sixty good openings today. We also have many good openings for Saleswomen, Demonstrators, Dictaphone Oprs., Elliott Fisher Oprs., Adding Machine, Multigraph and Switchboard Oprs. In fact, we cover all help employed in an office, and have in the neighborhood of 400 good jobs open now. We are not going to put in a big list of jobs for you this Sunday, because it takes too much space. The things we want you to do is to come in and talk it over now. No matter what you are working at. Don't wait until you see some certain position listed in the paper, because some of our big jobs are not advertised. Put your application in and then we will send for you when the right time comes. Remember, your application is handled in a confidential manner. There is no chance of jeopardizing your present position. Seeing is believing.

ARTISTIC HOMES AND BUNGALOWS IN AUSTIN

At moderate prices. Look at them now under construction and have one completed to suit you, or will build to order on Latrobe-av., between Augusta and Division-sts.; on lots 33 1-3 or 40 ft. wide. The advantage of buying a home or bungalow in a locality protected by restrictions, where the streets are improved and paid for, and where every lot is built on, improved, and beautified is apparent.

Then the ideal location for the children alone is a reason for exchanging that flat for a bungalow and let the rent money pay for it. Built in brick, stucco, or California redwood. Terms to suit or cash.

A booklet on homes sent on request.

"A LITTLE LAND AND A LIVING."

You can make a living on a little land if that land is near good markets, good transportation, and has been properly managed to secure high fertility. The drainage of a little land is a serious problem unless it is a part of a good drainage system. Don't buy a little land unless it has a drainage outlet for both surface and underground water.

MIDLOTHIAN GARDENS

is close to an instantaneous market, has good transportation and 3 years of careful preparation have been given to soil and drainage. The streets have been graded, the parkways sown with grass, shade trees set out, and rolled crushed stone sidewalks made.

Midlothian Gardens is planned for a community of Productive Homes

A coöperative store has been built, which will reduce the cost of living and marketing your products.

A park of 5 acres, beautifully wooded with forest, fruit, and shade trees and ornamented with flowers, shrubs, and lawns, has been set aside for the use of the community.

Money could not reproduce this park. It is the growth of more than 200 years. In the midst of this park is a 14 room clubhouse, furnished and ready for use by the people living in Midlothian Gardens.

If you were to buy a little land somewhere and then have to pay for all these betterments and privileges, they would cost you as much as we are asking for our land with all these paid for. One of our plots, could be divided into 8 ordinary city lots.

Midlothian Gardens is on the Rock Island R. R., only 40 minutes to the loop. The fare is 10 cents on a monthly ticket.

Our prices range from $275 to $825, on easy terms.

Make us show you what we tell you. Come out today. Time is the essence of a home. No place is home—really home—till time has made it so.

Canada.

PRODUCTIVE CANADIAN FARMS.

DAVIDSON, SASKATCHEWAN, CANADA, FARMS.

Last year many farmers in this district produced more than enough grain to pay for the entire farm at present going land values. Crop prospects are again practically perfect this year. You can still buy this land in tracts to suit you at low prices, with a small cash payment and the balance arranged on easy 6 per cent terms.

We can give you a very cheap round trip excursion ticket rate on certain dates this summer to investigate this land. It costs very little to investigate. See it now. This country has no extra war tax of any kind. When peace is declared crowds will be seeking these opportunities. Land producing such results will surely boom later on. Be forehanded, look now.

Write us for full information, map, settlers' letters, kodak views, railroad excursion rates, etc.

REAL ESTATE—FARM LANDS.

Michigan.

WHAT AILS MEXICO

FIFTEEN MILLION PEOPLE in Mexico and the land cornered by a few families! That is WHAT AILS MEXICO. Mazazza owns millions of acres—practically an entire state, which he controls. He buys and never sells. The Maderos own seven million acres in Coahuila. Terrazas owns more land than either the Maderos or Mazazza. Most people in Mexico have no land and own no homes. This condition for a century has created brigandage, revolutions, lawlessness, and finally this war against Uncle Sam.

COMPARE THE CONDITIONS in Mexico with those in the U. S. Here the basis of prosperity is the farm. Americans keenly appreciate the value of owning a piece of land and it is being rapidly cornered, not by a few families, but by many thousands of homeseekers.

ESTABLISH YOURSELF in the Swigart Tract. By investing now you become a partner in its growth, improvement, and rising value. Strong points about the Swigart Tract are: LOCATION—Mason, Manistee, Lake, and Wexford Counties, the heart of Michigan's Fruit Belt. SOIL—Sandy loam, warm and responsive. CLIMATE—Most healthful and moderated by proper distance from Lake Michigan. TRANSPORTATION—Six railroads and several steamship lines; no 40 acres more than five miles from some shipping point. MARKETS—The best, including Ludington and Manistee, 25,000 population, on the edge of the tract; also products on Chicago, Milwaukee, Grand Rapids, Detroit, and Toledo markets in one night's ride. Schools, churches, telephones, electric light and power is supplied from great power dams in the center of the tract; pure water; level lands, well drained, and all the attractions of a Summer Resort region. Does this not sound like a good place to live?

PRICES: $10 to $25 per acre, and much of the land now $18 per acre. TERMS: $10 to $50 down and $5 to $10 per month on 40 acres; 50,000 acres to select from, including some fine new tracts. If you should die after you have partly paid for your land it will be deeded to your family free from further payments. This is the most liberal land proposition made anywhere.

OUR NEXT EXCURSION is Tuesday, July 11th. Rate from Chicago to Wellston, our Michigan Headquarters, and return $12.50, which includes railroad fare, meals, and lodging. Railroad fare will be rebated on your land purchase. Good accommodations for both men and women. Automobiles and guides free. You return to Chicago at 7 a. m. Friday, July 14th. Offices remain open Monday evening and Saturday afternoon.

A REBUILT CADILLAC

It's a Safe Used Car to Buy

A rebuilt Cadillac is superior to any new car at the same price. They are the truest values on the street. By rebuilt we mean that the cars have been taken entirely apart, each part examined and, if necessary, replaced by a new part made at the Cadillac factory, the entire car repainted and refinished like new, all equipment put in first class condition—the whole car, in fact, carefully reconstructed until it is good as new in every detail.

We are as interested in the performance of these rebuilt cars as we are in new Cadillacs. In actual service value these cars are worth a great deal more than we ask for them, and we usually have a variety of body styles to select from. See them before you buy.

A SCHOOL IN SESSION IN THE CAVES AT MAISON POMMERY, REIMS—Underground life has become the general rule in the bombarded regions of northern France. School children attend their lessons in subterranean vaults, which are lighted by arc lights, while above ground sections of the city are intermittently spattered with high explosive shells. The residents of the region, for the most part old men, women, and children, have come to regard the precariousness of their lives as a matter of course.

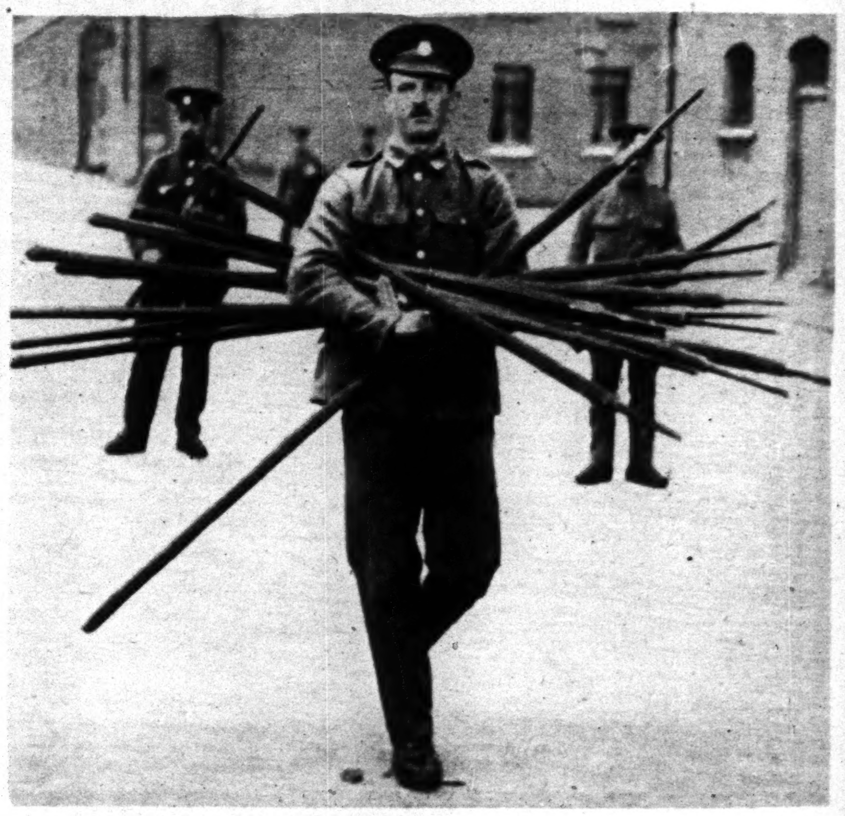
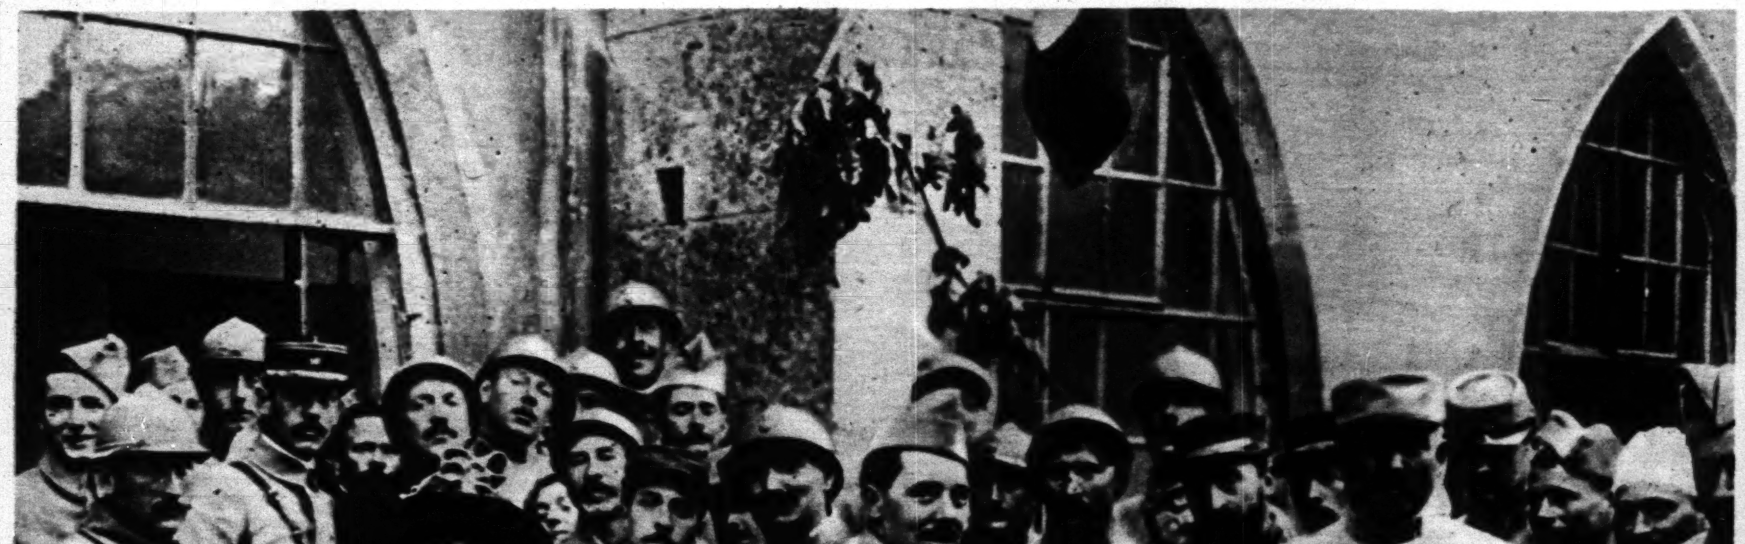
A BOON FROM THE IRISH REBELLION—There is still the sound of Irish laughter and the glint of Irish eyes in Dublin in spite of the ruin wrought by the fighting in Sackville street. Two girls are shown carrying away half burned timber from the wreckage to be used for kindling.

(Photograph from the London Sphere.)



PRIMITIVE PIKES OF THE SINN FEINERS—During the uprisings in Dublin and other parts of Ireland the Irish rebellionists were not very well prepared if we may judge from this collection of wooden staves armed with steel spear points which British soldiers captured.

(Photograph from the London Sphere.)



THE "DIVINE SARAH" VISITS THE TRENCHES—Mme. Sarah Bernhardt recently was given permission by President Poincare to visit the French front. Having sprained a knee in the spring of 1914 in the service of her art at Liege she was forced to have her right leg ampufated, so she was carried in a sort of litter to the trenches. There she sang and recited some poems while cannons were booming about her.

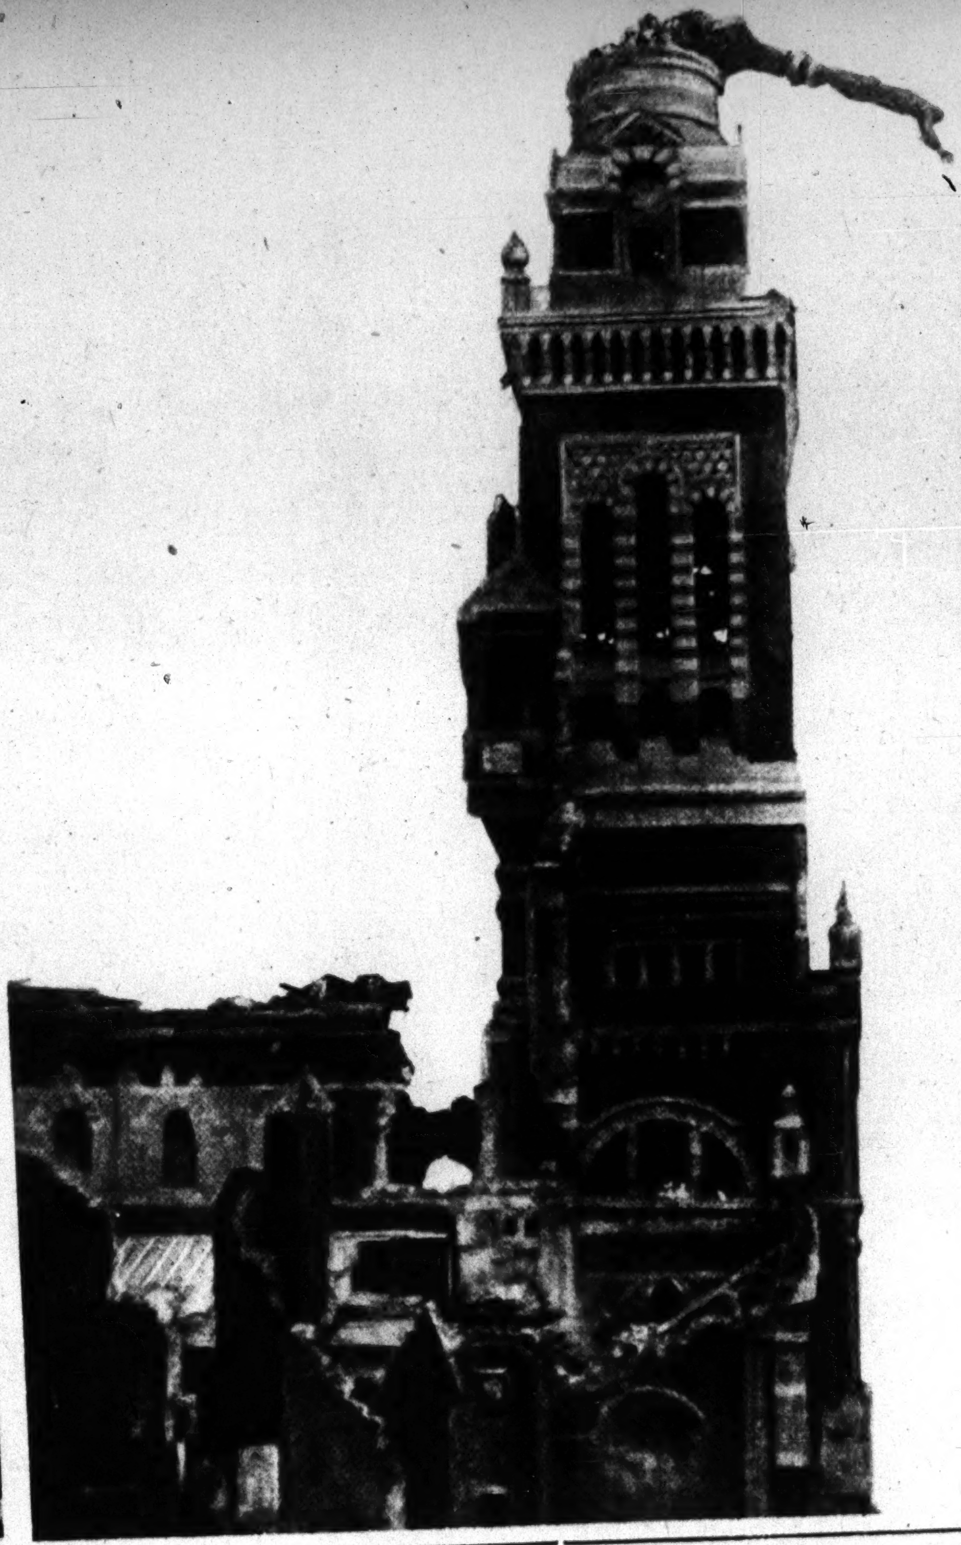
RUINS OF A ZEPPELIN BROUGHT DOWN BY THE FRENCH—The huge aluminum framework of the great airships used by Germany in bombarding is shown in this wrecked Zeppelin, the great canvas gas bags of which exploded and burned after an attack by allied anti-aircraft guns at Saloniki.

(Photograph from Paris L'Illustration.)



WILL THE WAR END WHEN IT FALLS?—For more than a year the great gilded statue of the Virgin and the Holy Child, displaced by a German shell, has hung suspended from the Cathedral of Notre Dame de Ste. Brebieres over the town of Albert, France. There is a local belief that on the day the figure falls the war will cease. The church was restored not long before the war and had long been the goal of many pilgrims. The village is located in one of the most heavily bombarded regions of the western front.

DANCING 'ROUND THE MAY POLE—The annual May day festival of the Wellesley college girls this year brought out more rakishly amusing costumes than ever before. For the day the girls made it apparent that college is not all primness and "crams for exams," and indulged in capital nonsense all day.

WOODRUFF is dressed as she appeared in charge of the American authors and artists' booth at the Million Dollar bazaar held in New York City from June 3 to June 14 for the benefit of the New Versailles, to be situated on Long Island and which, it is hoped, will become the art center of the world. The bazaar was held for obtaining a million dollars for the movement. Mrs. Woodruff, who is an author, is attired in a costume of the Louis XIV. period.

WIDOW OF TIN-PLATE KING TO WED PRINCE?—Again rumor has linked the name of Mrs. William B. Leeds, multimillionaire Boston expatriate, to a name of royalty. This time it is Prince Christopher of Greece, youngest brother of the King of the Hellenes, himself holding a high record for reported engagements. The prince, who received his early education and military training in Petrograd, is 28 years old. Mrs. Leeds, who before her marriage in 1901 to William B. Leeds, who died in 1908, was Mrs. Nannie Stewart Worthington of Cleveland, was once called by Helleu, the French artist, 98 per cent perfect in feminine beauty.

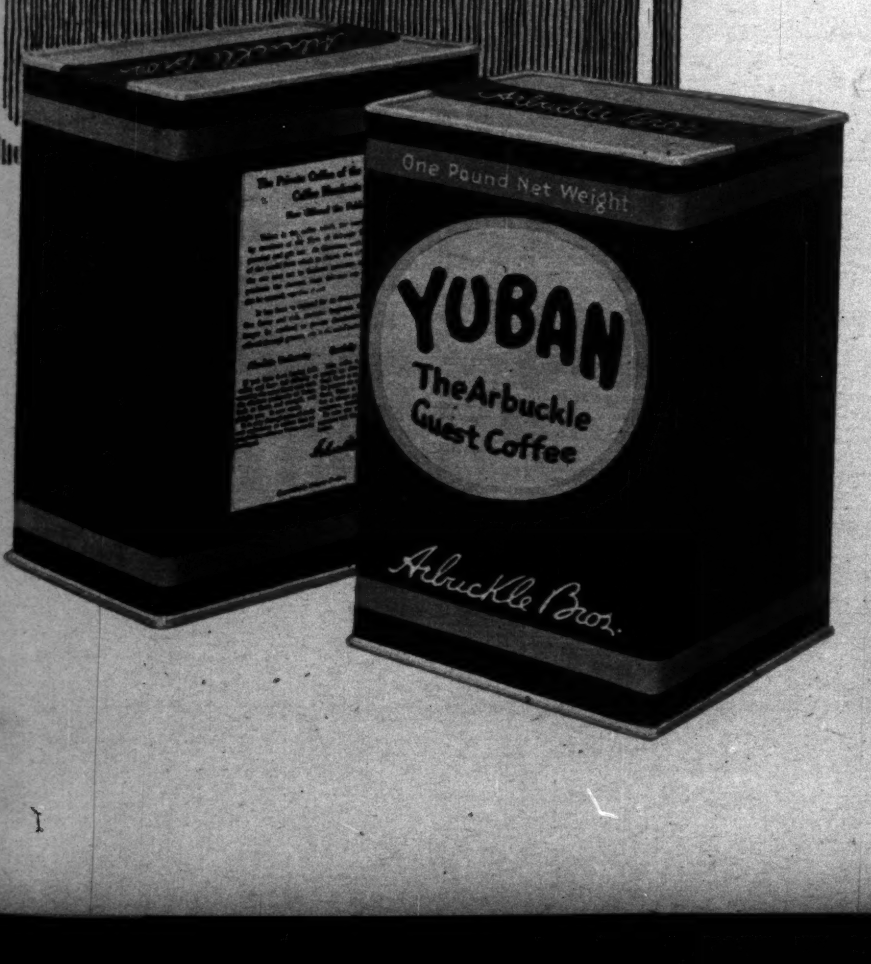
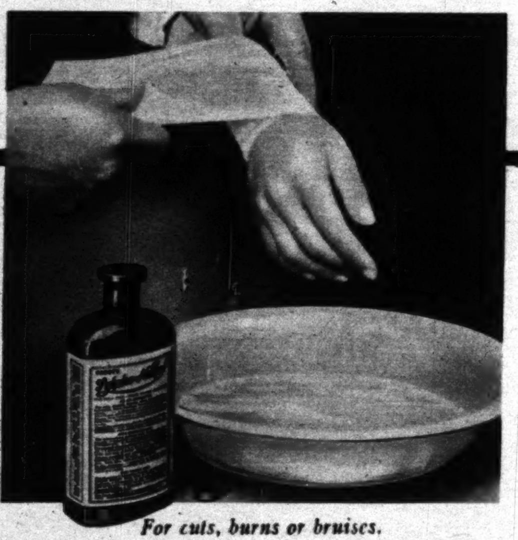
The Edelweiss Garden will be under the direct supervision of Mr. Richard Ostenrieder, President. As the manager of Kinsley's, Hofbrau and Edelweiss Restaurants and Richelieu Catering Company, he attained prominence. His rare power in producing the best in service and cuisine is evident in the popularity of his projects. With a combination of the foremost in gardens and management a successful result of this enterprise is assured.

The Edelweiss Garden, opening Monday, June 26th, is the most beautiful and complete concert garden in the world. The magnificent size of the garden, extreme originality and beauty of details, make it the show place of Chicago. Nowhere on the two continents is there a place like this. The renowned Arthur Dunham Symphony Orchestra of fifty players entertains evenings and Sunday afternoons.

Today a larger percentage of the people of Chicago are drinking Yuban than ever before used any one brand of ~ coffee . . .





For cuts, burns or bruises.

Keep cuts and wounds from becoming dangerous

In the past thousands of people have become dangerously ill and have even died through not using an antiseptic as soon as hurt.

Don't take chances; fight disease as they do in hospitals. One invisible germ in an open wound may result in a fatal illness.

As soon after the mishap as possible cleanse the wound with a solution of one teaspoonful of Sylpho-Nathol to a quart of warm water. Then cover with a dry bandage.

This will relieve the pain, retard the flow of blood, prevent germ infection and quicken healing.

Wonderful for burns

For burns use a teaspoonful of Sylpho-Nathol to a quart of water. Apply gauze, cotton or soft linen soaked in this solution. It relieves the terrible pain and often prevents blistering.

Today, get a 10c bottle of

CABOT'S

Sylpho-Nathol

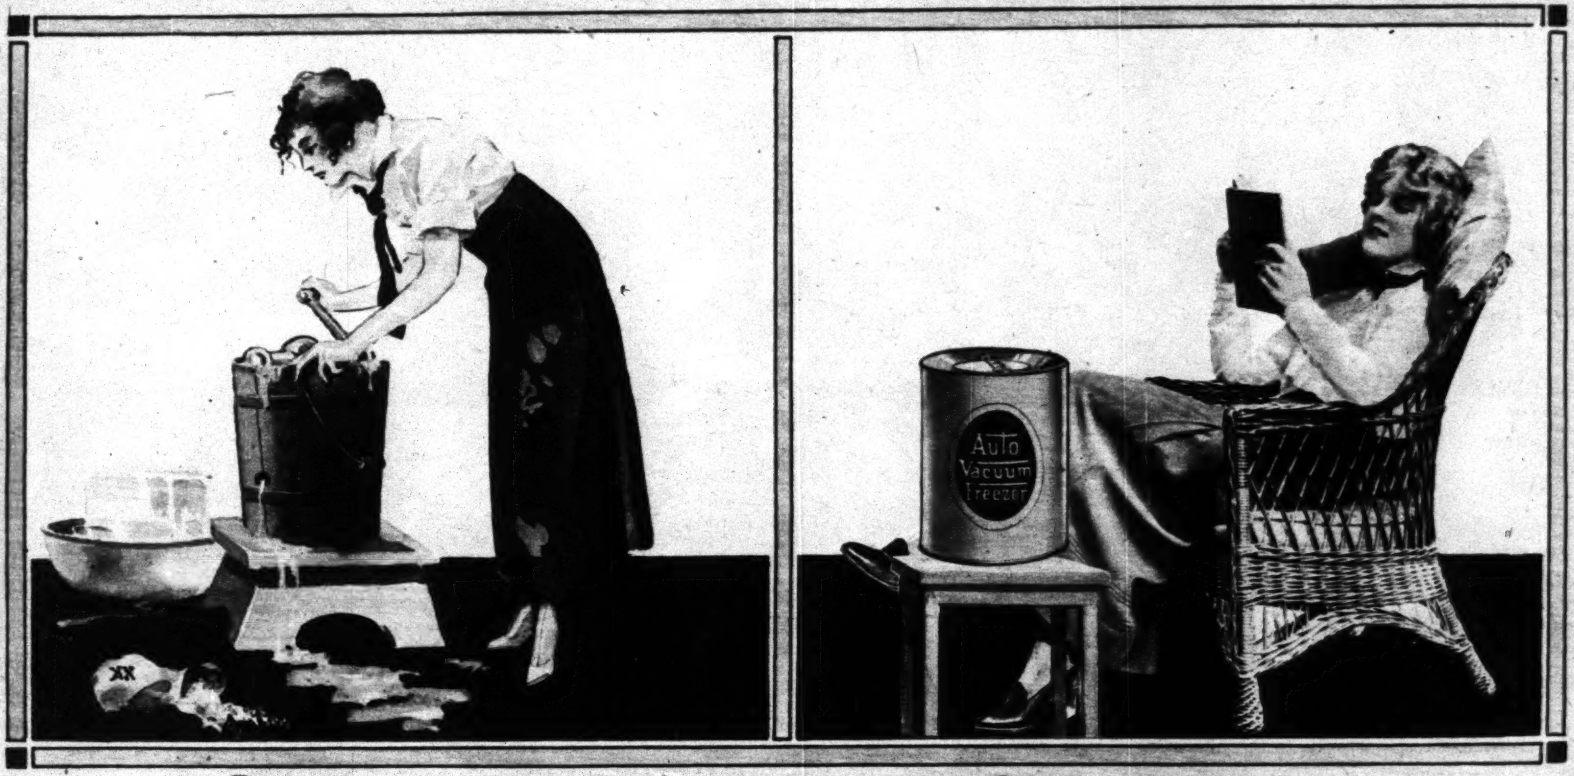
ICE CREAM Without Work



The old way

The new way

Delicious Home Made Ice Cream
—No Crank to Turn

Imagine the pleasure and convenience of making velvety, frozen desserts without turning a crank. Realize what it means to eat pure ice cream, prepared without work. Science produced the crankless automobile. Science made possible this crankless freezer.

With the Auto Vacuum Freezer practically all you do is fill it and forget it. Play, sew, enjoy sports, read, shop or continue with other duties. Then, when you wish, delicious ice cream is ready for the dining table, picnic or party. Consider the comfort this device brings on a hot summer day, when everyone dodges the job of cranking—and hot days are ice cream days. That's why housewives regard this Freezer as a real necessity.

The old-style, soggy, water-soaked, unclean bucket with its fuss and muss—is a thing of the past, in vogue when Grandma was a girl. Today, the up-to-date woman makes her mouth-watering desserts in this neat freezer, which has revealed new culinary delights to thousands of people the world over.

Now, Madam, and Mr. Father and Son, will you forfeit your favorite dessert because you don't want to "crank"? Or smack your lips over ice cream made the Auto Vacuum Freezer-way? There's no secret about this remarkable freezer (the air chamber acts like a vacuum). Simple, sanitary, small. Metal throughout. Finished in white enamel. Of course—you're going to get the Auto Vacuum Freezer. That's a certainty! Who would be without one?

You Can Buy This Freezer at the Following Stores

If your dealer is sold out, you can purchase at the following leading stores in Chicago and nearby territory. These merchants carry a large stock of freezers. If you wish to locate nearest dealer not listed, phone or drop us a post card.

The Trouble With Ireland

By Padraic Colum

Formerly Editor of the Irish Review

WHAT are the actual relations between Great Britain and Ireland? How does it come that Ireland feels these relations a strain and that Scotland, under apparently the same system, is contented? These are questions that are being put to the Irish publicist since the insurrection of April.

Before answering them the publicist has generally to make a clearance in the mind of his interlocutor. An American unconsciously assumes that the relations between England, Scotland, Ireland and Wales are federal in some way. That assumption is wholly wrong. Irish statesmen have been striving for a federal system since O'Connell lived and died. But the form that actually exists is a government of England, Scotland, Ireland and Wales by a Parliamentary majority of Englishmen—there is no authority except in the Parliament where that majority exists, and there is no appeal except to that majority. The Westminster Parliament is the only legislative and executive body in the British Islands. It is made up of an elected House of Commons and an hereditary House of Lords and has thirteen hundred members. England has a thousand representatives. Scotland and Ireland have three hundred between them. In the elected chamber, the House of Commons, Ireland has one hundred and three representatives, Scotland seventy-two, Wales thirty. England has four hundred and sixty-five—a standing majority of two hundred and sixty over the combined Scottish, Irish and Welsh representation. England, Ireland, Scotland and Wales are ruled by this solid block of Englishmen.

The relations between these several nationalities correspond to the relations that should exist if Canada, the United States, Cuba and Mexico were being governed by a solid majority of Canadians or Americans. Each country within the British Islands has a different economic life, a different racial amalgam, a different historical tradition. England, Scotland and Wales, however, are nearly at one in their economic conditions, being largely industrialized countries. For that reason, and because of the fact that they are Protestant, although of different sects, the three nationalities comprised in the single island of Great Britain stand almost as a single entity as against the nationality of Ireland. Ireland, compared with Great Britain, is a very different country. She is agricultural while Great Britain is industrial; she is largely Catholic while Great Britain is almost wholly Protestant; she is Celtic is spite of various racial admixtures, while in Great Britain Celtic life is in reservations, so to speak. Moreover, on account of an historical tradition she has an intensity of national consciousness that makes her ambitious of creating a social order and a culture for herself. How much of will and ability she has to do this are shown in her language revival; in her recent creation in English of a remarkable literature that is wholly her own; in her agricultural organization that has laid the foundations of a co-operative system; in her creation, in two years, of a national army—the Irish Volunteers.

HERE is the situation in a nutshell—the relations between Great Britain and Ireland are unsatisfactory because you cannot successfully make laws for an agricultural in an industrial country; because a people with one set of religious, social and cultural ideals cannot rule justly a people with a totally different set; and, in the end, because a people with a national consciousness of Irish intensity cannot be peaceably ruled by another people at all—the barrack filled with soldiers, the machine gun and the bayonet, with the warship in the bay, produce only the semblance of an accord.

Why then has Scotland, under like conditions, remained contented and how is it that she has created some prosperity for herself? In the parts of Scotland where political power exists there is the same industrial life as in England and so, in one particular, the conflict is moderated. Scotland made a union with England on her own terms—her kings became kings of England, and, when a formal union was being drawn up, care was taken to protect Scotland's interest. She kept her own laws and retained some executive power. Under such conditions Scotland was able to create an intellectual and literary tradition that kept her national consciousness complacent.

BUT Scotland has not really prospered. She slowly but surely has been losing her splendid peasant population. There is terrible poverty in her industrial centres. And in the nineteenth and twentieth centuries she has not progressed as countries that might be compared with her have progressed—Denmark, Norway, or Sweden.

The Irish question has an internal as well as an international complexity. A powerful minority in Ireland insist that the form of government that exists at present must remain and that there shall be no attempt to set up a government that would be controlled by the Irish people. The stronghold of this opposition is in the North East of Ulster, the northern province of Ireland.

What is called the Ulster opposition does not really represent the whole of Ulster. As a province Ulster consists of nine counties, and the Home Rule opposition is formidable only in the counties of Antrim, Down, Armagh, in half of Derry and in half of Tyrone. The real strength of this opposition comes from the fact that it represents an economic diversity in Ireland.

The early Presbyterian colonists in the North East were given good lands and they had a comparatively decent system of land-tenure. They accumulated savings. The linen industry, for various reasons, came more and more into their hands. Opposite their leading city—Belfast—were the coal districts of Scotland. They became an industrial community while other parts of Ireland were ceasing, under trade-restrictions, to be industrial. Although religion is much spoken of among them it is the economic diversity that really counts. "Am I to have my business legislated upon by a majority of small farmers?" says the Belfast manufacturer. That is the real difficulty in the way of an internal settlement. But it can be got rid of by a real federal arrangement within Ireland that would give Ulster, the whole or the part, control of its economic interests and everything that affects its particular religious life. But Ireland must not be divided. There must be a single executive for the whole country.

THE English aristocrats who, as landowners have plundered Ireland, and who, as an hereditary assembly, have stood in the way of every concession to her, must now make up their minds that Ireland can no longer be held as part of an imperial spoil. That is the first thing necessary. When they acknowledge conversion to this point of view the toughness will go out of the opposition to self-government in Ireland. For it was the great Tory landowners who encouraged, and, to a large extent, organized and subsidized the Ulster opposition to the Home Rule measure.

If assurance were given that there would be no more meddling in Irish internal affairs, the religious and economic difficulties would soon be adjusted.

Within the next few years England will have to show whether she is capable of holding rule over a proud people. If she fails in generosity or in judgment the world must let her know that her occupation of Ireland can only be regarded as temporary—like the German occupation of Belgium. The fact that she has been in Ireland for hundreds and not for single years should be looked upon as an aggravation of the offense.

POMPEIAN BEAUTY

Mary Pickford

has granted us permission to offer the first Mary Pickford Art Calendar.

To Miss Pickford:—We here publicly thank you. We deeply appreciate the trust you have placed in us, and assure you that we have spared no expense to produce in exquisite colors an Art Panel worthy of the girlish charm and beauty of you, the world's most popular woman.

All the world loves "dear little Mary Pickford." Fame has not spoiled her. Riches have not changed her. This is her "favorite photograph." Size of Panel, 28 inches long by 7¼ wide. Color, light pink.

Advance Orders for Oct. 1st delivery are taken now for this beautiful Art Picture because we fear we will be overwhelmed unless we distribute the rush over a longer period. By ordering now you are assured of getting your Panel promptly on Oct. 1st, when the Panels will be finished. So popular have the annual "Pompeian Beauty" Art Panels become that each year we have to disappoint from 30,000 to 50,000 people who delay and then write us after the edition is exhausted.

Price 10c. This Mary Pickford Panel has a 50c Art Store value. We let you have it for 10c in order to make you feel friendly enough to speak a good word to your friends about it and Pompeian products, if you like them. Clip the coupon and reserve your copy now before you forget it.

Hot Weather Hints for Good Looks

Apply Pompeian NIGHT Cream with a cloth upon retiring and remove excess cream with dry cloth. So white! So cooling! So soothing! In the morning a dash of cold water on the face. Result? You start the day with a soft, clear, relaxed skin, looking and feeling like a new woman. Motorists' tubes, 25c. Jars, 35c & 75c at the stores.

To have fluffy hair sprinkle scalp with that delightful liquid, Pompeian HAIR Massage. Dry with soft towel and fan. Result? Soft, silky, brilliant, fluffy hair instead of oily hair that lies flat on the scalp. Stops Dandruff and Scalp Itching. 25c, 50c & $1 bottles at the stores.

Oily skins are particularly benefited by Pompeian MASSAGE Cream. It purifies and youth-i-fies the skin. Use it before meeting people, and you'll look your best. Jars, 50c, 75c & $1 at the stores.

Reserve your Panel by sending coupon now

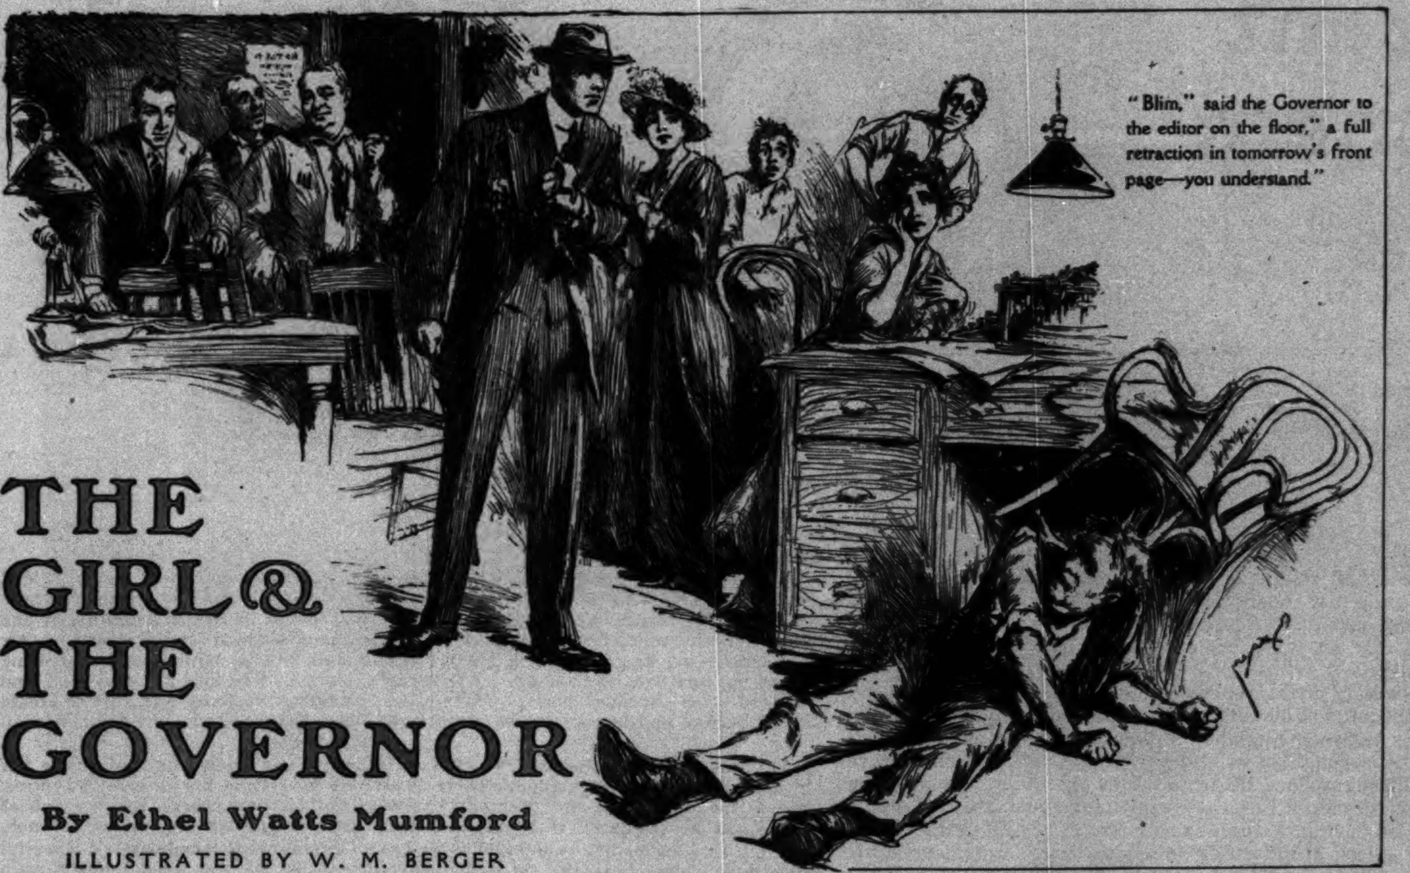
THE GIRL & THE GOVERNOR



"Blim," said the Governor to the editor on the floor," a full retraction in tomorrow's front page—you understand."

By Ethel Watts Mumford

ILLUSTRATED BY W. M. BERGER

THE Governor leaned on his crossed arms and gazed absently at the slowly heaving waters. In the shadow of the yacht, the depths were clear olive-green, further away the noon light showed them alive with tiny specks of gold, like dust in a sun-ray. Beyond, the surface took on the hue of steel, that melted into blue and ever deeper blue, till it met the white ruler-edge of land and the green of the shore. It was very restful, very quiet, and the Governor had need of rest and quiet. Behind him lay a strenuous fight, before him a bitter campaign, with just this stolen day between. He was trying very hard to think of nothing at all, and nearly succeeding. Everyone except the sailing master and the steward had gone ashore. His Excellency had elected to remain behind, safe from intrusion, marooned on the white deck, surrounded by the glitter of waves and the vast silent spaciousness of a cloudless sky.

"Please, sir, would you be so good as to give me an interview?"

The Governor gazed about him in blank amazement. The decks were bare, no boat lay alongside, no aeroplane hovered overhead. The world was empty as before.

"Excuse me, your Excellency," said the tremulous voice, "I'm right down here, and, please, would you give me an interview?"

The Governor looked down into the olive-green depths over side, and into two olive-green eyes upturned to his. The green eyes were pleading.

The girl wore a black bathing suit and a red rubber cap. She was very young, not more than seventeen or eighteen, he thought, and astonishingly good-looking.

"Do you mean to say," the Governor exclaimed as he watched the little figure treading water and glanced at the distant shore, "that you swam out here?"

"Yes," she answered, and inadvertently cast a frightened glance at the weary way she must traverse to reach the land again. "You see, I just had to have the interview, and there didn't seem to be any other way. If you'd seen a boat coming out, you'd have gone below and ordered the companion ladder pulled in. I thought it all out, you see, because it's so important for me."

"But, my dear girl, I'm not giving interviews to anybody!" He was sorry to disappoint her, after her plucky attempt.

"But, I've simply got to!" There was terror in her black-fringed eyes. "You see, I told them at the office that I could get the interview with you. They didn't believe me, of course, and they just let me try, to get rid of me. But I must make good. It's my start, and if you only will, it'll be the making of me. I'm sure you want to let a girl have a chance, when it's no trouble at all to you."

The Governor laughed, and his grave face became boyish, for, after all, he was very young to have conquered his place in the world. Moreover, his own efforts to break into the newspaper game had earned him the nickname of Nervy Dan. He was moved to sympathy.

"You remind me," he smiled down at the bobbing head with the red cap, "of the things I did when I was a reporter, before I steadied down and studied law." A reminiscent glow lit his dark eyes. "I remember sending in my card to a city editor with 'about the Talcott murder' written on it. The Talcott murder was a mystery that had all the Press by the ears—before your time, of course. The editor sent for me. 'What do you know about the murder?' said he. 'I don't know a thing,' I told him; 'but I wish you'd send me to find out.' He was so mad at me that he did."

"And did you find out?" questioned the girl eagerly.

"No," said the Governor, "but I landed in front of a factory that caught fire—one of the worst fires in years as it happened. I got the story."

"There," she said, "you see yourself, it pays to be persistent."

"Yes," he nodded, "but I didn't catch the murderer. And you—wouldn't anything except an interview with me help you out—couldn't you happen on something else?"

The out-going tide had drawn her away, but with two or three strong strokes she came back to the schooner's white, sleek side.

"If you'd scuttle the yacht," she suggested. "That would be a good story."

"I'd like to oblige you, but it isn't my boat, you see," he grinned. Then the smile vanished, for her face had gone suddenly white, the long straight swing of her arms ceased, her eyes looked into his, panic-stricken. She uttered no cry, but turned over and lay floating. The racing waters caught her inert body and whirled it rapidly toward the stern. In one swift leap he reached the companion ladder, swung himself overside, grasping the landing boat hook as he did so.

A moment later she was safe in his arms.

"How stupid of me," she gasped. "How silly! I don't know what happened. I—I felt faint all at once, and a pain in my shoulder;" then politely, "Thank you so much for saving me."

BUT her thanks went unheard, her rescurer had disappeared below. He returned with a flask and a Navajo blanket.

"Now," he said, as he wrapped her close and held the brandy to her lips, "just be quiet for a minute and you'll be all right. Lord! what a fool I am! The idea of my letting you swim around out there! I ought to have ordered you on deck immediately. I'm an ass about some things. Fact is, you came up so unexpectedly you seemed to belong in the sea, like a mermaid or a seal. I didn't realize you were just a little girl."

"Oh, but I am perfectly strong. I don't know what made me give out that way. Really, I'll show you when I swim back."

"Swim back!" he exclaimed. "Forget it—I'll send you ashore. There's the gig, the rest of 'em have taken the motor boat. Why, I flatly forbid your committing suicide."

"But, truly," she objected, "I can make it. I'm quite able, and it's so good of you to give me an interview that I couldn't think of putting you to all that trouble, your Excellency."

"If you please," he commanded, "look upon me in the capacity of life-saver, host, skipper pro tem, anything you like, but not the Governor. Now, what's your name, Miss——?"

"My name is Cicely Fenela," she answered.

"All right, Miss Fenela. If you don't mind we'll have some luncheon—it's half past one. Shall we picnic up here, or shall we go below?"

"Oh, really, I couldn't," she demurred.

"I was getting bored," he assured her, "almost sorry I hadn't gone ashore with the others, until you came along. It's my brother's yacht, and thank goodness, they let me alone. They know that a formal meal takes my appetite away and a banquet gives me indigestion whether I eat it or not. What do you say? Shall we picnic?"

She looked up at him gratefully. "You're awfully good," she murmured, "just awfully good. And you're so young. I didn't know one could be a famous statesman and be so young."

He looked at her and laughed. "Never heard me called 'the Boy Orator,' did you?" he reminded. "Well, I feel like a boy all right. Where's that steward!"

HIS hail brought a white-clothed Japanese from his galley, who looked with surprise at the unexpected guest, and withdrew to return with a tray.

"Melon! oh, good!" exclaimed the lady reporter ravenously. "I haven't had melon this season—it's too expensive." She blushed scarlet at her admission.

"Newspaper work not very lucrative? I know all about that," he nodded, passing her the sugar sifter. He looked at her keenly. So pretty, so young, and thrown to the newspapers!

"How did you get into the game?" he inquired.

Her white even teeth bit into the melon and reduced her to silence. "I had to do something," she said at length. "I've just graduated, and I haven't a cent left. Father's lawyer administered the estate—and it just barely got me through. I always could write things in school, but I never could do anything else. I'm not trained to teach and I'm no musician. I thought I might take up dancing, and I tried to get in touch with the cabarets. But—oh, I couldn't. The people I had to see! and besides I had no clothes and no money to buy any—and one must have pretty gowns for public dancing. So, I thought I'd try the newspapers."

"Here's a chicken sandwich for you," said the Governor—"and tell me, haven't you anybody—no relatives?" She shook her head. "And no friends?"

She laughed bitterly. It hurt him to hear the cynicism in that laugh. "I knew a lot of girls in school, of course, and some of them liked me, but when their parents found out I was poor and had no place in the world—oh, well—what's the use?"

"But vacations?" he persisted. "What did you do with your summers?"

"They were hateful!" she exclaimed with feeling, "perfectly hateful! Mr. Hallum usually sent me up to some perfectly respectable farm. For three summers I went to the same one in Connecticut—no other boarders, a respectable widow—Oh, so respectable! That's why I thought of tango dancing and being a reporter. I didn't want to be anything like that kind of respectable again, ever! I told Mr. Hallum so, and he washed his hands of me. So, you see," she turned her intent green eyes to his, "I must make good—just plain must. Why, I spent almost my very last cent on this bathing suit—it's an awfully good one, marked down—so I'd look nice when I interviewed you. My everyday clothes are awfully shabby. I realized it when the editor looked me over. He as good as said 'They wouldn't let you in anywhere.' "

The Governor's fingers twitched as he poured the ginger ale. Poor little woman—poor little kid! Where would she land in this cruel scheme of things? Something stirred deep in his heart. He suddenly found himself thinking of his first sweetheart—the intense thrill her presence used to wake, the ecstasy of carrying her school books. He looked at his companion with a diagnosing eye—no, she didn't in the least resemble Elizabeth, who had been round and pink and ringleted—why, then, this sudden recrudescence of a forgotten episode?

"Oh, why bother about me?" She laughed, this time happily. "I've got my interview, and that means a job. And why should I pester you with my troubles? You've had yours—Oh, I know everything about you. I read you all up in the morgue before I came."

" 'The morgue'—sounds familiar." He smiled reminiscently.

"That's what they call the 'Who's who' in a newspaper office," she elucidated proudly, oblivious to his necessary knowledge of this, her first piece of Fourth Estate slang, "all the clippings about people, so you can write up a grand obituary."

"I'm to have a grand obituary, am I?" His eyes laughed, but his voice was grave.

"Good gracious! that does sound awful—but I mean I read all about your fight with the Kiff people and the coal riots, and the way you ran down the Black Handers—and—oh, there were articles slamming you as the Tool of the Trusts—and I can't believe you'd be anybody's tool, now that I know you. You aren't, are you?"

"This part of the interview?" he chuckled. "Well, since you ask me flat out, I'll answer. No, I'm not anybody's tool—and never will be!"

"But why does Boss Glouter hate you so?" she asked.

The Governor was off his guard. Lunching on a deserted yacht with a beauty in a bathing suit, whom one has just rescued from a watery grave, does not keep before one the realization that the conversation is for publication, particularly when the guest's green eyes have conjured back the first innocent, intense thrills of love's April. The Governor's expressive face darkened at the mention of the name, and his lips drew together in a hard line.

"Glouter!" he snapped. "The two-faced schemer, I'll break him yet!" He sat silent, glaring out over the blue water, lost for the moment in his plan of campaign. "Glouter!" he repeated, "the worst, most unscrupulous demagogue of them ,all. Hate me? of course he does. He's afraid of me, and he'd better be!"

"Is he so perfectly awful?" the girl at his side inquired wondering. "Why I read lots and lots of clippings that lauded him to the skies. He seems to have the papers with him, and an awfully strong following."

"Did you happen," he asked, "to see in his morgue, as you call it, the reports of the tenement house investigations that involved him?"

She shook her head. "No, everything I saw said he was a great leader, and you were his mortal enemy."

"Also that he was interfering with my Trust Interests, I suppose," the Governor sneered. "I can guess the rest. Glouter—pernicious gas bag! Well—the time will come when the country is going to find out who is the bribed, perjured grafter in all this. There's a hot fight ahead in this election—hot!—why fire and brimstone and gas bombs will be child's play."

"From what you say," she giggled," he's the gas artist."

HIS mouth relaxed, and he withdrew his gaze from the abstract haze and glitter of the horizon to the concrete of the black-fringed eyes, and nodded. It was inexplicably comforting to have her there to talk to, with her piquant face above the red and black Indian blanket, and her friendly smile—was it friendly only? Wasn't there something in the green depths that floated like a mist of gold, like the waters out there where the sun shot deep?

Dan Euston was very young, indeed, to be Governor of one of the nation's greatest states, but he was not so young that many a woman's eyes had not sought his with love and ardor. There were no ardors in these eyes, they were innocent child's eyes. But there was fascination, glamor, romance. The girl who would spend her last penny on a satin bathing suit, and conceive the adventurous plan of boarding a craft a mile from shore by the simple method of swimming out, and collapsing at its watery front door, was certainly no girl to spend her days in a super-respectable Connecticut farm. He chid himself for his wandering thoughts. She was a delightful, fascinating, perfectly satisfying luncheon companion. How she had arrived didn't matter. Then he realized that her inevitable departure mattered, mattered very much, indeed.

"Where do you live in town?" he asked bluntly, in the first rush of his inner protest at her going.

Again she flushed painfully. "It's awfully slummy," she confessed, "and I've only got a little middle room on the top floor with a sky-light, but I like it because it isn't Mrs. Hume's respectable second floor back, opening on the pigstye, and it isn't bed 4, dormitory 2, with six other girls, who all have nice clothes and silver toilet sets. It's horrid and ungrateful of me to talk like that," she added penitently, "and I know Mr. Hallum did the very best he could with what he had to do with."

"But where is it?" his Excellency insisted. "How am I going to find you again, when I feel I'm going to be marooned on a deserted yacht?"

She wrinkled her eyes at him till the heavy lashes met. "It's so—unsmart," she apologized, and she mentioned a street and avenue that were, to say the least, "slummy."

Again his sympathies were stirred. "Poor kid!"

The ship's bell suddenly broke upon the pause that followed—six strokes in pairs.

"What sort of an hour is that?" she asked. "Your clock must be crazy."

"Six bells, ship's time, that's three o'clock," he explained. "Where did you learn to swim like a fish, and not know a ship's clock when you hear it?"

"Three!" she cried, "three! Oh, dear! it's awfully late. I must go at once, now!" She ran to the gangway, heading for a dive. He intercepted her.

"No—no—you can't swim, you shan't, I say."

"Oh, but I must!" she panted. "It'll take me hours to get ashore and dress and walk to the station, and catch a train for the city. Oh, please don't detain me."

"Wait," he begged, "I'll get the gig. I'll row you in myself. It's a lot quicker—please." Before she could refuse he had drawn the gig from the boat-boom and was swinging it alongside. A moment later she was seated in the stern, while he jumped the oars in their locks as the gig dropped (Continued on page 16)

The New Chorus Girl

By WILLIAM RAYMOND SILL

IT was about sixteen years ago. Some thirty girls, of various sizes and ages, had responded to a chorus call sent out by Julian Mitchell, stage director of the Weber and Fields Music Hall. Joe Weber, Lew Fields, Edgar Smith, the librettist, John Stromberg, the composer, and myself, sat at a little table on the stage, "sizing 'em up" as the expression goes. Mr. Smith did the questioning, asking the name, age, height, address, and other details regarding the candidates. I recall perfectly the first two answers. The first girl was tall, and she chewed gum, vigorously and enthusiastically. Never mind her name, but she said she was twenty years old; that she had never been on the stage; that she was a good dancer, because she went to East Side balls every Saturday night; and that she was at present employed in a paper box factory on Houston Street. The second girl was smaller, and fair. Her hair was frizzled, and she was made-up for the occasion, the rouge lines being marked, and the pearl powder on her nose very noticeable. Yes, she had had stage experience. She had been last season with the Rose Sydell Burlesque company, and before that she had been employed as cash girl at a department store in Brooklyn. Both girls were engaged, and to their credit be it said, they both developed into excellent chorus girls.

AT that choosing of the chorus sixteen years ago, the producers were compelled to take pretty much every girl who offered her services. There was a distinct social aversion on the part of young womanhood to enter the chorus, even with such an organization as the Weber and Fields company. A chorus girl had no real social position. The best she could hope for were midnight suppers, and a ride in the park after the show in an openfaced hack, for the auto had not come into its own then. So Julian Mitchell had to take the raw material that he found, and weld it into a semblance of refinement and good manners. Not that there were not some girls to the manor born, but mighty few. It was as important, almost, to teach them deportment and how to affect polite manners, as it was to teach them dance steps.

And now the scene changes. A leading Broadway producer, surrounded by a corps of assistants, was selecting the chorus for a big current production. It was not a question of reaching out, and throwing and roping every candidate before she could get away. It was a very serious business of elimination of candidates. The manager, as the foremost producer of entertainments employing young girls in the world, has an elaborate index and directory system. He has in his office the names of over three thousand girls classified as to age, (Continued on page 12)

THE CONUNDRUM OF THE WORKSHOPS

By GUY W. McCONNELL

THE time has come for America to take stock of her labor," remarked a prominent manufacturer to me recently; "or," with a faint smile, "we may all have to go to work."

There was more than whimsical suggestion in that after remark. It was May Day in New York. Together we stood on the Fifth Avenue curb while several hundred thousand work-visaged, holiday dressed toilers of both sexes, marching up from bench and lathe, forced the right of way, for a number of hours, on this thoroughfare of the rich and leisure classes.

Here, in the largest parade of trade unionists ever witnessed in the highest paid labor market in the world, were men and girls upon whose toil the country very widely depends for shelter and things to eat, use and wear. And fault finding and defiance, in bold words, appeared in the legends painted upon the banners they carried.

USUALLY the May Day hike of organized labor through the streets of our cities attracts only a flicker of attention from the sidewalks of business. Not so in this fat and work mad year of labor famine. In every city in which labor marched, among the idling spectators were knots of business men who viewed the demonstration through anxious and thoughtful eyes. For, this is what was happening: Two million, five hundred thousand strikers were either celebrating pay increase victories or walking out to win them.

Ordinarily business cobbles the wage last for the worker at a trade. If the fit does not suit one holder of or applicant for a job, some less finicky fellow gladly wears it, even if it does pinch in places. Let a shop full, in normal times, demand higher pay or shorter hours of work. They get either or both: if it pleases the boss. If his refusal precipitates a strike, well, jobless men, eager for employment, are plentiful. A telegram to an employment agency in touch with the Barge Office where immigrants are registered brings, within a day or so, carloads of raw and ready recruits. Thus the difficulty is speedily, if inconveniently, overcome and peace prevails. The old men are told to go elsewhere and look for work and—they go.

To-day, however, the shoe is on the other foot. Against its kick, business, both hands glued to the running wheels, is helpless. With the fingers of one hand, labor has it by the ears, holding an open pocket book in the other fist.

Nation wide the cry of business is, "Ouch! Leggo! How much?"

"Top notch wages!" demands the worker. And he gets it, too.

The prosperity strike has hit the country. The question with business is: Where is it going to stop—how long can business stand it?

In these days of order grabbing and labor paying at any price, here is a pertinent inquiry. Who are these toilers who have cornered wages?

"Say!" to me exclaimed an employment agent the other day in a large industrial city west of the Alleghenies. "I've been in the employing game for years, and there's one thing about it that's a puzzle. People nowadays don't know who the working folk are. When a woman wants a house girl, all she thinks I have to do is to entice some wench away from a dairy. People think that the country boy is down home on the farm mooning because I haven't telephoned him to come to town and dig their ditches. They still have a notion that the American workman is the village blacksmith. Gosh! There ain't such things any more!"

An inventory of the laboring classes in the United States proves the truth of his assertion. Of our one hundred million odd population, thirty-two million are of foreign birth. Of this host, at least three million are Jews who make most of our hats, clothing and shoes. From the sweat-shop, the Jew graduates rapidly into some form of merchandising, but his gap in the ranks of the workers is filled by fresh supplies of his race from abroad—when they can get here—only too eager to come and make their permanent home in this new Canaan. One industry in America has come to depend almost entirely upon the Jew.

THE men who erect shelters and provide conveniences for the housing and accommodating of the populace and business are of mixed nationality. Time was, and not long since at that, when they were chiefly of Mayflower or Anglo-Saxon ancestry, and the descendants of early Irish and German settlers. More recently in these trades has appeared the Italian who, an artisan to his finger tips, will make good at any job he may tackle. No mill or quarry, construction camp or mine, is without him. But he is restless. He flits into the country, accumulates his pile and goes home where he becomes a landlord or business man. Others come to take his place, but in our steady labor stock, he must always be reckoned as an uncertainty. Of the Greek, equally uncertain reports must be given. He will shine shoes, cut hair, pour soda water or wait in a restuarant all day and night long, but he shuns the shorter hours which accompany hard manual labor.

In going about the country among those large groups who turn trees into lumber, ore into steel, sand into cement and who fuel the ovens of home and industry, I marvel at the changing labor face. Only upon the railroader remains the unmistakable stamp of the farmer's son or of his son. Where is the Scotch and Celt miner, the English puddler, the German roller of yesterdays? Veterans there are, and their grown up children, too. But everywhere I see predominating the straw-haired Scandinavian, and the sombre features of Hun, Slav and Pole.

These are the rank and file of our candidates for the voting right and the right to shoulder the musket of trade where skill is acquired through brawn of leg and arm.

The national welfare hangs upon our supply of foreign immigrants. Wages are high or low, or according to their abundance or scarcity.

And now, with business humping, industries of every kind running over time and double time, and grain ripening in the fields, an unprepared for and unprecedented employment problem has arisen which tightens labor's grasp upon the business situation.

Labor bureau statistics at Washington show that the demand for farm and factory hands exceeds the supply by one million, twenty-one thousand, four hundred and fifty-four, both males and females. Nowhere in the country can be found an able bodied idle man for whom work is lacking.

"Where are our job seekers?" I asked an immigration officer, recently.

"Fighting in the trenches of Europe for their countries," said he, tersely.

"How about girl workers?"

"In Europe, too, making three times the pay they receive here. They have taken the places of the civilians who have enlisted in the armies."

"Is there no labor immigration?" I inquired.

"Very little. Not by half enough to supply the needs of employers. There are fifty applicants for every prospective worker who walks down a gang plank these days and passes the entrance requirements. Most of them, of course, are women, and here is some information for you," he interjected, significantly. "Twice their number are going back."

"Who are they?" I questioned.

"Factory girls, house maids and wives of soldiers," he informed me.

"How long has this exodus been in progress?"

THE bureau man's face became serious. "It has been growing briskly. But, wait! Watch the homeward bound avalanche when the war stops! Then it will be the men, too."

When the shock of peace comes: Is business thinking what will happen in its labor market, then? Is the rising wage to go still higher, because of labor deflections to Europe?

An instance of the seaward movement of labor from our shores occurred the other day in the hotel in which I live. The waitress at my table came to me when the meal was over and said good-bye. "I'm going to my home in Scotland. My husband, who is an engineer in the British navy, has been shot. I must return to nurse him. I've been over here since the war broke out, making a little money for the future's nestegg, not knowing what might become of him or me."

Three other girls left for England at the same time. Some patriotic duty called them home. The hotel proprietor told me that each, by close economy, had saved a considerable sum of money, sufficient, at least, to keep an average family from want for a year or so.

He told me also that if the scarcity of kitchen help continued, his dining room might have to be closed. "They are all going back home, or getting ready to go back," said he.

A great host of workers is, indeed, preparing to throw down hammer and apron and vacate America. Recently, in the shack of a Galacian steel worker, I saw husband and wife sitting at their family board, counting their savings since coming to America, some two thousand dollars, in a fat pack of crisp, new gold backs which they hoarded in a stocking in some mysterious cache in the ground under the floor.

"What are you going to do with so much money?" I asked.

The eyes of both shone. "Tak home sure ting when no war," explained the man, in anticipation of that time. "Help my poor people."

THE BIG ADVENTURE OF PETER MULLINS

BY JAMES FRANCIS DWYER

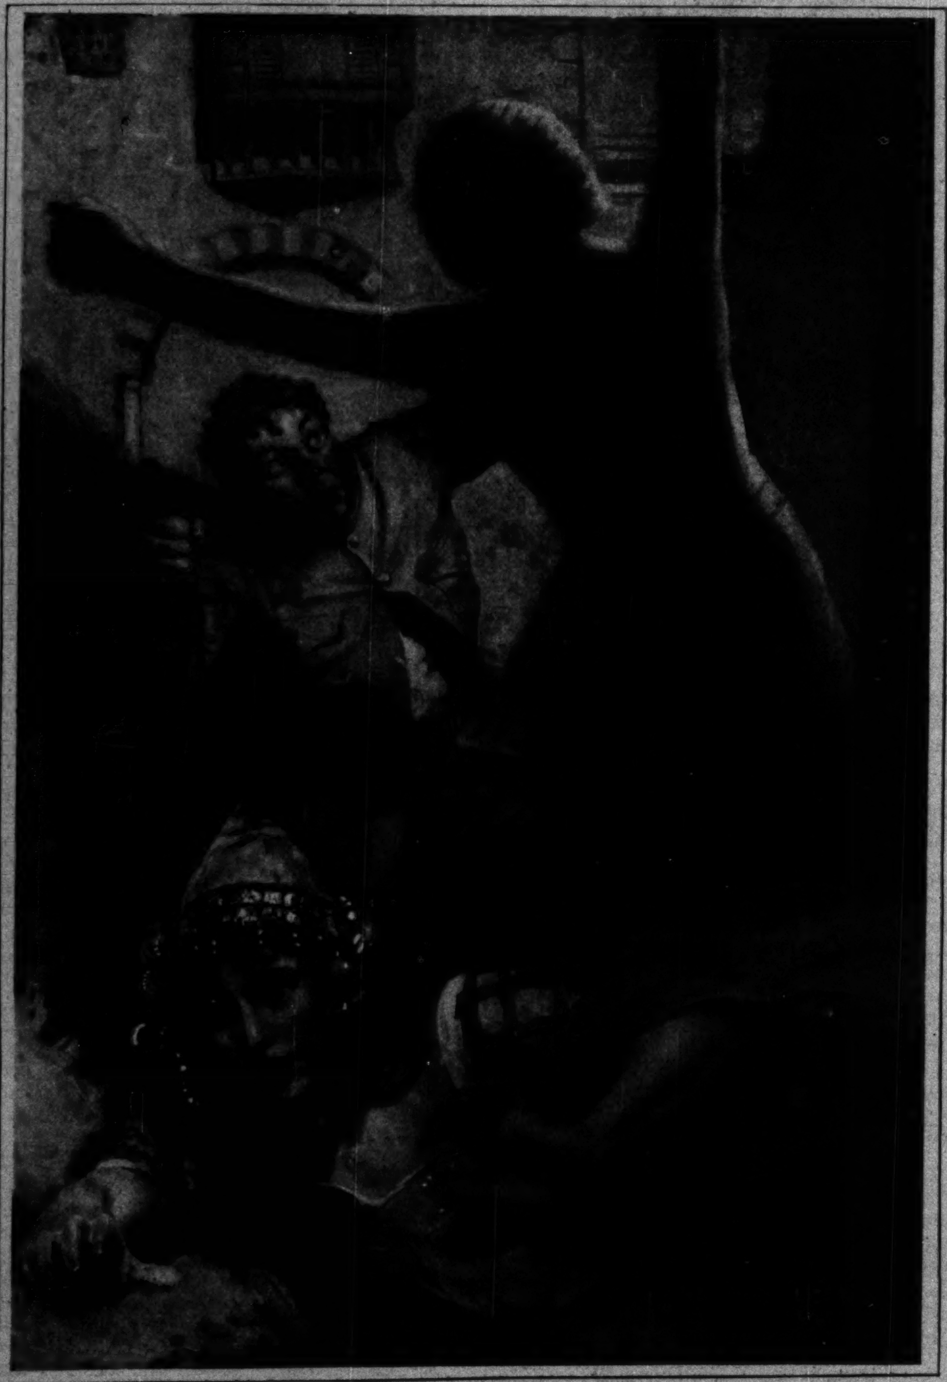
ILLUSTRATED BY GERALD LEAKE

FATE has acted unkindly to Peter Mullins, one time truck driver on the East Side, now private in a U. S. cavalry regiment. Fate made Peter the hero in an unbelievable adventure which Mr. Mullins will persist in relating whenever he can find an audience. Peter has told the story on one hundred and thirty-three different occasions and the recounting has drawn him into one hundred and twenty-seven fights with unimaginative listeners who were rude enough to scoff openly at the tale.

Peter Mullins was employed by Wernstein, Reburg and Co., at the outbreak of the Spanish-American War, and at the first gun resigned his position and raced to the nearest recruiting station. He was drafted into a cavalry regiment and left for the Philippines via the Suez Canal. In due course the transport arrived at Malta, Port Said, and Aden, and at the latter place Peter took part in the Big Adventure, the recounting of which has given him much training for the welter-weight championship of the U. S. army.

Peter with four companions went ashore at Aden on the evening the transport reached that sun-scorched port. They landed at Steamer Point and walked along the Crescent to the Grand Hotel d'Europe, a hostelry whose claim to the first and third words in its title is a matter of wonder to all visitors. Here Mr. Mullins became separated from his companions, and Dame Adventure taking his calloused hand led him off up little side streets whose dilapidated hovels were made beautiful by a big moon which rose out of the desert behind the town.

It was a night of magic. Little winds came in from the sand wastes, little scented winds that touched the hot forehead of the East Side truck driver as lightly as the moist lips of Zeba touched the cheek of the gallant Feerish. The throb of a dharabooka came from the native quarter, insistent, nerve-tingling. From behind latticed windows came laughter and soft cries that had an intoxicating effect upon Peter Mullins.



"I swung at his jaw with me right, unhitchin' a left jab for the heart"

Peter drifted into a quiet street, one end of which was walled up. In a half trance he walked along, and he had nearly reached the stone wall at the end when he halted. There came within hearing the sweetest voice that he had ever heard. At the instant he compared it with the voice of Lizzie Doherty back home in Grand Street, and Lizzie lost without a murmur. It was a voice that came out like a soft lariat of purple silk and wound itself around the soul of Peter Mullins so that he rocked backward and forward in a state of emotional drunkenness.

The unseen songster was singing the Song of Longing which Leela the Beautiful sang to the dead body of her lover. Peter did not know it was Leela's song but people familiar with the verses and who have heard the strange story of Mr. Mullins' have identified them. The words to Peter's ears were like the wine of Galsha to the thirsty soldiers of Saigon and he listened with mouth open and eyes wide.

The song ran:

"Beloved, it is night. The moon so pale
Swings low above the sands. The nightingale
Sings sweetly. Soft desert winds, the breath of Allah, sigh
About my casement as they hurry by
To kiss the fevered dunes. Beloved, hear
My voice and come to whisper sweet things in my ear."

It is a remarkable fact that Peter Mullins, who never committed three lines of verse to memory in his quarter century of life, is able to repeat the song without making the slightest blunder. His ability to do so has impressed many who consider the story the most impossible narrative that was ever told. Peter repeated the verses when requested by the captain of the transport on the morning after the memorable night. To use his own words he couldn't forget them "if his brain garage was run over by a Coney Island local."

Peter Mullins walked to the brick wall that fenced off the grounds in which was the singer. The song dragged him to the wall. It made him climb it hurriedly. He dropped down behind a stone pillar and peered out at a little lawn, whitened by the moonbeams, in the center of which was a weather-worn statue of a youth around which a girl dressed in white garments was dancing, singing as she danced.

Peter, crouching behind the pillar, watched the unusual performance. He could not tear his eyes from the girl. She was the loveliest thing that he had ever seen, and the face of Lizzie Doherty was blotted out by the beauty and grace of the dancer. She was fairer than the seven maids who meet the faithful at the gates of ivory and her movements were the poetry of motion.

Peter's ears drank up the song. He listened as the beautiful words of the Song of Longing were poured out into the silence of the night.

"Beloved, little sands from Tarma down to Leel
Whisper thy name when touched so lightly by my slipper heel.
And in the night I hear them tell
My story to the stars they love so well.
They tell of death, but Love of Mine, I see
Your shining eyes and know that you'll come back to me."

Of the one hundred and twenty-seven fights which the telling to the story has brough upon him, ninety-eight have been caused by Peter's description of the happening which took place immediately after the girl sang the second verse of the Song of Longing. It is at this part of the narrative that the scoffer always makes his presence known, and to show that the doubter has cause to express his disbelief we might use the very words which Peter uses in telling the amazing story. He tells it slowly, alert to note the presence of the unbeliever and quick to challenge the laugh which almost invariably greets this section of the yarn.

"She was hoppin' an' singin'," relates Peter, "her white dress swishin' round her legs as she bowed to the statoo. Suddenly she stopped an' held out her hands to the thing, held 'em out as if she was going to grab hold of it and then—may I never see Broadway again, if I ain't tellin' yeh the gospel truth—the statoo moved! It moved, I tell yeh! It moved its stone legs! It moved towards her an' she sprang away from it, dodgin' across the grass an' it after her. It's gospel, an' if there's anyone who says I'm tellin' a lie he can come outside an' we'll see who's the best man."

The number of acceptances which Peter Mullins has had to this challenge speaks well for the courage of the United States army, the rank and file of which have constituted his audience on nearly every occasion. Ninety-eight soldiers, at various times, having laughed were willing to support their right to laugh by their fistic ability although Peter Mullins is a person that the peace lover would not care to jostle on the sidewalk.

"I saw him hoppin' after her," continues Peter, if no scoffer shows an inclination to do battle, "an' I got on me feet an' watched. She didn't seem afraid of him, the statoo I mean. She just wanted to keep out of his way. She danced an' skipped an' dodged, an' he clumped after her like Paddy the Cop chasin' a kid who's quicker'n a jackrabbit.

" 'He'll get her,' I says to meself. 'He'll get her in a corner'.

"But he couldn't. Everytime he would round her up in a corner she would dodge away from him. Gee, it made me blood run cold to watch it! A statoo, mind you, a carved statoo, skippin' after a girl an' shakin' the ground every time he made a sudden hop at her.

" 'Lookout!' I yelled. 'Lookout or he'll jump on yer toes!'

"That's what I yelled out to her but she was that busy dodgin' an' duckin' that she didn't hear me. Jumpin' catamounts, wasn't I the excited kid! I was runnin' thrills up and down me spine at the rate of sixty-three to the second as I watched.

"Stone Legs ran her up the grass patch to where I was hidin' like a second storey man, an' just as she got near me she trips on her muslin draperies an' goes flop on her face. I thought the stone man would be on top of her but he stopped for a minute as if surprised, an' that gave me time to act. I jumped into the open an' swung at his jaw with me right, unhitchin' a left jab for the heart so that both would sort of connect at the same moment.

"Say did any of yeh hit a stone wall in the face when yeh were real mad? Did yeh? I unloosed a yell that could be heard over in Bombay an' I cuddled me broken knuckles like a monkey huggin' a burnt finger.

"Sufferin' snakes didn't I yell! I forgot, mind yeh forgot that he was stone! Slammed him like as if he was flesh an' blood an' smashed every bone in both me hands.

“The girl gave a scream at the moment I yelled. She screamed at me an’ just for a moment I turned me head an’ looked at her as she lay on the grass.

“ ‘Don’t hurt him!’ she shrieked. ‘Don’t hurt him!’

“ ‘Hurt him?’ I roared, swallowin’ an oath because she was so pretty. ‘Why you couldn’t hurt him with a sledge hammer!’

“I jerked me head around to the spot where Stonelegs was standin’ when I swatted him an’ then I gave a yelp like a frightened coyote. Do you know why? Yeh don’t? I’ll tell yeh an’ if anyone laughs he can be ready to pull off his jacket. Why Stonelegs was back in the spot where he was when I first saw him an’ he was standin’ there as erect as a brigadier an’ looking as if he never galloped up an’ down that grass patch after the girl!

“ ‘Shades of Stonewall Jackson !’ I said, an’ then cautiously, very, very cautiously I walked over an’ examined him. He was as dead as Pharoah’s chariot mules. Yes, sir! He was stone, plain stone an’ he looked as if he hadn’t moved since they put him there.

“ ‘Yeh swine!’ I says to him, kickin’ him in the shins. ‘Yeh swine, I’ve busted me two hands on yeh!’

“I handed him another kick an’ I was that mad that I nearly broke me big toe. I was just goin’ to look round for an axe or a hammer to crack Stonelegs into little pieces when the girl caught hold of me by the arm.

“ ‘How did yeh get in here?’ she says.

“ ‘Over the wall,’ I snapped back to her.

“ ‘But what brought yeh?’ she questions.

“ ‘I HEARD yeh singin’,’ I says, ‘an’ I climbed over the wall an’ watched yeh. When I saw old Mr. Monument here playin’ tag with yeh I came into the open an’ played the giddy fool by slammin’ him one or two on his prehistorical dial.’

“She looked at me hands an’ she looked at me face, then she came closer.

“ ‘You saw that?’ she said, kind of surprised like.

“ ‘Saw it an’ felt it,’t I said. ‘I’ve broken five fingers an’ a ? umb.’

“ ‘Where are yeh fromlh she asked.

“ ‘Noo York,’ I growed, because I was a bit mad at her questonin’ me after I saved her from that annimated quarry. ‘An’ it’s lucky I’m not in Noo York now or he would have mashed yeh up with his blue-metal shoes.’

“She stood lookin’ at me for a few moments as if she was puzzled, then she caught hold of me arm and started to lead me up the lawn.

“ ‘I must dress yer poor hands,’ she said. ‘Come into the house an’ I’ll bandage ’em up.’

“ ‘Thanks,’ said I, ‘an’ then when yeh’ve fixed ’em up I’ll get a sledge hammer an’ come back to Mr. Monument.’

“ ‘No, no!’ she said. ‘Yeh mustn’t touch him! Promise me yeh won’t hurt him!’

“When she said that she caught hold of me jacket an’ looked up at me. Say, she was the goods! She was little Miss Beautiful with all her headlights burnin’. I forgot old Stoneface an’ just grinned at her like a blue-nosed baboon smilin’ at a peanut seller.

“ ‘If yeh don’t want him hurt,’ I said, ‘I’ll forget him although I’d like to smash him into little bits that they could use in makin’ concrete.’ Me hands were hurtin’ me then an’ I was mighty mad with old Red Sandstone.

“ ‘No, no,’ she said, ‘you mustn’t touch him with a hammer.’

“ ‘Very well kiddo,’ I said, ‘but I hope,’ said I, ‘that a bull or an elephant or somethin’ with a hard head, with a very hard head, will climb into this garden an’ hurt him.’ That’s what I said to her.

“She laughed when I said that. Say did yeh ever hear anyone laugh like as if they was makin’ music? She did! When she laughed I got little thrills like yeh get when the orchestry is playing the creepy stuff on the gentle pedal.

“ ‘Yeh’ll feel better when I bathe yeh hands,’ she said, an’ with that she pulls me through the door of the house.

“Say, that was some camp she lugged me into. It was a palace. When I was truckin’ in Noo York I carried stuff into all the best dumps on Riverside Drive but that house in Aden was way up over the best of ’em. It was a gorgeous place. Gee, there was things there that was worth their weight in gold. There was gold statoos an’ silver statoos an’ carpets that yeh sunk in like as if they was quicksand. An’ there was carpets hangin’ on the wall that glittered with gold an’ silver threads, an’ there was gold swords an’ spears an’ big cups with sparklers stuck all over ’em, cups that could hold a bucket of wine without bein’ full.

“ ‘Holy Moses!’ I said, ‘why yer dad must be richer than John D. an’ Andy Carnegie rolled into one.’

“ ‘I don’t know who John D. and Andy Carnegie are,’ she says, ‘but my father is very wealthy. He’s called the Midus of thè East? Midus of the East is the very words she said, an’ a lieutenant in the ‘Blue Legs’ told me that she meant that her father was as rich as a guy who lived hundreds of years ago an’ who could turn a brass door knob into a gold nugget by touchin’ it with his mitt.

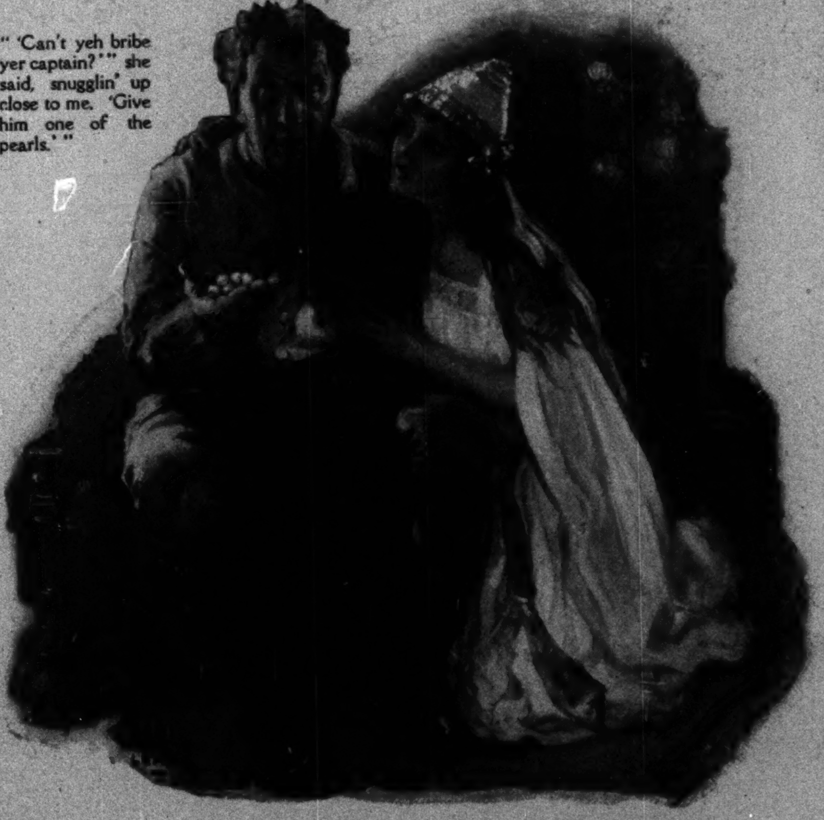
“ ‘He’s either a steel king or a baseball magnet,’ I said, ‘an’ I take off me hat to him as a simoleon gatherer.’

“She laughed again an’ then she claps her hands an’ a girl brought her warm water so that she could wash me knuckles that had come up against that bunch of rocks.

“She was scrubbin’ away at me knuckles when I heard someone commin’ along the passage, someone who was swearin’ worse than the skipper of a cattle ship. She stopped like as if she was frightened an’ I popped a question at her.

“ ‘Who’s the little percussion cap?’ I said, noddin’ me head towards the passage.

“ ‘It’s father,’ she whispered.



“ ‘Can’t yeh bribe yer captain?’ ” she said, snugglin’ up close to me. ‘Give him one of the pearls.’ ”

“ ‘An’ won’t he be pleased to see me here?’ I asked.

“ ‘Yes, yes, but yeh mustn’t tell how yer got hurt,’ she said. ‘Yeh mustn’t! Don’t tell him that yeh hit the statoo. Tell him that yeh saved me from robbers who climbed into the garden.’

“ ‘Don’t worry, Brighteyes,’ I said, ‘if yeh want me to I’ll tell him that I got hurt in a fight with a yellow wasp or in a wrestlin’ match with a cockchafer.’

“Just as I said that the little bit of verbal dynamite ambles into the room an’ the girl starts out to make us acquainted. Say she told him a story that beat anythin’ I ever heard. She said I saved her from six robbers an’ she garnished up that tale so that I thought old Snowy Whiskers’ eyes would pop out of his head. It was a peach of a story, an’ when she finished it the old Feather Duster fell on me shoulder an’ wept seven quarts of liquid all over me jacket.

“ ‘I’ll reward yeh,’ he sobbed.

“ ‘Don’t mention it,’ I said.

“ ‘Yeh’re a brave man,’ he said. ‘There’s no one in the world like yeh.’

“ ‘I got a twin brother an’ yeh couldn’t tell us apart,’ I said.

“ Well, old whiskers wouldn’t leave me go. He kept clutchin’ at me arms an’ me neck an’ presently he made up his mind what he intended to do.

“ ‘I’ll reward yeh,’ he repeated, an’ with that he gallops out of the room an’ returns in a few minutes with somethin’ in his paw.

“ ‘Hold out yer hand,’ he said, ‘the hand that yeh hurt in protectin’ me daughter.’

“I felt like a big boob, but I put out me mitt an’ old Methusaley drops on me palm seven of the biggest pearls that was ever seen. Seven of ’em! Seven pearls that was bigger than the first joint of me thumb an’ if anyone says they wasn’t I’m ready to break off this little narrative to prove me words.

“Seven of the biggest pearls that was ever dug out of the insides of a oyster. He gave ’em to me! Shoved ’em into me flips an’ when I kicked about takin’ ’em he toddled off an’ left Brighteyes an’ me alone.

“ ‘Take ’em,’ she said, smilin’ at me so that I felt wriggly all over. ‘Take ’em, he has thousands as big as ’em.’

“We was sittin’ side by side on a couch that was softer than anythin’ I ever sat on. There was little green and red lamps all over the place, an’ a smell of incense an’ stuff that made yeh feel all nice an’ comfortable. I wanted to stay there forever, stay there with her an’ the Midus of the East who could chuck away pearls that was as big as pigeon’s eggs.

“After a while I slipped me arm around her waist an’ drew her close to me. She didn’t mind. Not she. She just took it quietly, an’ I started in to tell her about Noo York an’ the subways an’ the ellyvator trains an’ Coney Island an’ the Bowery.

“ ‘But it is better here,’ she said. ‘Stay here with me.’

“ ‘I’d be tickled to death,’ I said, ‘but they’d court-martial me an’ shoot me as a deserter.’

“ ‘Can’t yeh bribe yer captain?’ she said, snugglin’ up close to me. ‘If yeh gave him one of the pearls, the biggest one, he might let yeh stay here with me an’ me father.’

“Well, I looked at the biggest of the seven pearls, an’ I thought how old Captain Lanigan’s eyes would bulge if he saw it. An’ the girl kept on speakin’ to me as I stared at the pearl.

“ ‘Give it to him,’ she said. ‘Give him two of ’em an’ then he will let yeh come back an’ live here with father an’ me.’

“Well she kept on tellin’ me what to say an’ what to do till I got to me feet. ‘Kiddo,’ says I, holdin’ her chin up so that I looked down into her big eyes, ‘I’ll go an’ bribe old Lanigan to let me go. I’m for you, Brighteyes, an’ the minute I bribe him I’m going to gallop back here an’ sit ’longside yeh for the rest of me life.’

“ ‘Go’ she said, ‘an’ hurry back.’

“ ‘Kiss me,’ I said, an’ she put up her little lips and kissed me on the cheek, then she took me to the door an’ whispered that she’d be waitin’ till I came back.

“I STARTED to run down the path to the grass patch where old Stoneface was standing. I had the seven pearls in me right hand because I had a hole in the pocket of me khaki jacket an’ I was takin’ no chances with them pearls. They was five of the biggest pearls that was ever growed, you bet they was.

“I came to the grass patch an’I looked at the spot where Mr. Monument was when I went up to the house with the girl. He wasn’t there! Not a sign of him! The grass patch was a bare as a billiard table.

“ ‘Wow,’ I says to meself, ‘the old lump of a stone wall has got loose again. Peter,’ says I, ‘keep yer peepers open an’ prepare to receive a chargin’ tombstone on yer flank.’

“I had no sooner said that to meself than I heard the bushes behind me cracklin’ an’ next minute the stone man came lumberin’ down on me at a gallop.

“ ‘Steady, Peter,’ I says, ‘keep yer hands down, an’ use yer legs a little.’

“That amberlatin’ monument came at me on the run an’ I sidestepped like Kid McCoy. It went by me like a steam roller, then it turned an’ charged again. I pulled the same tactics on it the second time an’ it got mad. It wheeled an’ came at me under forced draught an’ I couldn’t move quick enough to dodge it. It’s shoulder hit me right hand that I was carryin’ the pearls in, an’ those seven beauties was spilled on the grass!

“ ‘Yeh swine!’ I says, ‘Yeh bloomin’ prehistorical swine,’ an’ with that I forgot all about the hardness of his dial an’ smashed him one on the nose.

“Shades of Night, that punch jarred me right back to me spinal column! It made the back of me brain box open an’ shut an’ I yelled with the pain of it. I funked right there an’ then. That gallopin’ chunk of sandstone had me nerve and I wanted to get away from it as quick as possible.

“ ‘Peter,’ says I, speakin’ to meself, ‘grab the pearls an’ beat it. This is no place for a man unless he’s got a crowbar an’ a steam drill.’ (Continued on page 15)

The Oldest American Indian

SWIFT ARROW, which, in Indian language, is Ga-be-na-quor-yarg, is a Chippewa Chief one hundred and twenty-eight years of age. A short while ago the Federal Government became interested as to the truth of the great age given to this man. A careful investigation was made, and by records referring to him as a guide to white fur traders, they have been able to trace him back nearly one hundred and twenty years, or to his early boyhood. There is little doubt that his age is approximately one hundred and twenty-eight, and he states, when asked, that "I have seen one hundred and twenty-eight summers."

Swift Arrow was born on the shores of Lake Winnabigoshish in Northwestern Minnesota. At the death of his father he became chief of his tribe and was given the title of Swift Arrow because of his great strength in shooting with the bow and arrow. In his youth he was undoubtedly a big man, probably over six feet in height but age has withered him so that now he is considerably bowed and shrunken. Though dwindled in body, his mind is clear, shrewd and strong, and his memory is remarkable. When he can be induced to talk, he tells, in a slow monotonous voice, experiences of his life which has been filled with frontier adventure unusual even for an Indian. Added interest attaches to the ancient chief when it is remembered that in his boyhood the founders of the Republic were many of them living. He was eleven years old when Washington died and was twenty-one when Lincoln was born.

GA-BE-NAH-QUOR-YAR.
AGE
Swift Arrow Has Seen One Hundred and Twenty-Eight Summers

When Swift Arrow was a young chief he fell in with some white traders who treated him and his tribe kindly and honestly and with such good effect that he has through his long life, been friendly toward the whites. For half a century he did much in quelling Indian outbreaks and in saving white settlements by timely warnings. In the Leach Lake Indian outbreak of a few years ago this chief took an active part in checking Indian depredations and preventing a massacre.

Last year strong inducements were offered the Chippewa Chief to appear at the Panama Exposition, every comfort and convenience that modern travel offers were to have been provided for him, but he stubbornly refused even to consider the invitation. He has a strong dislike for cities and crowds, and the white man's tobacco and fire water are all that will draw him to the town from his snug tepee on the shore of Cass Lake in Northern Minnesota where he now lives. He has the Indian's strong desire for whiskey and obtains it whenever possible. Under the influence of this desire he one day parted with a uniquely carved stone pipe that he had smoked for over a half a century, in exchange for one drink of fire water.

Two years ago Swift Arrow made a trip to Minneapolis and St. Paul, and was filled with wonder on seeing street cars and automobiles. The elevators gave him a tremendous fright. He was put up at one of the best hotels while in St. Paul and was given a large comfortable room, but his fixed habits could not be broken and he slept in a blanket on the floor in front of an open window. He was very anxious to get back home, expressing a strong dislike to the noise of the cities and vowed never to visit them again.

There has been little or no noticeable change in Swift Arrow in the past ten years and it is not unlikely that he will go on living and enjoying his simple life for some years to come.

The Conundrum of the Workshops

"Are you ever coming back here?"

Both husband and wife shook their heads. The shadow of grave uncertainty rested upon their faces. "Not for long tam, anyhow," the woman whispered, softly. Tears were in their eyes, now. They were thinking, sadly, of the war-wrought desolation among their people to whose rescue from poverty their dollars and lives would be offered.

I told of this incident the other night to a banker in the anthracite coal regions. He drew me to a window in his office. Great crowds of foreigners were marching, in an elated mood, up and down the street.

"Why is this great rejoicing?" he queried.

"Wages have just been increased, haven't they?"

"Yes, but that is not the only cause. A strike has been averted. That was feared. Not because they were not ready or willing to strike. They are always that. This year, however, a strike would have absorbed the savings which so many of these people intend to take home when peace is restored."

He then stated that our savings institutions are holding thousands of substantial accounts of foreign workers who intend to take this money to Europe when they may do so in safety and without fear of army conscription. "Go ask the local steamship ticket agents how much after-war passage money they are holding on deposit," he suggested.

I did so. "Thousands of dollars," was the information I gathered. And, upon my return from the coal regions to New York, from a prominent steamship official I learned this further fact: From all sections of the United States, for many months, cash orders for steerage space after the war have been pouring into the booking offices of all trans-atlantic lines.

"How many?" I interrogated.

"Upwards of a million," were the figures he used.

With a million helpers short now! Does this mean that our rapidly expanding business, now dominated by the highest labor cost it has ever been forced to incur, will have to shut off steam after the war? Here enters the speculative question of immigration.

"When immigration sets in again," declared a western wheat grower who is east in search of the elusive idle to take back for harvesting, "labor of all kinds will be plentiful and business will get its come-back."

An English labor union official, now in this country on an observation trip, overheard the foregoing prophecy and bluntly declared: "That is over-estimation. The need of workers in Europe will be greater in peace than in war. When the war ends Europe will have three big jobs to perform: restore its home commerce, regain its foreign trade and rebuild entire cities which the war has destroyed. Was there ever a more gigantic task for the working man? Surely the employer here does not expect us to let our people slip away from our shores the moment they throw down the bayonet! The war has crippled and killed off millions, too. We, ourselves, are going to be up against labor shortage. Every inducement, sentimental, patriotic and financial, will contribute toward keeping our desirables at home for the next five years, at least. And you can't use the armless and legless here!"

"But," interposed a big machine man who was present; "how, other than by emigration, will your common people es-

Berry Time

Doubles the Use of Puffed Grains
Six for Every Berry

These bubbles of grain—Puffed Wheat and Puffed Rice—belong in each dish of berries.

Mix in six for every berry.

As a shortcake needs crust, so berries need these airy, flavory morsels—as a blend.

Float Them In Milk

Every milk bowl calls for Puffed Grains. For these are whole grains. They are toasted. They are flaky, thin and crisp.

The grains are puffed to eight times normal size. So they float on milk like bubbles.

They are steam-exploded—easy to digest. All the millions of food cells are broken.

The fearful heat has given them a fascinating flavor.

Imagine how these tissue-thin, toasted globules add to the joys of a milk dish. And the outer grain coats—most needed by young folks—are not lacking in these foods, remember.

Puffed Wheat Except in Far West 12c
Puffed Rice 15c
Corn Puffs—Bubbles of Corn Hearts—15c

Don't serve for breakfast only. There is many a way to enjoy them. And in this form these grains yield all that Nature gave them.

These are puffed by Prof. Anderson's process. The grains are shot from guns. Every food cell is exploded. Every atom feeds.

These are not mere cereal dainties. They are scientific foods. And in summertime your pantry shelf should be kept supplied with all.

The Conundrum of the Workshops

cape the burden of taxation which will be imposed upon them?"

The spokesman of foreign labor smiled. "If our standard of wages and living compares favorably with yours, what difference will taxes make? There will be many a surprised European who on his return after the war finds that a job at home among his kin brings more satisfactory results than he obtained over here. He will tell this to the fellow contemplating emigration, too."

That the inward flow of applicants for jobs, after the war, will be slow and undependable is the opinion of the ocean steamship companies, in spite of low and competitive travel rates which they say will prevail. The sturdy and patriotic Belgian and Frank for some time to come will not be seen in our glass factories. The people of Germany, whose industrial plant, through all the ravages of war, has alone, of those of all nations now under arms, remained intact, will not be hindered from tossing aside the gun on one day and donning overalls the next. After long absences in foreign lands, the working men of the British Isles will find plenty of profitable employment at home where they will be glad to be. Poland is to be re-made, so is Galacia, and here is the vast projected new industrial Russia.

And now occurs the question of the accepted immigrant from Southeastern Europe, of whom seventy-two per cent are illiterate. Will our immigration laws check whatever tide may arise from that direction?

In the lounge of a club where men of affairs gather, I put this question to a well known politician who strongly advocates the passage, at this writing, of immigration laws including the so-called Literacy Test: "In view of these unparalleled labor conditions, why further reduce the supply of fuel by which the engines of business are run?"

"Go ahead!" he retorted. "Throw the gates wide open, if you want illiteracy and ignorance to throttle as well as generate business!"

"Well, but doesn't the foreign working man have a strangle hold on business, now?"

"Oh, yes!" he exclaimed, impatiently, "but only temporarily. All these labor difficulties will settle themselves when the chief cause is removed. Everybody knows why labor is scarce, high and troublesome. Wait until the ammunition workers in this country are thrown out of jobs. Then we will have all the help we need."

Will this be true? How will "the living wage" be affected when our munition workers become job seekers? Here is the crux of the American labor problem. Will wages, jacked up by the war order contract, fall down when these contracts are completed?

"Not in my plant," maintained a prominent powder maker, "for I will need all my men. I intend to go into the celluloid manufacturing business."

"And I," said a shell-maker up in New England, "am already enlarging my works to cast automobile parts."

"At as great a percentage of profit?" I asked one of these men.

"No, but there's just the trouble about reducing wages," said he. "How am I going to cut the standard already established without losing my men, some of whom are bound to leave, anyway?"

In some munition plants, it is true, foreseeing that the "munition" wage would not be permanent, employers have been distributing the workers' share of the profits in the form of "over-pay," or "bonuses." This will cease, when the business ceases. But even if all the men and girls now employed in the two thousand odd mills and factories thriving by war-trade should be made idle, there are only eight hundred thousand of them, surely by less than a million or more insufficient to fill the jobs now open in the country!

Wages, in truth, are up, and—mounting. Help is short. The indications are that it will become more scarce. Business, in America, is speeding at a pace never before set. General Prosperity has marshalled his army on our soil. Our hotels and theatres, race tracks and ball grounds are overflowing with the spender from his ranks. To keep the gait of industry, we must have more workers. We can not get them. How, then, is business preparing to readjust itself, and at the same time keep on doing business?

This is the first of two articles dealing with the big business-and-labor problem. The second article will appear in an early issue.

The New Chorus Girl

size, style of dancing, appearance, and whether or not she is suitable for a New York engagement, or whether she would be better for a road show. For the first call over two thousand girls responded, all eager for work. Many came chaperoned by their mothers; some came in their own automobiles; fathers, and brothers were on hand. Mr. Wayburn needed just one hundred and twenty girls, and then came the ordeal of choosing this number from the two thousand. It required three days to do this. Many of the two thousand were not on the Wayburn list. They had heard that there was an opportunity for pretty girls willing to learn to dance, to obtain an engagement, and they came with the rest.

I sat at a table those three days just as I had sixteen years before at the little Weber and Fields Music Hall. One of the first girls to come to me was tall. Her clothes were of the latest mode. Her hair was neatly dressed and refinement, gentle breeding, and culture were discernible in her every feature. I asked her name and address. It was an old name, honored for some generations in New York. No; she had never been on the stage. In fact, when her father died last April, she had been compelled to leave Wellesley in her sophomore year. Her father had lost his fortune, I remembered. The papers had been full of it. She thought that by going on the stage she could help support her mother, and young brothers. She would like to adopt a stage name, of course, and she could dance—goodness, yes, she was considered the best dancer in her class. Mr. Wayburn engaged her. She is with the production now, and very often one sees her name—her real name—as being present at conspicuous social gatherings in the afternoons, but not in the evenings, for she is working then.

Another successful applicant was very frank about her desire to adopt the stage.

"I graduated from St. Elizabeth's Convent, at Morristown, N. J., last June," she said. "My father hasn't much money, and I don't see why I shouldn't be self-supporting. It would take a year for me to learn stenography, and as I know I am good looking, and can learn stage dancing, why should I not try the stage, instead of working in a store or an office, for half the money? I have a good voice, too, the sisters tell me, so I want to try."

When the girls had all been selected, and rehearsals begun, I one day called each girl to me, and took a sort of pedigree. I wanted to know where they came from, and what kind of an education they had received. Hardly one but had graduated from a grammar school, high school or convent, while two of the show girls had received college degrees. Not one lived in a poor section of the city, where the chorus girls of a generation ago came from for the most part. Some lived modestly; not a few supported mothers, and young brothers and sisters going to school. Some sent half of their weekly salary to some little city or village miles away to keep the old home going.

TWO summers ago there was a paragraph in the New York papers, stating that the officers of the battleship Arkansas had given a dance and reception on board ship to the chorus girls of the All Aboard company. The other day there was a similar paragraph that the officers of the U. S. S. Brooklyn, prior to the sailing of that ship to China, had given a Chinese tea to the girls of the Town Topics company, as the ship lay at her moorings in the Hudson River. Fifteen years ago such paragraphs would have occasioned exclamations of horror from every pulpit and every editorial column in the country. What, naval officers entertaining chorus girls on board ship? But this little item of news did not even occasion a ripple of protest. It was taken as a matter of course. And why? Because the chorus girl of today is no longer a social outcast. She takes her place among the young women of the world, as their equal in breeding, education, and right-living.

All is not roses for the chorus girl, however, and I would not wish to have this article encourage any young girl to determine on a stage career without first knowing of the many hardships she is bound to encounter. There are long, agonizing periods of rehearsal. Some last for five weeks,—many run up into ten or more weeks, without pay. That is a hard period for some girls. They have to borrow here and there, and have to find an indulgent landlady who will let them run into debt in the hope that when the girl gets a steady job she will repay. They almost invariably do, my investigations prove, but it keeps them "short" financially, for many weeks. Of course, with the girls who have homes, it is not so bad, and the management, after the first few weeks, generally advances living expenses, which is deducted from their salaries. But it is a gamble, after all. Suppose the show is a failure?

Then there are those trying weeks, of three rehearsals a day, all for nothing. Then the show may be only a moderate success in New York, and is quickly taken on the road. Some girls prefer the road to playing a long engagement in New York. They like the novelty of travel, and the attendant excitement, but not many. There is generally $5.00 added to the weekly salary on the road, but this does not compensate for the added expenses, unless two or three girls room together, and eat in cafeterias, and cheap restaurants.

Educators tell me that the real reason why there has been such a change in the personnel of the chorus girl is because the rigid enforcement of the Compulsory Education Laws make it impossible for a girl to leave school before she is fourteen and that therefore, she has a good common school education before she can set about earning her own living. But I do not altogether agree with them. I think it is because the stage has made rapid strides; because it offers good pay and a certain amount of freedom and fascination; and because the girls of the stage are better safe-guarded than any other class of working girls.

Big Adventure of Peter Mullins

"The moment I said that to meself the Stone Age guy seemed to understand what I was thinkin' about. He gave a hop an' brought his two feet down on the pearl that I was thinkin' of givin' to old Lanigan an' that pearl just became dust. He made a hop at another an' then at another an' those pearls after he landed on 'em became the stuff that dreams is made of.

"I got mad then. I got fightin' tearin' mad. I didn't care what happened. I just wanted to finish that cavortin' chunk of cussedness, an' I looked around for somethin' harder thar me fists to do it with.

"He was beatin' the seventh pearl into dust when I got what I wanted. I found a pole, a pole that was thicker'n me leg an' I gave a whoop an' rushed at the geologercal specimen that had got off the chain.

" 'Now,' says I, 'come on, yer hunk of granite, an' I'll knock pieces off yeh.'

"Did he come on? Yeh bet he did. He came at the charge an' I swatted him over the head as I dodged. Wow! what a terror he was! He was out to tramp me as flat as the pearls an' he kept me movin' to keep out of the way of his feet.

"I was playin' on his head an' on his body with the pole an' I was scared stiff because I couldn't dent him. Scared? Yer can bet yer last nickel that I was scared. I couldn't knock a chip off him an' me arms was achin' from swingin' the little tree that only seemed to tickle him everytime I brought it down on his shoulders.

"I was just wonderin' if I could get to the fence before he could catch me when I got an idea. It came up out of the back of me head an' I laughed with joy. Yeh bet I did. I laughed outright an' then—well, what do yeh think I did? Yeh don't know, do yeh? Why I lowered that pole an' walloped him as hard as I could on his legs. On his legs! Swatted him on his stone ankles an' I howled as I did it.

"Did they crack? Yeh bet they did! One of 'em smashed clean off with the first smash an' before he could steady himself I brought him another on the off-side leg an' down he went on the grass.

"I stood an' looked at him for a minute while I was gettin' me breath, then I got afraid. I got terribly afraid. I dropped the pole an' ran for the wall, hopped over it an' raced down the street howlin' like a madman.

"At the first corner I ran into Corporal Hogan an' a guard from the transport who was roundin' up stragglers, an' Hogan grabbed me.

" 'Here, what's this?' he said. 'What are yeh wakin' the town for. Are yeh mad?'

" 'I ought to be,' I screamed, then I started in to tell him the story of the peramberlatin' piece of the pyramids. I told him of the girl dancin' an' how old Mr. Monument woke up an' chased her. I showed him me knuckles that had come up against the statoo's jaw, then I told of Mr. Midus an' the seven pearls. Then I told of the second fight an' how I beat the stone man by breakin' his legs with the pole.

"Hogan had his mouth open like a drownin' porgie when I finished.

" 'Holy St. Patrick!' he said. 'We'll go back an' see the place.'

" 'Of course we will,' I said. 'She, the girl, she told me that her father had thousands of pearls as big as the ones he gave me.'

"Well, Hogan an' me an' the four other soldiers went back an' climbed over the wall. Right in the middle of the grass patch was Stoneface with his broken legs, an' Hogan an' those four fatheads with him walked around him like as if they thought he might get up an' charge after them.

" 'Show us the house,' says Hogan, 'I'm dyin' to have a look at the pearls.'

"Well I took 'em up the path to the house, the house I had left fifteen minutes before. It was dark, dark as midnight, an' the doors was closed tight.

" 'It's empty,' says Hogan. 'Sure no one is livin' here at all.'

" 'You're mad,' I said. 'She is livin' here, the girl with the eyes as deep as the Pool of Treen an' the laugh that is like the sweetest music that ever was played.'

" 'Get in through one of the windows, Lawrence,' says Hogan, turnin' to one of the four. 'Get in an' see what's there.'

"Lawrence got in through a window an' struck a match. An' would yeh believe it? Yeh wouldn't, would yeh? What do yeh think? Why the place was empty! Yes, empty! Empty as Coney Island in a snow storm! Not a soul there! Not a scrap o' furniture! Not one o' those big cups or the carpets or the gold swords or anythin'! There was only dust, dust an inch thick an' cobwebs, that's all.

"Hogan got mad then. 'Come on,' he says, grabbin' me by the shoulder, 'yeh can tell yer pearl story to old Lanigan in the mornin!'

"Did I tell it to him? To Lanigan? Of course I did! What did he say? He laughed at me, although I sang him the song that she was singin' an' told him everythin'.

"When they was leadin' me to the caboose to do seven days for assaultin' Hogan, I heard the lieutenant ask Lanigan how was it possible for me to make up the story if it didn't happen.

" 'How?' says Lanigan. 'Why he's got Irish blood in his veins an' they give yeh some vile stuff to drink at Aden.'

"The old stiff! I only drank three little drinks an' I had me broken knuckles to show, an' I could sing the song she sang, an' Hogan had to admit that old Stonelegs was lying where I knocked him down. Some guys wouldn't believe their own mother, an' Lanigan an' a few others I know belong to that breed; that's all I got to say."

Times To Be Careful
In Our War Against Germs
There's No Room for Half Measures

Whatever you apply to broken skin, be sure that it's utterly sterile.

Germs enter through small wounds just as well as through big wounds. And a few infectious germs may breed millions.

There's danger in every pin-prick.

* * * *

Protect the wound, but don't apply a home-made bandage.

Don't use absorbent cotton which has been handled or exposed.

Make sure that everything touching a wound is aseptic.

* * * *

Call a physician if the wound is considerable. And be very careful in the meantime.

Keep gauze and bandages on hand, absorbent cotton and adhesive plaster.

We depend on no ordinary sterilization. B&B surgical dressings are twice sterilized—once after being sealed. It is done by costly apparatus, in the most efficient way.

They are packed in rooms filled with washed air. In rooms equipped like operating rooms. The workers are in uniform.

Then we take extreme measures to bring the products to you sterile —just as they left us.

* * * *

Don't take risks.

Careless laboratory methods are just as bad as utter disregard.

The brand B&B insures you against them. Every doctor, nurse and druggist knows that. Get for home use what they get for hospitals—B&B double-sure dressings.

Always call the doctor — remember First Aid is only first aid.

Insist on B&B

For safety's sake, in these home applications, insist on B&B.

They are made in a model laboratory, under ideal conditions.

They are made by chemists who, for 22 years, have been serving physicians and hospitals. And whom every surgeon respects.

Real Fumigation

Then when you fumigate use B&B Fumigators. They accord with Government recommendation. They are twice the usual strength.

Don't live where contagious disease has existed until you know that the germs are killed.

Half measures are worse than none. They simply make danger seem safe.

These things are all-important. You want competent help when you war on germs. You want absolute protection. You want the B&B care and quality and skill.

"YOU MAY DELAY—BUT TIME WILL NOT" FRANKLIN

"PREPAREDNESS"

THIS nation's real Prosperity Preparedness is reflected in the ability of the average family to live well and comfortably—to enjoy a reasonable amount of luxury and to save a measure of today's income for tomorrow's outgo.

This is Prosperity Preparedness in its truest and best form.

While Pulpit and Press are making known the need of National Preparedness in a military, marine, mercantile and monetary sense, it is well for us as units in this great 100 million American family to take stock of our plans and purposes, looking forward to individual "preparedness" against the day when youth, health or income-earning capacity no longer exists.

Let's be fair with ourselves—look facts in the face: Are we even in a reasonable measure frugal, do we practice economy, have we any definite plans that are now in effect which promise future prosperity, peace of mind, Independence?

Just now an exceptional opportunity exists for you—one within your scope of easy attainment—every man and every income-producing woman can take advantage of this Investment offering. Only $25 initial capital is required to start, then Ten Dollars a month for a period of sixty months; this will make you the owner of five centrally-located properties in five rapidly-growing "new born" cities of the Northwest.

Cities located in the direct path of our country's most rapid growth, and on great Trans-continental Railroads, which have recently girdled a new and vast empire of Virgin Resources.

History bears testimony to the fact that investments in inside city properties in young cities situated on great interstate trunk lines have resulted in generous returns to those who had the foresight and initiative to wisely buy—then hold, while the country grew—the towns became cities and the hundreds invested grew into thousands.

These five cities were selected from 230 carefully analyzed communities as being the best. The wonderful opportunities for safe and conservative investment are set forth in detail in the book—

THE WAY TO WIN

This book tells the story of a $200,000,000 achievement carried through to successful conclusion.

It tells of a new application of an old law to the realm of Investment.

It tells you—how to begin—NOW and save ten dollars per month in a manner that spells security and satisfactory returns—an attractive, easy, wise and profitable way in which to secure your "Prosperity Preparedness."

This book has a message for you. Why not fill out and mail coupon now while you have the subject in mind?

Why Does a Car Skid?

By Charles B. Hayward

Member of the Society of Automobile Engineers

JUST what constitutes a skid and why does a perfectly self-respecting car break away and go on a rampage? There are certain fundamental laws of physics which, science tells us, are immutable. Chief among these is the principle, that once started on a certain course a heavy body shows a decided reluctance to depart from that course. The heavier the body and the faster it is traveling, the more reluctant it becomes to leave the straightest line to its destination. This is termed its inertia. Coupled with its ally, centrifugal force, it is the cause of a rapidly traveling car turning over when an attempt is made to take a sharp turn without slowing down.

For example, compare its action under normal conditions and under those just mentioned. Say, in the first instance, it is going twenty-five miles an hour or more and another car pops out of the cross street just ahead. The pavement is smooth, hard and perfectly dry. Jamming the brakes down to the limit cuts the speed in half the first second, the next quarter second halves it again and then, with the wheels locked the machine slides ten or fifteen feet at a speed of about six miles an hour and comes to rest within fifty to sixty feet of where the brakes were first applied. Even though the wheels slid, they kept straight ahead and the driver was unaware either that the wheels had locked or that they had been sliding during the last part of their travel. Total stopping time, about two seconds. At exactly twenty-five miles an hour, it would have covered 73.2 feet in two seconds: with the brakes in good condition and properly applied it might have stopped in thirty-five to fifty feet in the same time, so that given two seconds advance notice an alert driver will avoid an apparently unavoidable smash-up.

Now consider its action under abnormal conditions. Instead of being hard and dry, the pavement is wet and greasy—nothing else describes it so aptly. The same emergency occurs and the brakes are applied in the same way at the same time. The driving wheels lock, travel straight ahead for a few feet and then the whole rear of the car starts on a rapid revolution of its own. This may stop as suddenly as it began at the end of a quarter turn and the entire machine then absorbs the remaining unexpended energy by sliding sidewise bodily.

Why did the driving wheels continue straight on their course in the first instance and not in the second? "A slippery pavement," will be the answer of the man in the street, but the engineer says "loss of traction" and that accounts for it in as few words as the language allows. If the rear wheels had kept their "bite" on the road, technically known as traction—that hold which makes it possible for them to propel the car, the latter would not have skidded no matter how slippery the pavement happened to be.

But this involves another law of physics. Take a piece of metal and draw it across a smooth stone: it slides with comparatively little resistance. Now take a chunk of rubber and draw it across the same stone: twice as much effort will be necessary. In technical language the coefficient of friction of the rubber on the stone is much greater than that of the steel, which is one of the reasons why steel tires are not practical for the driving wheels of motor vehicles. But now douse the stone in water and do likewise with the rubber. Draw them across one another again as formerly and note how easily the rubber slides on the stone. The coefficient of friction has been reduced to the vanishing point, skidding conditions have been reproduced on a small scale and the rubber hasn't as much hold on the wet stone as the steel did when it was dry. Take a piece of chain, however, place it across the chunk of rubber and apply this combination to the stone: press down hard on the rubber to represent the weight of the car on the tire and try to pull the stone from under it. Traction has been restored and it is more difficult to make the surfaces slide on one another than it was when they were dry. In this combination, we have the familiar non-skid chain and the reason for its use will be at once apparent.

Increased Weight 22 Pounds Says Sergeant Campbell

Remarkable Experience of Kentucky Guardsman, Puts On Flesh At Rapid Rate.

"I got the trial package of Sargol and was very much pleased with it," states Quarter Master Sgt. Campbell of the 1st Kentucky Infantry who sends us the photo above. He reports that by the time he was on the fourth package his weight had increased 22 lbs. and that he felt like another fellow.

"When I began to take Sargol" writes R. T. Sivells, "I only weighed one hundred thirty-nine pounds. Now my weight has increased to 151 lbs. Everybody says that I am getting so fat."

"I never felt better in my life since I have been taking Sargol. The first two weeks I gained 10 lbs. and am gaining every day. Sargol makes me eat and sleep and I don't get up with a tired feeling any more," writes J. C. Weaver, and N. D. Sanderson adds, "when I started Sargol I weighed 147 lbs. and now I weigh 160 lbs. Everybody is telling me how fat you have got in the last month."

Would you, too like to quickly put from 10 to 30 lbs. of good, solid, "stay-there" flesh, fat and muscular tissue between your skin and bones?

Don't say it can't be done. Try it. Let us send you free a 50c package of Sargol and prove what it can do for you.

More than half a million thin men and women have gladly made this test and that Sargol does succeed, does make thin folks fat even where all else has failed, is conclusively proven in our opinion by the tremendous business we have done. No drastic diet, flesh creams, massages, oils or emulsions, but a simple, harmless home treatment. Cut out the coupon and send for this Free package today, enclosing only 10 cents in silver to help pay postage, packing, etc.

Address the Sargol Co., 817-S Herald Bldg., Binghamton, N. Y. Take Sargol with your meals and watch it work. This will tell the story.

Cakes and Cookies

JUNE being the month of brides, it naturally follows that the cake in all its moods and tenses becomes the subject of both importance and concern in the kitchen. No wedding, of course, can be properly celebrated without the bridal cake in which is hidden the coveted ring.

Among the following recipes, all of which have been tried and carefully tested, is a particularly delicious wedding cake of a size that will afford a generous slice to every member of a large wedding party. By way of variety, however, some dozen other cake and cooky recipes are given with the assurance that each of them is a culinary success, if the directions are carefully followed.

It need not be emphasized that the best results in cake baking can only be obtained by using the best ingredients. Care also must be taken in measuring and mixing. In these recipes all measurements are made level. Measuring cups, divided into thirds and quarters, are used; also tea and tablespoons. Pans must be properly prepared, and the oven regulated and carefully watched.

Suffrage Cake

2 eggs
1 cup sugar
½ cup milk
1½ cups flour
1 tablespoon melted butter
2 tablespoons baking powder
1 tablespoon orange juice
1 teaspoon grated rind

Beat eggs well and add the sugar, melted butter, orange juice, grated rind, flour and baking powder. (Sift flour and baking powder four times.) Bake in a square pan, split and fill with orange cream.—Mrs. W. H. M., 1637 Hancock St., Chicago, Ill.

Emma's Wedding Cake

1 lb. flour
1 lb. butter
1 lb. citron
½ lb. orange peel
3 tablespoons cinnamon
2 tablespoons nutmeg
1 tablespoon allspice
1 cup molasses
12 eggs
2 lbs. currants
6 lbs. raisins
1¼ lb. dark brown sugar
½ lb. lemon peel
2 tablespoons mace
1 tablespoon ginger
1 dessert spoon cloves
1 pint brandy

Bake slowly until a straw will come out clean. This cake will keep indefinitely. —Mrs. C. W. S., 430 Jessup Ave., Dunmore, Pa.

Spiced Cake

2 cups brown sugar creamed with ½ cup butter
1 cup sour milk
½ cup stoned dates
1 cup seeded raisins
½ teaspoon allspice
½ teaspoon cloves
2 eggs
1 teaspoon soda dissolved in the milk
2½ scant cups flour
1 teaspoon cinnamon
½ teaspoon nutmeg
Pinch of salt

Icing: The white of one egg beaten stiff. One cup sugar cooked until it threads. Put about 3 spoons water on sugar.—Mrs. A. M. C., 25 Francis St., Madison, Wis.

Fig Cake

½ lb. chopped figs
1 cup chopped raisins
1 cup of boiling water with
1 teaspoon of soda added
1 teaspoon of vanilla
1½ cups of flour
1 cup sugar
½ cup butter
4 eggs
1 teaspoon nutmeg
1 teaspoon cinnamon

Mix the figs, raisins and hot water in one dish and let stand. In another dish mix the sugar, butter and eggs reserving the whites of two. Add the figs and raisins and bake in layers.—Miss A. N., DuMont Hotel, Ottawa, Ohio.

Ginger Bread

1 cup soft sugar
2 eggs (beat separate)
1 tablespoon soda dissolved in a little vinegar
1 cup shortening (mixed butter and lard)
Pinch of salt
4 cups of flour
1 cup boiling water (last)

Mix as thick as sponge cake and grease pans good. Bake in gem pans in a moderate oven.—Mrs. E. S., 101 Hutchison St., Edgewood Park, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Economical Fruit Cake

½ cup butter
1½ cups brown sugar
1 cup sour milk
1 cup raisins
1 teaspoon cloves
3 cups flour
1 teaspoon soda
1 teaspoon cinnamon
½ cup currants
Nutmeg to taste

Cream butter and sugar and add sour milk. Then mix the fruit, flour, soda and spice together thoroughly. Add this to the first mixture and bake in layer cake pans.—Mrs. C. R., Fort Loramie, Ohio.

English Fruit Cookies

2 cups brown sugar
1 cup cold strong coffee
1 level teaspoon soda
1 teaspoon of cinnamon
2 cups raisins
Flour to make a loafcake dough
1 cup butter
2 eggs
1 level teaspoon of baking powder
¼ teaspoon cloves
1 cup of walnuts

Drop in greased pans and bake quickly.—Mrs. J. T. G., Britt, Iowa.

Fruit Cake

½ lb. flour
½ cup molasses
5 eggs
1 lb. seeded raisins
¼ lb. blanched almonds
1 teaspoon ground cloves
1 teaspoon allspice
1 teaspoon grated nutmeg
½ glass brandy
½ lb. butter
½ lb. brown sugar
1½ lbs. raisins cut and seeded
½ lb. citron
½ lb. figs
1 teaspoon ginger
1 teaspoon cinnamon
½ glass of sherry wine

Beat butter and sugar together and add yolks, whites and flour alternately. A teaspoonful of soda in a little hot water. —Mrs. T. N. B., 497 South Main St., Upper Sandusky, Ohio.

Czarina Cream

1 pint stiff whipped cream
½ cup granulated sugar
3 bananas
¼ lb. seeded white grapes
1 package Gelatine dissolved in a cup of hot water
1 bottle of candied cherries

—Mrs. T. N. B., 497 S. Main St., Upper Sandusky, Ohio.

Strawberry Short Cake

1 quart of flour
⅔ cup butter
3 teaspoons baking powder
Milk or water to mix soft

Divide into two or three equal parts and roll out according to the size of the baking tin. Place each layer in the tin, spread melted butter between them only, putting none on the last layer. When baked the layers will separate easily. Spread on each layer, strawberries and sugar, lay on the upper crust and pour over all any juice that may be left. Serve with sweetened cream.—Mrs. W. C. W., 3628 Camp St., New Orleans, La.

Novel Sponge Cake With Fruit

4 eggs
1 cup flour
One scant cup sugar (sifted)
Flavoring

Beat whites of eggs until stiff, fold in sugar, ¼ cup at a time. Add yolks of eggs, one at a time, cutting through each yolk once or twice. Add flour like sugar and flavor when ready for pan. Cake should show streaks of egg yolks and flour. Bake in greased pan three-quarters of an hour in moderate oven. Serve with halves of peaches and cream.—Mrs. M. L. E., Oneida, Ill.

Raised Coffee Cake

2 cups milk
½ cup sugar
1 compressed cake yeast
2 eggs
1 cup raisins
½ cup currants
½ cup citron
½ cup butter
1 teaspoon salt
½ cup lukewarm water
Flour to make a stiff batter

Scald milk, add butter, sugar and salt. When lukewarm add yeast and dissolve in ½ cup lukewarm water, eggs and flour. Lastly add raisins, citron and currants. Let rise over night. In the morning stir up the mixture again and spread in buttered dripping pans to a depth about ¾ each; cover and let rise and then spread over the frosting made as follows: Melt a half cup butter, add ¾ cup sugar and 2 teaspoons cinnamon. When the sugar is about half melted add 6 tablespoons flour. Spread this mixture over the top of cakes and bake from 20 to 30 minutes. This makes two good sized cakes.—Miss C. S., Kyles Lane, R. F. D., No. 1, Covington, Ky.

Pecan Cookies

1 cup pecans
2 cups flour
½ teaspoon salt
1 cup brown sugar
½ teaspoon soda
½ cup melted butter
1 egg, well beaten
½ cup sour milk
1 teaspoon vanilla

Mix and sift flour, salt and soda; add brown sugar and melted butter, egg, sour milk, vanilla, and ¾ of the nut meats. Drop from tip of spoon on a well buttered pan and sprinkle with remaining nuts. Bake in a moderate oven until brown. —Mrs. V. G., 423 Westgate Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

Raisin Drop Cakes

1 cup sugar
1 egg
1 cup raisins
2 teaspoons baking powder
Flavor with vanilla
2 tablespoons butter
1 cup sweet milk or half water
3 cups flour
Pinch of salt

Bake in gem pans or drop with spoon on well buttered tins. Sprinkle with sugar and bake in a hot oven.—Mrs. S. F. B., 706 W. State St., Alliance, Ohio.

The Girl and The Governor

down, slipping quickly and silently by the yacht's side to turn under her mainsail boom and head for shore.

She looked over her shoulder wistfully at the graceful receding shape of the schooner.

"I had a perfect time," she said softly, "even if I did make such a silly of myself, being fished out with a boat hook! I'm not used to salt water," she explained. "I learned in a lake near Mrs. Hume's, and I never swam so far before."

"And they used to call me Nervy Dan," said he with a shrug. "I wish you didn't have to leave," he added boyishly. "And I can't help hating to have you go back alone."

She pursed her lips—soft, red, generous lips. "Wouldn't I make a fine newspaper woman if I couldn't get around alone? But," and her eyes caressed him, "I never thought interviewing could be so delightful. Really I dreaded it."

He had forgotten the interview part of it. Fate and Cupid were playing havoc with the Governor's common sense. The keel grated on the sandy beach, and she leaped lightly overboard, ankle deep, into the water.

"Good-bye," she said, holding out her hand. "And I'm ever so much obliged to you for seeing me—oh, and saving me, too—I forgot," she added.

"Where are you going now?" he inquired, ignoring her gratitude.

She nodded her head in the direction of an ornate [illegible] and white pavilion. "Over there [illegible] hope the people who own it hav[illegible]e down and found I broke in."

"Broke in?" he repeated.

"Yes. I had to dress somewhere—I couldn't right here on the beach. And all the bath houses along here are private. I—I just found a window open, and crawled in and unbolted the door. I guess the people who own it use the back door that opens on the walk. It was awkward," she admitted. "Good-bye again."

"I shall wait here till I see you're all right," he said firmly.

She hesitated. "I—I—if you don't mind please don't. I don't want you to see me when I'm dressed in my every-days. I'm—I told you—I'm so shabby."

Her words hurt him with their candid confession of pride and poverty. "All right," he said unsteadily. "If there's no trouble at the bath house wave to me from the door, and I'll row off—will that do?"

She nodded, and he saw her heavy lashes moisten. Then she resolutely turned away and trudged off. Dan Euston watched her go with a clutch at his heart, a sudden yearning that set him quivering. How strong and firm was her little graceful figure, how proudly she carried her shoulders, how determined was the set of her white neck—and alas! the whole world of disappointments and cruelty of greed and indifference and lust to face alone.

At the door of the bath house she looked back, smiled, glanced within and entered. A moment later she waved to him, and obedient to her wish, he pushed off and pulled slowly back to the yacht. From the deck he watched through the marine glasses, saw her emerge, a little dark-clad shape, saw her move off smartly up the hill in the direction of the trolley that would take her to the station. She was gone!—gone? not a bit of it. She had boarded the yacht, little satin-clad pirate, and taken it—her prize. Everywhere he saw her, either extended on the deck, dripping and half drowned, or rosy and smiling, wrapped in the red and black blanket, hungrily devouring chicken sandwiches, and talking her intimate, unconscious personal chatter.

He recalled her amazing advent, and hung over the rail, looking down at the empty, mocking olive-green water, almost expectant of her sudden reappearance, her wistful eyes, her pleading voice, the long, lithe swing of her white arms in the hurrying tide. He saw her clearly with the eys of his heart, as she half turned from him at the water's edge, ashamed and hesitant, asking him not to wait and see her shabby self—the butterfly gathered again into its ugly chrysalis.

"If I've prayed for a change in my treadmill," he mused, "by George!—I've got it."

When "nervy Dan Euston" made up his mind to a move, he invariably took action. Therefore, when the returning owners of The Picaroon received his announcement that he must return to town, they forebore to contend. They'd sail him around into the bay, and a friendly motor could run him up to the city.

"Another day'd do wonders for you," said his brother. "Wish you'd stay."

"One day did wonders for me," the Governor replied, and there rang in his voice a glee of light-heartedness that had not sounded there since campus days.

Night found him in his own pied-a-aterre apartment, happy to be under the same hot summer sky that stretched above her, happy to be in the same teeming city. Tomorrow must see him rushing to the capitol, but tonight and the morning would be his. He dismissed his secretary, tossed telegrams and mail aside—they could wait for perusal in his state room on the limited the following day—and ordered his motor to make all haste to the "slummy" address, as he whistled to himself a little half-forgotten love tune.

It was ten o'clock when he reached his destination and climbed the many steps of the rookery. At the top he paused and looked about for the room that only boasted a skylight. A knife blade of light gleamed under the door. He knocked.

"Who's there?" demanded a startled girlish voice.

"The life-saver," he answered. "I've come to save you again. I can't let you starve."

She gave a little scream of delight. "Oh, it's you—your Ex——"

With a louder pound on the door he stopped her. "Ex—— that'll do. Hurry up, the motor is waiting downstairs."

"Oh, jolly! jolly! jolly!" said she, "I was 'most stewed. I'm putting on my hat—now!"

She opened the door and stepped out, almost into his arms. Together they descended the gaunt, creaking stairs and emerged into the populous night of the quarter.

"We are strictly incog," he informed her. "And we'll find a remote restaurant."

"Not too brightly lighted," she insisted. "You don't know how excited I feel—so deliciously unrespectable. Why, if Mrs. Hume or my guardian knew I was going out to supper all by myself in a wicked city with a real live man!—but, of course, for a newspaper woman, it's quite all right, isn't it?"

"It's often done, I know," he smiled. "By the way, did you get your story in?"

"Oh, yes!" she glowed. "They were flabbergasted; they said it was grand. I wrote all about swimming out, and how nice you were, and how you saved me with a boat hook, and then rowed me ashore again, and what a wonderfully young man you are, and how awfully magnetic and not a bit set up. How you meet people, man to man, without any frills. The editor had a long talk with me, and asked me questions. He wouldn't believe it at first, then sent for some of the others, and they took what I wrote, reams and reams I wrote, too; and they sent for an artist. They're going to feature me. Oh, your Ex——I mean, Mr. Euston, you've made me, really!"

"Nervy Dan" chuckled. Fate and Cupid still held the bandage over his usually clear-seeing eyes. If the little story of his life-saving excursion could pave her way to a real 'position' he was heartily glad of it. It never entered his love-befogged brain to ask which newspaper she represented. They found a little foreign cafe, with a dim-lit balcony overhanging a transformed and glorified back yard, and there, in the superheated dusk, in the half-light of the Chinese lanterns that illumine the heights of Olympus, they ate Ambrosia that held an after taste of garlic, and drank Nectar that smacked of passe lemons, and were ridiculously happy, as are those who sit at the High God's table.

Then night in the city streets once more, the purr of the motor car, the swift transitions of arc-light and shadow, and

Gained 32 Pounds

And Splendid Figure

Every woman can have an attractive figure, full round bust and shapely limbs. Dr. Whitney's secret has done it for thousands of others and will do it for you.

Mrs. B. W. Abbott, formerly of Boston, now of 473 Eighth avenue, New York City, writes us: "I was very thin when I learned of your treatment four years ago. By following your course I gained 32 pounds and still keep the weight. I am the picture of health with rosy cheeks, just as when I was a girl."

The beauty of this treatment is that you can have a free liberal trial sent in a plain wrapper and test it yourself in the privacy of your own home. The trial treatment alone in many cases has added five pounds. You will realize that a new day has dawned for thin people and that no one need go through life humiliated by a thin, unattractive figure or colorless complexion.

"I was one of the most disheartened women that ever lived before taking Dr. Whitney's Nerve & Flesh Builder, being 5 feet, 6 inches tall and weighing only 106 pounds. Now I weigh nearly 160 pounds," writes Mrs. Newton, of Kansas. Mrs. Nicely, of West Virginia, says: "I gained 45 pounds, bust enlarged 6 inches. It did more than you said it would."

We will gladly send you the trial and book of indorsements from intelligent people everywhere. The trial will prove that you may have as attractive a figure as any one, filling out the hollow places, gain plump, perfect arms, neck and limbs and by special Treatment No. 8 increase the bust measurement from 4 to 8 inches.

If you will drop a post card right away to C. L. Jones Co., 28F Friend Bldg., Elmira, N. Y., you will receive the valuable book, "Beauty, The Figure and Health." Or if it is the first trial you have requested you may send ten cents to help pay packing and postage, and by return mail you will receive a full five days' treatment giving the proof that real color and better health and figure can be yours.

Please say whether you want No. 1 for increasing flesh all over the body for both men and women or No. 8 to develop the bust alone as only one can be sent.

then "Goodnight," "Goodnight" at the lean, mean entrance of the tenement. "Goodnight" again at the landing below the top floor, to which she insisted on tip-toeing alone, and he stood in the gas-smelling semi-darkness of the stairs, and listened to the sound of her closing door.

Morning found him ecstatically happy. He was his own man still for an hour or two, before train time. His own man? No, her own man. 'Nervy Dan,' in the ascendant again, had determined that that question be settled immediately. But The Heights have terrible pinnacles and awe-inspiring precipices. The A. A. A. of Olympus has not as yet chartered the route with plackards, "Danger," "Sharp Turn," "Go Slow." It was the advent of an excited, cursing secretary that showed the explorer a yawning chasm, and informed him that he, Daniel Euston, was at the bottom, looking up.

"What does this mean?" the secretary panted, casting on the table a newspaper where flared a scream headline—"Delilah Gets The Governor's Curls." Olympus crumbled to sulphurous ruin. The Daily Screed! His bitterest enemy, the organ of the opposition, the conscienceless, unscrupulous sheet, owned and controlled by the interests backing Glouter the Grafter! The Screed! Good Lord! —she had represented The Screed.

Dan Euston went cold to his finger tips, the lines in his face deepened, his mouth drew to the thin red line of his fighting grip. He picked up the paper and read. An illustrated full page glared at him. "The Governor lured by a scantily clad siren, had slopped over, given his hand away; openly declared himself. Was going to "get" the impeccable Glouter by fair means or foul. The whole incident had been written up with vitriol and venom in every stroke. Every word he had uttered had been turned and twisted to something worse than unworthy, insinuation and inuendos smirched every line.

Slowly the Governor's face turned white, his jaws set, his mouth hardened.

"Well?" said the secretary.

"You will come with me," said his Excellency, "and any one else you choose—a lawyer, I think. You are to be witnesses of what I have to say in the office of The Screed. And—call up the papers and tell them to send reporters to the Screed Building. I'll have something to say to them at ten-thirty."

Half an hour later, four men were shot up to the top, and editorial floor, of the huge newspaper hive. The uniformed individual who stood guard at the sacred entrance, cast a scared glance at one of the visitors, and inquired his business.

"I know the way," said Nervy Dan. "Billings, sit with the gentleman."

The uniformed attendant found himself abruptly seated on the long bench by the door, his arm in a grip that threatened damage, and his eyes looking into the eyes of a determined young man. After all, the attendant concluded, it was not his place to deny admittance to the Governor of the State. The three men crossed the outer room, where stenographers stared and messengers craned their necks, threw wide the low gate to the main editorial hall. Half a dozen men rose to their feet from various tables. Their glances leaped from the invaders to the glass door of the city editor's compartment. A whippet-faced man snapped an ejaculation and started forward to intercept the striding men. A fat gentleman with a cigar in his mouth, gripped the whippet by the arm, and literally threw him aside.

"Sit down, Mac," he growled. "It was a damned dirty trick, let 'em go to it."

Before the closed door marked "Private," Dan Euston stopped short, his hand raised for silence. From within came a girl's voice, raised in anger. The office force behind stilled their talk suddenly—every word could be clearly heard.

"You lied, you lied!" The girl's voice rose high. "You—you twisted everything I said. You made a low, hateful, wicked attack on him, when I told you he'd saved my life. I'm going out of here, and I'll go to every paper in the city, and I'll tell them the truth!"

"Now, my dear young lady," came the smooth reply, "I'm disposed to——" the words dropped too low to be heard through the partition. But the answer rang through glass, wood and iron, as if no obstruction had been there.

"Oh for an Hour or Two of Sound, Unbroken Sleep"

Twelve by the clock!—still restless!—One!—still awake—"Oh, for an hour or two of sound, unbroken sleep." That's the cry of thousands of men and women all over the land who roll and toss upon their beds, instead of enjoying the sound, refreshing sleep that nature demands. What's the trouble? Insomnia — that dread destroyer of nerves, energy, ambition, health.

Insufficient Sleep Affects Both Mind and Body

and soon brings on old age and its attending ills. If you are a victim of insomnia don't resort to the use of opiates and habit-forming drugs. Narcotics are dangerous and only give temporary relief at best. Strike right at the "root" of the trouble with a mild tonic and sedative, such as Pabst Extract, if you want permanent relief. Pabst Extract contains two valuable medicinal elements — hops and malt combined in just the right proportion to form a complete tonic-food —rich in nerve and blood building properties and easy to assimilate.

Pabst Extract Has a Wonderful Soothing Effect

The soothing effects of the hops quiet and strengthen the nerves. Hops also have an excellent tonic value and stimulate the digestive fluids, thereby assisting Nature to effect a complete restoration of good digestion. This prepares the way for the proper reception of tissue nourishment which is furnished by the extract of nourishing barley malt. The pure extract of rich barley malt is quickly transformed into rich, new blood that checks decline and builds up every part of the body. Then with the bodily functions in a normal condition, sound, refreshing sleep comes as a matter of course and your insomnia is a thing of the past. Don't wait. Take action now.

Order a Dozen Bottles from Your Nearest Druggist

But be sure and insist upon Pabst Extract —The "Best" Tonic—made from choicest hops and barley and fortified with calcium hypophosphite and iron pyrophosphate. Take a wineglassful before each meal and at bedtime. You will be more than pleased with results. You do not have to diet or starve yourself. Just eat what you want of the food you like and let Pabst Extract help the stomach do its work. Try this for a week or two. Then see how you will eat and sleep. Pabst Extract is also recommended for anaemia, dyspepsia, overwork, old age, motherhood and for convalescents.

Like a Dip in the Ocean
Right in Your Own Bath Tub

Fun That Keeps You Cool

Here's an easy way to keep the sweating, sweltering days and nights of July and August from bringing dreaded discomfort.

Here's a way to get relief from the heat without the big expense of spending the whole summer in the mountains or at the seashore.

A quick cool-you-off makes-you-feel-fine washdown in front of a Kenney Needle Shower—right in your own bath tub—is almost as good as a bathing beach at your door.

Beats filling a tub forty ways. Far quicker, far more enjoyable, and far more invigorating—makes your bath downright sport.

Kenney Needle Shower
Fits Any Tub—Needs No Curtain

In these modern days, no bathroom is complete without a shower. It's the only sanitary way to bathe—running water—every drop fresh and clean.

The Kenney Needle Shower is a permanent all metal fixture that is easily attached to any bath tub—fits any style of faucet. Never interferes with the regular use of the tub.

Sends all the water direct against the body—not a drop touches your hair unless you like to duck your head under.

And does away with all need for the clammy, sloppy curtain required by other showers—there is nothing to spoil your fun.

A patented feature makes all the water hug the body and run down into the tub instead of spattering off—guaranteed not to splash.

Only $6 to $25

In every way this new kind of shower is a revolutionary improvement.

Yet the cost complete—with four fine models to choose from—is only $6 to $25. All due to simplicity—to cutting out the curtain and other expensive parts.

Try One On Approval

Any department store, any good hardware or drug store, any good plumber, either has this new kind of shower in stock or can get any model for you, and will let you try it on approval—it won't cost you a single cent unless you are thoroughly satisfied, unless you want to keep it.

Look for big colored picture like above in your dealer's window. Or you can get a shower on trial direct from us.

Free Book—
"Keeping Well by Keeping Clean"

You'll find this free book chock full of sound common-sense about how to keep at your best simply by bathing in running water—simply by getting more fun and invigoration right in your own bath tub. Also tells all about all four models of the Kenney Needle Shower—why they don't splash out, how they are in daily use in thousands of the finest homes and hotels, how you can try any model on approval without risking a single cent.

You have often paid a dollar and up for a book no more interesting than this. Yet your mere request brings it—simply write to the nearest office.

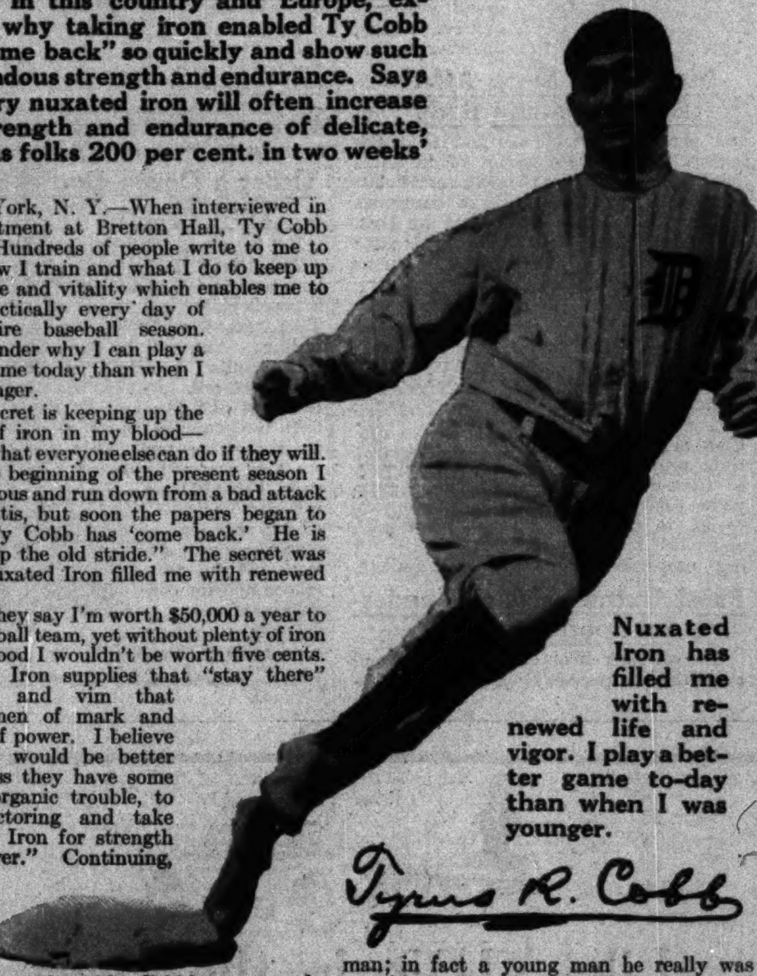
$50,000 Ty Cobb "Comes Back" Nuxated Iron Makes Him Winner—Greatest Baseball

Batter of all time says Nuxated Iron filled him with renewed life after he was weakened and all run down. Supplies that "stay there" strength and vim that makes men of mark and women of power.

Well known physician who has studied widely in this country and Europe, explains why taking iron enabled Ty Cobb to "Come back" so quickly and show such tremendous strength and endurance. Says ordinary nuxated iron will often increase the strength and endurance of delicate, nervous folks 200 per cent. in two weeks' time.



Nuxated Iron has filled me with renewed life and vigor. I play a better game to-day than when I was younger.

Tyrus R. Cobb

New York, N. Y.—When interviewed in his apartment at Bretton Hall, Ty Cobb said: "Hundreds of people write to me to know how I train and what I do to keep up that force and vitality which enables me to play practically every day of the entire baseball season. They wonder why I can play a better game today than when I was younger.

The secret is keeping up the supply of iron in my blood—exactly what everyone else can do if they will.

At the beginning of the present season I was nervous and run down from a bad attack of tonsilitis, but soon the papers began to state "Ty Cobb has 'come back.' He is hitting up the old stride." The secret was iron—Nuxated Iron filled me with renewed life.

Now they say I'm worth $50,000 a year to any baseball team, yet without plenty of iron in my blood I wouldn't be worth five cents. Nuxated Iron supplies that "stay there" strength and vim that makes men of mark and women of power. I believe everyone would be better off, unless they have some serious organic trouble, to quit doctoring and take Nuxated Iron for strength and power." Continuing, Dr. Sauer said: "Mr. Cobb's case is only one of hundreds which I could cite from my own personal experience, which proves conclusively that astonishing power of nuxated iron to restore strength and vitality even in most complicated chronic conditions."

Not long ago, a man came to me who was nearly half a century old and asked me to give him a preliminary examination for life insurance. I was astonished to find him with the blood pressure of a boy of 20 and as full of vigor, vim and vitality as a young man; in fact a young man he really was notwithstanding his age. The secret he said was taking iron—nuxated iron had filled him with renewed life. At 30 he was in bad health; at 46 he was careworn and nearly all in. Now at 50 a miracle of vitality and his face beaming with the buoyancy of youth. As I have said a hundred times over iron is the greatest of all strength builders. If people would only throw away patent medicines and nauseous concoctions and take simple nuxated iron, I am convinced that the lives of thousands of persons might be saved, who now die every year from pneumonia, grippe, consumption, kidney, liver and heart trouble, etc. The real and true cause, which started their diseases was nothing more nor less than a weakened condition brought on by lack of iron in the blood. Iron is absolutely necessary to enable your blood to change food into living tissue. Without it, no matter how much or what you eat, your food merely passes through you without doing you any good. You don't get the strength out of it, and as a consequence you become weak, pale and sickly looking, just like a plant trying to grow in a soil deficient in iron. If you are not strong or well you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five grain tablets of ordinary nuxated iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see for yourself how much you have gained. I have seen dozens of nervous run-down people who were ailing all the while, double their strength and endurance and entirely get rid of all symptoms of dyspepsia, liver and other troubles in from ten to fourteen days time simply by taking iron in the proper form. And this after they had in some cases been doctoring for months without obtainnig any benefit. But don't take the old forms of reduced iron, iron acetate or tincture of iron simply to save a few cents. You must take iron in form that can be easily absorbed and assimilated like nuxated iron if you want it to do you any good, otherwise it may prove worse than useless.

Many an athlete or prize fighter has won the day simply because he knew the secret of great strength and endurance and filled his blood with iron before he went into the affray, while many another has gone to inglorious defeat simply for the lack of iron. —E. Sauer, M. D.

NOTE.—Nuxated Iron, recommended above by Dr. Sauer, is not a patent medicine nor secret remedy, but one which is well known to druggists and whose iron constituents are widely prescribed by eminent physicians everywhere. Unlike the older organic iron products, it is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make them black, nor upset the stomach; on the contrary, it is a most potent remedy in nearly all forms of indigestion as well as for nervous, run-down conditions. The manufacturers have such great confidence in Nuxated Iron that they offer to forfeit $100.00 to any charitable institution if they cannot take any man or woman under 60 who lacks iron and increase their strength 200 per cent. or over in four weeks' time, provided they have no serious organic trouble. They also offer to refund your money if it does not at least double your strength and endurance in ten days' time. It is dispensed by all good druggists

"You dare! Why, you couldn't buy me to stand for it, not for a million. I wouldn't write one word for your lying sheet, if I starve, on a Park bench. I'm going to clear myself. I'm going to him—I won't have him think this of me. I'm going to him——"

"Come here—stop!"

The man's voice commanded, but the door swung open with a rush, and Cicely Fenela, her cheeks a scarlet flame, her eyes flashing green lightnings, stood before them. Behind her a heavily built, pig-jowled man sprang to his feet with an oath.

The Governor reached out, seized him by the coat collar and whirled the astonished editor into the centre of the gaping circle.

"You dog, you! You miserable swine! This is where you get yours—take advantage of that little girl's ignorance and pluck, will you? You'll eat every word of yours; right on your own front page, or by G—— I'll throw up my job, and spend my life beating you."

"Here, I'll have you arrested! That girl there——" the man gasped.

"Don't try to lay it on her!" Euston lifted his enemy off his feet and shook him. The collar tore and the man fell, writhing, purple with fury and humiliation.

"Grab that man!" he shrieked hoarsely. "I'll have him arrested for assault, intimidation, for threatening me. You men of the staff are witnesses!"

The fat man with the cigar installed in his immobile face, looked down at his chief, removed the cigar, which assumed somehow the appearance of a miracle, and spat. " resign," he mumbled in a massive voice. "It was a rotten deal." He turned his back and walked toward the coat hanger.

"If I'm a witness," said a red-headed youth as he turned away, "I'll have to tell the story as she told it—and I'm sorry you made me draw those damned cartoons. Subpoena me? Go ahead."

Cicely found her voice. She had watched the fall of her employer with a look to which the "thumbs down" expression of a Roman vestal would have been pure mercy. Now she turned to the Governor, and the old wistfulness came back to the black-fringed eyes.

"I never said the things he wrote—never—never. I said nothing except what was good of you. I couldn't have——"

"I never thought you did," said the Chief Executive of the State, suddenly putting on his dignity.

The girl clasped her hands with a look of ecstatic relief.

He turned toward the cowed and impotent man, who watched with mixed fury and amazement the departure of his trusted henchmen.

"Blim," said the Governor, "a full retraction in tomorrow's front page—you understand. Come, Cicely."

Out on the street by the gray stone step of the building, gathered an excited group of young men with pencils and notebooks. "The Governor would have something to say"—coming from the offices of The Screed after the spectacular attack in the morning issue. The "something" ought to be worth while. They milled about at the familiar entrance, each with an eye to the marble corridor and the gilt elevator cages within the columned portals. At last the clanging door emitted the impatiently awaited group, the Governor, his secretary, the second assistant district attorney, and a singularly pretty girl in threadbare blue serge, on whom the reporters fell like hungry kites.

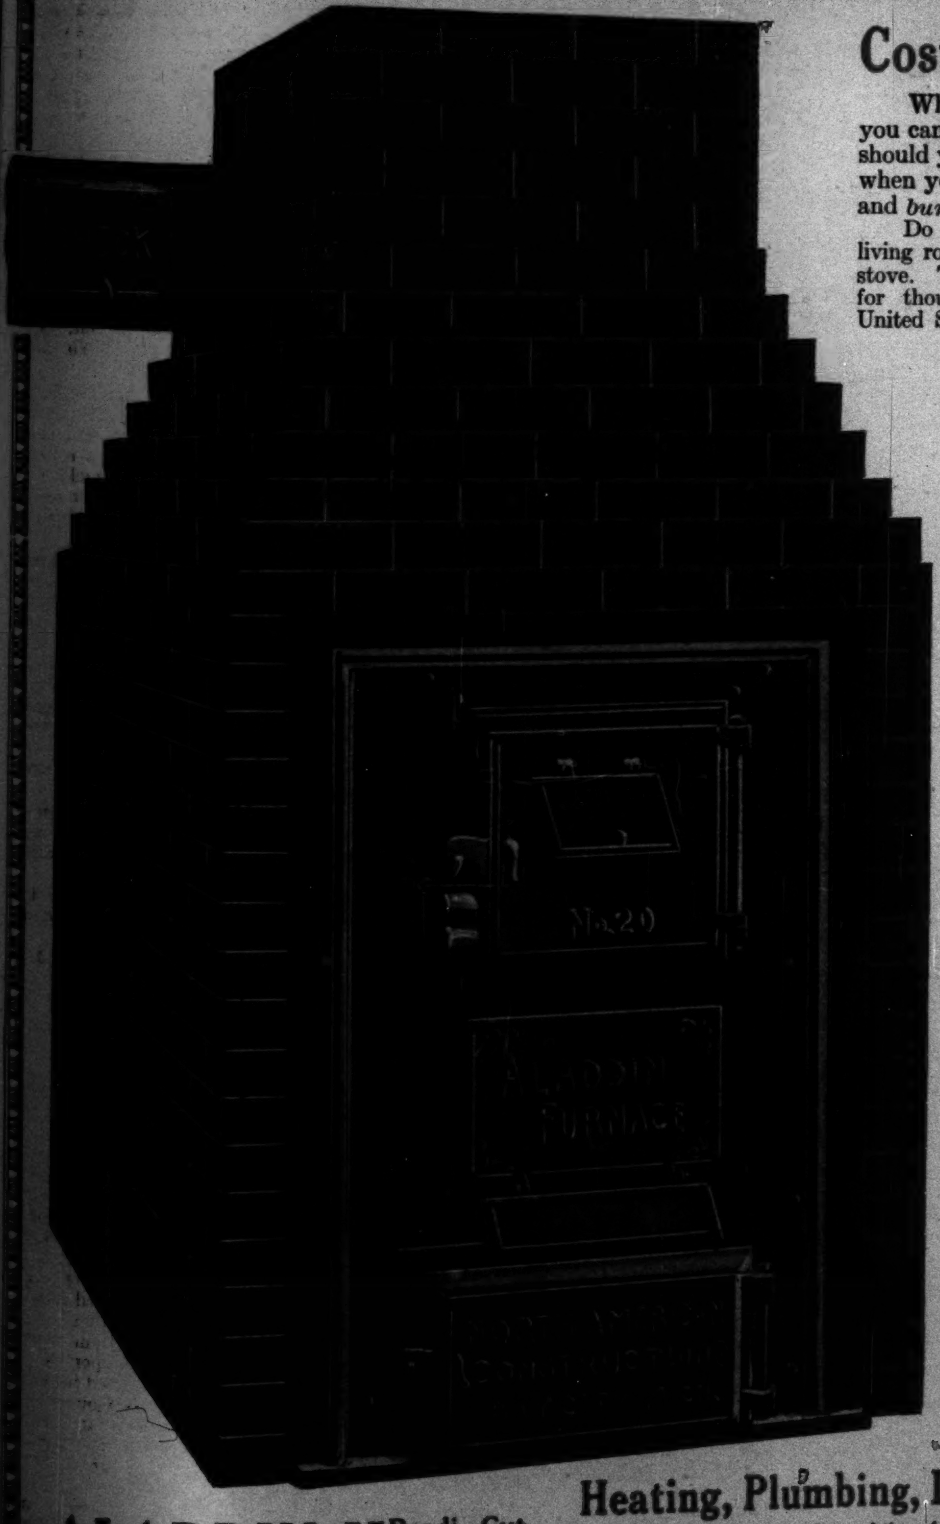
The Governor strode down the steps of the Screed Building, then he paused and addressed the eager press men.

"My secretary will give you details," he said. "You may announce that there will be a retraction on the front page tomorrow, explaining the mistake."

The kites swooped down upon the secretary. The Governor paused, laughed and spoke over his shoulder.

"Boys,"—instantly the youngsters wedged him close, waiting with bated breath and raised pencils. "Here's an item for you. This is Miss Fenela, Miss Cecily Fenela. She's rather a failure as a newspaper woman, but she's going to make a perfect Governess. We're on our way to get the license—now!"

$47.50 ALADDIN Furnace Complete for any Home



Costs Less Than a Base Burner

Why should you pay $55.00 to $70.00 for a base burner when you can secure a complete warm air furnace for $47.50? Why should you operate a base burner that heats only a few rooms when you can install a furnace that will heat your entire house and burn less fuel?

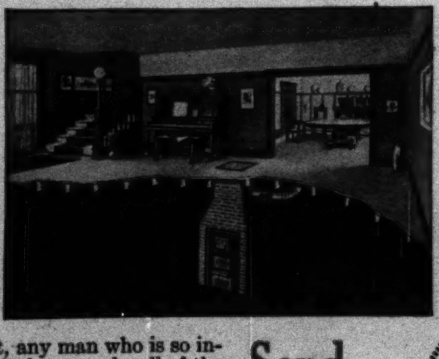
Do away with the unnecessary dirt, dust, smoke and gas in the living rooms of your home Save the extra space that is occupied by a stove. The Aladdin furnace will do this for you as it is doing it for thousands of other satified owners in the coldest parts of the United States.

It will heat your entire home to a variation of less than three degrees—we guarantee this to you. And you can install it yourself and save the cost of skilled workmen.

Heats Entire Home

In our "Aladdin" pipeless furnace, we are offering the very latest departure in warm-air heating. The principle is positive: Cold air is taken thru the base of the jacket and is forced upward thru a large 14x20-inch register placed directly over the furnace. Thru this register the hot air passes with great force to the ceiling and circulates from there to all rooms. The warm air will be so evenly distributed that you will find a variation of less than three degrees between the room where the register is placed and the room farthest away from same, providing, of course, that the doors connecting these rooms are left open to give a free circulation.

Install It Yourself in Your Home



To give you an idea of how simple an operation it is to install one of the "Aladdin's," we show a cross-section view of the Aladdin house, "The Yale," with the furnace installed. We call your attention to the fact that there are no large warm-air pipes to destroy the usefulness of the basement, no wall pipes or fittings to be installed. In fact, any man who is so inclined can install this furnace, do all of the work himself, and the whole operation should not take more than four or five hours. You take no chance when you order an "Aladdin."
